AN ADMINISTRATION ORGAN.

Portland "Telegram")
It was recently noticed in the dispatches that the National Republican had been purchased by President Arthur or his friends and will be termed hereafter as an administration organ. The Philadelphia 'Enquirer' properly propounds the question why the administration should want an organ. Newspapers of the country can generally be relied upon to deal fairly with any possible subject, including, of course, every one in which the administration is concerned. In the old world the governments have their organs precisely as they have their trumpeters;
but here the people would prefer that the administration should be known and honored by what it does, not by what it says. It is true that there are exceptional cases where newspapers are so blinded by partisan zeal as to lead them to distortions of the truth, or to indulge in unwarranted criticism of men and measures; but no administration,
good or bad, ever lacked defenders
in the ranks of the press. If it were good it was certain to have all it needed, nor even honorably conducted, fair opponents of the press
do not mistake facts nor libel men whom they see are doing their duty.
No president, no officer of the government, need feel that he will be denied fair play, or a generous hearing by the newspapers of the country, and no administration feel that it requires an organ for its own particular use. If an administration should do wrong all the excuses or praises of an organ should be of no benefit to it, and if it did right the people would learn it from other newspapers as quickly as from the organ. The best provision an administration could make for itself is a reliance upon the people, based upon a determination to serve the people's interests with all its mental and moral power. Any administration doing that needs nothing more to present its cause aright than the general newspaper press. They would rather praise than blame, and they would have never been known to fail in their hearty, prompt support of any good man or of any good man or of any good policy.

CONKLING'S APPOINTMENT.

"Post-Intelligencer," of 25th.)
By the retirement of Ward Hunt, from the Supreme Bench on account of old age, a vacancy was created and speculation has run high as to who would be appointed to succeed him. Our dispatches this morning announce the appointment of Roscoe Conkling, of New York, as Associate Justice of the United States, to succeed Judge Hunt. The announcement of this appointment will be a general surprise.
Roscoe Conkling, of Utica, New York,
was born at Albany, October 30, 1829, received an academic education; studied and practised law; removed to Utica in 1845; was District Attorney for Oneida county in 1850; was elected Mayor of Utica in 1858; was a Representative in the Thirty-sixth, Thirty-seventh and Thirty-ninth Congresses, and was re-elected a Representative in the Fortieth Congress, but was immediately afterward elected to the Senate of the United States as a Union Republican, to succeed Ira Harris, Republican; took his seat in the Senate in March, 1867, and was re-elected taking his seat March 4, 1873. He was again re-elected in 1879, but resigned in 1881. His term as Senator would not have expired until 1885. Mr. Conkling is the only man that ever refused the appointment of Chief Justice of the United States, so far as we have been able to learn. Grant at one time tendered the appointment to the statesman from New York, but he declined the honor, prefer-ing his seat in the Senate to a life position as Chief Justice.

All Sorts.

THE legislature of Wisconsin is laboring to re-establish capital punishment in that state for murder. It was abolished in that state over twenty years ago, and, although efforts are annually made to re-enact it, they have thus far been unsuccessful. The murder of President Garfield is said to have converted many of the Wisconsin people to the conviction that such fellows
as Guiteau ought to swing.

ACCORDING to the "Post-Intelligencer," the salmon trade of the Pacific Coast last year is presented briefly in the following figures: there was on hand January 1st, 1881, 119,000 cases. The Columbia river pack was about 540,000 cases; the Frazer and Skeena pack, 150,000 cases; the Sacramento river pack, 170,000 cases; the Puget Sound and all other sources, 42,150 cases. Total exports to Great Britain, Australia and the Eastern States, and the home consumption, are estimated at 954, 784 cases. The quantity on hand Jan. 1st 1882, is estimated at 71,355 cases.

NEITHER Cannon nor Campbell will be allowed to sit in Congress at present as delegate from Utah. Campbell, though eligible, received very few votes, while Cannon, the Mormon candidate, and who received a very large majority, will be compelled to admit that there is some respect for the laws of God and man necessary on the part of those who assume to sit in high places in this Christian civilization. The people of Utah will lose but little and will receive a lesson which will teach them to send a man next time who has not openly defied the laws of his country.

In the field of political journalism there are three classes of newspapers: the neutral, which is a sort of political neutrality ready to side with any demagogue, and generally without influence, the strictly partisan paper, though possessing zeal and ability, is nearly helpless in advancing the weal of the party, for the reason that it is known to gild and whitewash everything which the party machine turns out, without regard to character, fitness or right, and the independent paper, which while it may be in full sympathy with the history, spirit and aims of the party, yet refuses to wear the collar of cliques and rings, or to support candidates that have been saddled upon the party by local intrigue and packed conventions.

FINE VESSEL.—A down Sound correspondent, who has been over at Port Blakely looking at the last vessel built there by the Hall Brothers, and who is a judge of ships, writes as follows of her:
"The new barkentine Mrs. Makah, nearly ready for her owners, will be the finest vessel built by the widely-known firm of Hall Brothers, shipbuilders. She will have a full figure-head, with the stern, and her tonnage is 699 46-100. She will not only be a credit to Messrs. Hall Bros., but to Capt. Thompson, who will tread her quarter-deck as commander and managing owner. She will add one more golden nail to the history of Puget Sound, as the place of all other places in the United States for wooden shipbuilding."
—"Post-Intelligencer."

It looks just a little as if Spreckles, the great sugar king of the Pacific coast,
would not suffer so much even if the bill introduced in congress by Congressman Hardy should become a law. Hardy's bill provides that all refined sugars imported from the Hawaiian Kingdom shall pay regular duty, but as Spreckles could import all his sugar in an unrefined state
free of duty and still control the sugar
trade, the bill looks like an effort to mask
the odious feature of the treaty and yet allow the huge monopoly to exist. This monopoly consists in the ownership of Spreckles to 300 of the 800 sugar plantations in the Sandwich Islands, and the virtual control by him of most of the others. In fact, however, the repeal of the treaty will not remedy the whole evil and the benefit to the government from the rescinding will be greater than to individuals. After the abrogation of the treaty the monopoly may continue to exist, but Mr. Spreckles will have to pay duty to the amount of about two million dollars a year, a sum which, by the grace of the government, he now puts into his pockets as profits on the business.

NOTICE.

I am instructed by Professor Spencer F.
Baird, Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, to announce to those persons desirous of sending donations to the National Museum, that I will receive specimens at Port Townsend and forward them from here to Washington free of charge to the donor.

Specimens of stone intended to illustrate quarries of building material, should be in rough cubes not over 5 inches, so as to admit of being finished at Washington of a uniform size of 4-inch cubes. Specimens of Indian stone work of all kinds,
such as were formerly used by the natives;
Spear heads, arrow points, and other archaeological collections usually found in old shell heaps and deserted sites of former dwellings, Indian carved work of all kinds, Minerals, Metals, Fossils, varieties of wood, to show the products of our forests, finished so as to show the grain and texture; Skins of birds and beasts, taken off so as to allow of being mounted; specimens of fish, shells and mollusks, as fresh as possible so as to be fit for preserving in alcohol; in short, everything which will illustrate the products of the country.
All specimens sent to me should give the donor's name and address in full, with particulars as to locality where procured, &c. On arrival here, they will be properly labeled with the name of the person presenting them, and forwarded at once to Washington, where due credit for the gift will be awarded.

Address: JAMES G. SWAN,
Agent U. S. National Museum,

TIMBER ENTRIES.

Persons applying to purchase Timber Lands in Jefferson, Clallam, Mason, Kit-sap, or any other County in the Olympia
Land District, under the Act of June 3, 1878, need not go to Olympia to make proof and pay for their land, but can make such proof before D. W. SMITH, Judge of the Probate Court of Jefferson County, W. T., and thereby save time and money. 48th.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The Vigon cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and,
by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair,

The Vigon is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

The Tribune's Washington special: A close personal friend of the late President Garfield said to a correspondent of the Tribune recently that he had talked with General Garfield several times about the projected inter-oceanic canal, and Garfield said, in substance, on these occasions, that his administration would take a position and enforce it in so far as it had power, that if French, English or German capital constructed the canal, in whole or in part, it should be used exactly as it would be if it was invested in railroad or other international improvements upon the American continent, and that European governments should not acquire any rights, either proprietary or protective, over the canal.

The ship Glenmoray arrived. She picked up a boat with eleven of the crew and two passengers of the steamer Bahama from Porto Rico for New York. John L. Scott, a cabin passenger, says the Bahama left St. Johns, Porto Rico, on the 4th of February. On February 9th she encountered a hurricane which threw the steamer on her beam ends. It was concluded to abandon the ship and two boats were lowered. The captain's boat contained 17 passengers, but it was swamped shortly after leaving the ship, and two or three were seen to swim back to the vessel, but it was impossible to tell if they succeeded in getting on board. Three of the crew refused to leave ship, preferring to take chances by remaining, as the two boats were so heavily loaded. Our boat contained Robert Williams, first officer, Robert Ross, second officer, H. J. Tear and myself, three passengers, two engineers, chief steward, a cook, waiter, messman and fireman.

The Post's Washington special says: There are indications that opponents of Capt. Eads' ship railway project are endeavoring to give new energy to the Nicaragua scheme, with a view not only to defeat Eads' plan, but to advance their own. The general subject of a maritime company has been referred, in the senate, to Miller, of California, as a sub-committee, while in the house Rosencrans has introduced a bill to incorporate the Nicaraguan company with other formidable list of incorporators. Among the names in this list are those of U. S. Grant, E. D. Morgan, Hugh J. Jewett, W. R. Garrison, Frederick Billings, Geo. B. Loring, James R. Keene, E. F. Beale, Dan'l Ammen, George B. Baker, Wm. H. Barnum, A. G. Menocal and U. S. Grant, Jr. These incorporators represent some very large railroad interests and include some very prominent capitalists. They ask congress to guarantee to that company for a period of twenty years, from the time of the completion of the canal, the net proceeds of traffic, which shall not be less than 3 per cent. upon the capital stock, which is to be not less than $50,000,000. In other words, the incorporators request the government to insure them from $1,500,000 to $3,000,000 per annum. Notwithstanding all these antagonistic movements, Eads boasts that he will receive a favorable report from the committee.

A Rock Rapids, Iowa, dispatch of Feb. 16th says: Before the coroner's jury who are investigating the murder of John Lanahan, who was killed while sitting near a window recently, Maggie his oldest daughter, confessed that she did the shooting. She also implicated her mother, her sister Anna and the latter's lover, a young man named Birch. The girl testified that it had been agreed between them some time ago to "put the old man out of the way" at the earliest opportunity. Birch furnished the pistol, and when her father came home from a farmers' club meeting and was about to sit down, she stepped up behind him and fired, killing him instantly. The three arranged the body so as to appear as if some one had shot him through the window, while her sister Anna went out and broke the glass. As to the motive for the crime, Maggie testified that Birch wanted to marry Anna, and her father refused. He also did not provide for them. The mother and other daughter corroborated this testimony. Birch at one time lived with the family and was driven from the house by Lanahan, who suspected him with criminal intimacy with his wife and daughter. All parties implicated are under arrest and the greatest excitement prevails.

Kind Words.

"I saw in de papers de odder day," began Brother Gardner, after carefully wiping the top of his head, "a leetle item 'bout speakin' kind words to our feller men as we trable de highway of life. Dat's easy 'nuff to do, an' a mighty cheap way of scrubbin' 'long, but I doan' want nobody to practice it on me. If I use men right dey will use me right, an' we kin trade kind words. If you meet a man in de gutter, doan' stand on de sidewalk an' tell him dat you are ready to bust wid sorrow, an' dat you solemnly wish he wouldn't do so agin', but stan' him on his feet an' start him for his home to his pore wife an' chil'ren; or hunt for a purleeceman and have him boosted for sixty days. If you meet a pore man whose wife am lyin' dead in de house, doan' wipe yer eyes an' rattle yer chin an' tell him you'd jine de funeral purcheshun if you only had a mule. Walk right down inter yer west pocket fur half er week's wages to help pay fur de coffin an' odder expenses. If you meet a feller man who am out of wood an' flour an' has a broken arm to excuse it, doan' pucker yer mouth an' tell him dat de Lawd will purvide. De Lawd doan' furnish purvisions fur dis market. Instead of droppin' a tear of sorrow on de doahstep, step aroun' to de woodyard an' de grocer's and lay down de cash for de feed an' warm de family fur a fortnight. When I meet a leetle gal who has lost her dollbaby, or a leetle boy who has stubbed his toe, I take 'em up in my arms an' wipe their little noses and sot 'em down wid a handful of peanuts. When I meet a widder who am out of wood, an old man who has bin turned out doahs, or a workin' man who's home am under de shadder of death, I doan' lean on de fence an' look to heaben for relief. If I see got a dollar I han' it out. I lend it or give it or make 'em take it, an' if heaben does anything further dats extra. When you read dat it am easy to speak kind words, jist reflect dat it am de cheapest way in de world to help a neybur. Turnips am quoted at forty cents a bushel; kind words have no value in de market. Let us now attack the reg'lar order of business.

Killing a Catamount.

The Frenchtown, N. J., correspondent of the New York Sun, has been interviewing a local hunter, with the following result:

"I don't mind telling how I did it," said John O. Smith, who recently shot a catamount near here. "You see, my barn is only a short distance from a stretch of woods which lies between here and Stockton. The other morning I went into the barn to get a robe for a wagon. My shot-gun rested against the wall in the harness room. Just as I went in for the robe, I saw a head at the back window which wasn't an ordinary head. Grabbing my gun, I started around the barn. The animal got to the corner before I did, and jumped out at me. I had no time to shoot, for the catamount, that's what it was, had its claws on me before I could do anything. I yelled like a trooper, and reversing my gun struck the critter on the head with the butt. The critter was stunned for a moment and then sort of let go its hold, giving me a chance to move back a few yards and bring the gun to my shoulder. Just then my wife appeared upon the scene, and I yelled to her to run and bring out a pail of hot water—the hottest she had. Then I fired, and hit the cuss square between the eyes. It ought to have settled him, but it didn't. It only made him mad, and he crouched down to jump on me. I dodged, and got in another blow on the animal's head, laying him on his back, but not killing him. My wife had then returned with a pail of boiling hot water, and she threw it at the catamount. Part of it scalded the animal, but the most of it struck me, and took the skin clean off of one of my legs from the knee down. I danced around with pain, and the catamount raised up as though he meant to fight again. I gave him another blow on the head, which settled him. This is the first day I've been out since."

Reining Horses.

One of the most senseless, and yet a very common habit of the American people, is the reining of driving horses so tight as to inflict upon them a great deal of pain, under the mistaken idea that it adds to the stylish appearance of the animal. When people see a horse's head drawn up by the bearing rein, and see him stepping short and champing the bit, tossing his head and rattling the harness, they assume that he is acting in the pride of his strength and fullness of spirit, whereas the animal is really suffering agonies of pain, and is trying to gain by these movements momentary relief. To our view, a horse looks better, and we know he feels better, when pursuing a natural, leisurely, swinging gait. It is as necessary for his head to oscillate in response to the motions of his body as it is for a man's hand to do the same thing. A horse allowed his head will work easier and last longer than one on which a check is used.

Blinds are another popular absurdity in the use of horses. They collect dust, blind the eye and are in every way a nuisance. A horse that cannot be driven with safety without them should be sold to a railroad grader. No colt should be broken to them.

"Gracious me!" exclaimed Sarah, looking into the glass, "how awfully my hair looks. I haven't combed it for two days." "Why, Sarah," said Lydia, "is it possible? I never should have suspected it. It looks as well as I ever saw it." Sarah didn't know whether to feel complimented or insulted.

A DEADLY SORROW.

"The finest system of light-houses on any coast," said William Read, captain of the English steamer, Flintshire, as we passed the last light-house on the Florida reefs, on our way to Liverpool, from Galveston, Texas.

We were pacing the quarter-deck, when Captain Read made this remark, and I had just taken my last look at the shores of my native land, that lay dimly in the distance, bathed in a crimson and purple hue, under the soft beauties of a declining December sun.

This conversation led to personal reminiscences on my part, and one of them that I will relate made a marked impression on the mind of the captain as the scene itself, in stern reality, made an everlasting one on mine.

Some years ago, Cortina, then a general in the Mexican service on the Rio Grande, in the Zona Libre, encouraged cattle stealing from Texas. His armed guerrillas, in strong force, would cross the river above Brownsville, invade the United States territory, fifty or sixty miles, and on their return, drive before them all the cattle and horses they could find on the unprotected ranges to a designated ford, where they would be crossed into Mexico, and sold to the highest bidders in the small interior towns.

To defeat the designs of these bold raiders and protect the property of American citizens, a company of Texan rangers, under command of Captain McNelly, was put in service on the Rio Grande.

Having been a ranger against Cortina, in 1859, I again enlisted to fight my old enemy.

On a July morning we encamped a few miles north of Santa Rita Ranch, in a bend of the tortuous Rio Grande. I had just finished drinking a cup of coffee and was smoking a fragrant cigarette, looking through the chapparal toward the Mexican side of the river, when I heard the jingling of steel spurs, and hastily turned. Captain McNelly rode toward me. He spoke in quick tones:

"Prepare three days' rations; take Fairfax with you. Skirt Palo Alto, cross the Arroyo Colorado, above Mesquite Spring and rendezvous at the Spanish dagger-tree, that is surrounded by cactus. Lose no time. Twenty Mexicans have crossed the Rio Grande. We must learn their destination and attempt to destroy them. They are under the command of Pancho Barrillo Cortina's most desperate cattle thief. If they cross the Arroyo Colorado at that point, gallop toward Los Indes, on the eastern bank of the stream. We will meet you there."

In a few minutes, Fairfax and myself were riding beneath the moss-covered trees, through which patches of sunshine only stole at intervals, en route to the trail we were to follow across the prairie to the rendezvous on the copper-colored Arroyo Colorado, that during the summer months lies sluggish and poisonous under the rays of a fierce Southern sun.

My companion was taciturn. He had been with the command but six months, but in that time had shown himself to be a man of courage, education and a thorough soldier. His history was unknown. He met the company at Ranch Santa Rosa, and applied for membership. Being well armed and mounted, Captain McNelly immediately enrolled, and from that time on he gained in the good opinion of the whole command.

Fairfax was a man of slender form, about twenty-five years old, and nearly six feet high. His hair was black, face pale and handsome, eyes dark and luminous, and head with a width of ridge that Lavater said was worth a kingdom.

As we crossed the Arroyo Colorado, reached the designated rendezvous, it was just sundown, and the prairie, as far as Palo Alto, was covered with a light suffron tinge, and an xanthic beauty seemed to pervade the air even to the deep shadows that lay slumbering under the tall trees margining the old battleground.

With a field-glass we surveyed Palo Alto, and soon saw advancing from its depths a body of armed men, their guns and steel accoutrements flashing as they emerged from the shadow of the wood.

They proved to be Cortina's raiders, under command of Pancho Barrillo, and encamped at Mesquite Spring on the western side of the Arroyo Colorado, in a dense chapparal, about two hundred yards from our rendezvous.

After the moon rose, they made small fires, and from their actions we knew they would not move until that luminary was high in the heavens. It was our duty to ascertain their route after leaving the spring, and dismounting, we spread our blankets on the ground, lay down upon them, and, with lariats in hand, let our horses graze on the short grass that grew on the almost barren shores of the saline river.

As we lay thus at least two hours, watching the constellations unfold their mystic beauties, listening to the neigh of wild mustangs in the distance, and the almost human cry of the coyote wolf, the silence of my companion became oppressive. I looked toward him and saw his clear-cut, handsome face in the light of the moon, and I imagined a look of agony rested upon it. I broke the silence:

"Fairfax!"

He turned suddenly, as if aroused from a dream, and said, in a quick tone: "Your pardon! I was thinking of Florida."

"Is Florida your native State?" I asked.

"No, sir, England—I was born in Windsor. You shall hear my history, for I have a presentiment of a coming evil."

He told me of the following strange story, which, with its surroundings, filled me with consternation, and made an impression on my mind which can only be effaced by death:

"At the age of fifteen I left England and went to Florida to live with a wealthy uncle. Adjoining my home resided a widow lady with a daughter—Laura. Laura and myself were frequently thrown into each other's society, and a passion strong and deep—at least on my part—sprang up between us.

"We were inseparable, and when I reached the age of twenty, she being sixteen, we had sworn only to live to be united. We read classic tales to each other, and when the 'Sorrows of Werther' were traced line by line, she would shed tears of grief. Ours seemed an ecstasy of love and passion that could never die.

"My uncle concluded to give me a professional education, and I bade adieu to Laura and all I loved in Florida, and went to Philadelphia, where I studied with arduous two years, and returned to my home a doctor.

"Without asking any questions I left for Laura's house, full of love and hopeful anticipation. On reaching there I saw Laura's face looking from a window that was edged with honeysuckles and crowned with morning glories. Her face, with long black hair hanging negligently before her breast, seemed the fairest on earth to me. I tried to clamber up the vines as I saluted her with a kiss from my hand.

"When she saw me her face grew paler and she looked at me with a cold stare, saying:

"You come too late. I am married to your enemy. Do not let your sorrows be as deadly as those of poor Werther."

"She laughed a low, mocking laugh as her face disappeared from the window, and I thought I heard a fall.

"That was my death-wound. I fled back over the hommocks of grass that edged the swamps, and at the door met my little niece—Jessica—with an armful of mulberry leaves. She said, in her child tones:

"Uncle, I go to feed the silk worms; they are hungry."

"I went to my room and sat with my face to a great bay window that opened upon a meadow slope. The moon rose as bright as it is now, as I brooded over my terrible loss. Suddenly I saw Jessica, led by Laura, at the window. The child tapped upon the glass, saying:

"I have fed the silk worm!"

"Then Laura put her white face to the window, and with a cold smile, as before, said:

"Do not let your sorrows be as deadly as the sorrows of Werther!"

"I sprang to my feet and dashed into the meadow. No one was there. I went to the chamber of Jessica. She was slumbering in her little bed. My superstitions were aroused. Again I crossed the hommocks, and as I neared the house of Laura I met my enemy, who hoarsely said, as if he menaced me:

"Laura is dead. She spoke last to you. Why did you come here?"

"I turned on my heel and walked away. They said Laura fell dead after she told me not to let my sorrows be as deadly as those of Werther.

"Since that day my life has been a broken one. At times the agony has been so deep in my heart that I take my pistol thus—and Fairfax raised his weapon, cocked it, and put the barrel to his temple—and feel like ending my sorrows as Werther did his."

A loud report followed; blood flowed from Fairfax's right temple, and his fine face, disfigured with powder and blood, was turned toward the stairs.

I leaped to my feet. The Mexicans were moving, alarmed by the shot, and sparks of fire flew into the bright moonlight, as the brown thieves rode toward me and my dead companion over the live embers of their camp fires.

It was the work of a moment. Seizing my gun, gathering in close folds my hair lariat, I sprang into the saddle, and, with Fairfax's horse following me, sped along the bank of the Arroyo Colorado and into the saline basins that for months had lain dry and frosty under the heat of the sun. No spectacular display could equal the scenes that stretched before me, as basin after basin of saline crystallization came up in panoramic form through the speed of my fleet horse.

Looking back, I saw in the distance the diamond-like flames that came from my pursuers as the horses' feet ploughed over the gleaming domain. They seemed to be gaining on me, when in shrill tones I heard the challenge:

"Halt! Who goes there?"

In a moment I was with my companions. A volley from their rifles checked the head-long speed of the guerrillas, who were soon spurring their horses in the direction of the Rio Grande, which river they crossed the next morning at sunrise.

We buried the young Englishman on the bank of the Arroyo Colorado, at the foot of the lone Spanish dagger-tree, beneath the tender shadows of the broad leaved cactus, and marked the place of his rest with a cross made from the chapparal that hides from the thirsty traveler the cool waters of Mesquite spring.

"Quite a strange story," said Captain Read. "Was he insane?"

"It was a deadly sorrow," I replied.

Mabel is sitting at the piano, and she is singing a song. The song says he is waiting in the gloaming. Mabel appears to be giving herself dead away. He is not waiting for her in the gloaming at all. He has just drawn a bobtail flush, and he is wondering whether he had better pull out or stand in on a bluff. Mabel would touch a responsive chord in his bosom if she were to sing take back the hand which thou gavest.—[Denver Primer.]

Napoleon III. and Carlotta.

When Maximilian and the Princess Carlotta landed at Vera Cruz in 1864, they only numbered three hundred and fifty thousand adherents among a population of seven millions. It was little likely that the new government should meet with sympathy. The constitution was overthrown, the national institutions destroyed, the country devastated with fire and sword, and thousands of inhabitants shot down in cold blood for merely resisting the invaders. The Emperor Maximilian was perhaps as much the victim of his own ambition as of intriguing speculation. For years, according to his own showing, he had dreamed of empire. In his memoirs he writes "how agreeable it must be to stand amid bowed heads and to feel one's self supreme as the sun in the firmament." To the last, edged on by his clerical advisers and by terrorism, he tried to obtain his hollow dignity of Emperor, and to the last he looked for support from Napoleon III.

The Mexican affair, however, turning out a losing game, Maximilian was left to his fate. The Archduke had married a Belgian Princess, granddaughter of Louis Philippe, a lady of high spirit, ambitious, yet, we must believe, imbued with romantic notions of her husband's mission. The unhappy Princess, seeing at last that her husband's only chance of help lay in Napoleon III., sailed for Europe, landed at St. Nazaire on the 8th of August, and that same night started for Paris. On the morning of the 9th she arrived at the Grand Hotel. The Court was at St. Cloud, and on demanding an interview of the Emperor, she was informed that His Majesty was ill and could not see her. The two Emperresses, however, exchanged visits, and, arriving at St. Cloud, the Empress Charlotte insisted on being received into the imperial closet. Then ensued, we are told, a scene which must have haunted Louis Napoleon to his dying day. When to prayers, tears, and agonized supplications on her part, his only reply was a coldly reiterated "It is useless to insist, madame; not a crown, not a soldier," the Princess whom such cruel anxieties had already brought to the verge of madness, gave way to frenzied utterances. Rising from her abject position as suppliant, she drew herself up to her full height, and with a kind of inspiration prophesied to the tyrant the destruction of his dynasty, and cursed him to his fate.

"Ah!" she cried, "I know you! Avenge yourself on the grand-daughter of your benefactor, Louis Philippe, who rescued you from the scaffold and from want." The Emperor turned pale, and she went on: "You hope, do you not, to get possession, by means of your police, of all the letters and papers that witness your pledges to my husband? They are in a place of safety." After predicting his downfall, she added, tears choking her utterance: "May the curse of God rest on you as on Cain!" and then quitted the palace. Four years later, on the declaration of war with Prussia, Napoleon III., not venturing to show himself in the streets of Paris, departed from the Palace of St. Cloud, wherein this interview with the Empress Charlotte had taken place. By an irony of fate, he entered the railway at the little station in the park, called the "Gare des Fetes" (the Station of Fetes.)

Labouchere on Poisons.

Labouchere, the witty London editor of Truth, declares that those who have at last got reconciled to enjoying most poisons freely—tobacco, beer, wine, spirits, coffee—need have no scruples lest they should injure their health, or shorten their lives or set a bad example; for a close attention to medical opinion will, if they entertain such notions, entirely reassure them. "I notice," says he, "the poisons, like fashionable health resorts, come up and go out just as the medical imagination of the popular craze may happen to jump. One year we are told how a drop of tobacco juice kills a cat; the next year beer brings rheumatism, wine is responsible for gout, spirits for insanity, and coffee for bile. Tea was my last stronghold. Sir Henry Thompson has informed the world that afternoon tea would not be so bad if it were not for the cream taken with it. So I left off cream and was contented with milk, when, to my horror, I learned from another distinguished medical authority that tea would be even wholesome and nourishing if people always took cream in it, but that milk in tea sets up a peculiarly acid fermentation within, most inimical to digestion. The last shock was tremendous; but, upon recovering from it, I determined to eat, drink, smoke and be merry, whatever doctors might write about my food and my liquor. Since I have acted on this resolution my health has been excellent.

President Arthur is to drive the most elegant turnout Washington has ever seen. The landau is of new and novel design from Brewster's, and painted a dark, mellow green, relieved with enough picking out in red to show the outline without being too conspicuous. The trimmings are of morocco and cloth, the cushions and doors being faced with heavy lace. The harness is heavily mounted with plain silver. The dress blankets are of heavy dark green kersey, and the coachman's lap robe of green English box cloth. These are all ornamented with the President's monogram. The lap robe for the inside of the carriage is Labrador otter, beautifully lined with dark green, and having the monogram "C. A. A." worked in silk. The horses, two in number, are magnificent animals. They are mahogany bays, five-year olds, sixteen hands high, have fine flowing manes and tails, and are matched almost to a hair.

PERSONAL AND GENERAL.

Chinamen don't rock the cradle; they make the sky rocket.

Tramways are projected between many villages in Italy on the roads built by the old Romans.

The latest aesthetic slang the ladies use when reproving their admiring gentlemen friends is, "You flatter too awfully perfectly much."

A shoemaker advertises to make temperance boots and shoes, or, in other words, boots and shoes that are never so tight as to be disagreeable.

"Don't you think that Miss Brown is a very sweet girl?" asked Henry. "Oh, yes, very sweet," replied Jane; "That is to say, she is well preserved."

There is a prevailing superstitious terror of the number thirteen. That's probably the reason that the small boy has a terror of his mother's slipper.

General Butler says one of the two things he regrets is that he never hanged an editor. And this after all the free advertising the newspapers have done for him!

As the average salary of Government clerks in France is only about $500 a year, ambitious young men in that country are seldom paralyzed with a craze for office.

It is thought that "Clara Belle," of the Cincinnati Enquirer, is a man. No man, however, could write so intelligently of woman's dress, except, perhaps, Jefferson Davis.

"A little girl, seeing two love birds billing and cooing, was told that they were making love. "Why don't they marry?" she asked; "then they would not make love any more."

Any time during the first two weeks of February will be the proper occasion for predicting a late spring. The later you can make it the more you will please folks who don't eat onions.

Nellie Grant Sartoris who has been visiting the daughter of Surgeon General Barnes (who was one of her bridesmaids) in Washington, retains the charms of her girlhood days.

The Ilion (Herkimer County) Citizen remarks: "Some wealthy Boston tanners have purchased the hemlock bark on 18,000 acres of timber land in the Adirondack region, and propose to strip the trees. We thought the legislature had contracted to preserve the great northern wilderness for the purpose of promoting the rainfall of the State, and of supplying the Erie Canal and Hudson river with water enough to float boats. We can't spare hemlock bark for tanning purposes any longer. Let some one invent a substitute."

Superstitious people are relating of the late Mrs. Caroline Richings-Bernard that a few months ago, on the thirteenth anniversary of her wedding, she gave a dinner party at which there chanced to be thirteen persons present, and that the occurrence made an unpleasant impression on her mind; that on the 13th of a month she signed a contract which was one of the most unfortunate business transactions of her life, and by which she lost about $60,000, and that she was sick thirteen days, and died at the close of the 13th day of January.

Port Townsend HOSPITAL

Port Townsend, W. T.

The above institution having been placed on a permanent footing, as the United States Hospital for Marine Patients on Puget Sound, the proprietor takes pleasure in announcing that no pains or expense will be spared in ministering to the comfort and convenience of private patients.

This is the largest General Hospital north of San Francisco, and by far the most complete in equipment. It has been thoroughly refitted and furnished. Its general wards have accommodations for about one hundred patients and are peculiarly adapted for cases requiring the most careful treatment and constant supervision at little expense. Those who desire them will be furnished with private rooms, entirely separate and distinct, at a slight additional cost.

The attention of Mill owners, and those interested in shipping, is called to the fact that seamen suffering from contagious diseases will be treated outside the Hospital without expense to the vessel.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

So Grant is to be retired on the army pay roll. That will leave the next Republican presidential possibilities to be fought out by Blaine and Arthur.

It is now suggested that Guiteau be hung in effigy on the 30th of June next, in every city and town in the United States.

The Walla Walla "Statesman" says the newspaper business is being greatly overdone in Eastern Washington, and predicts a speedy failure for several of the small fry papers of that section.

COMMUNICATED.

EDITOR ARGUS:—A card in your issue of the 24th inst., gives notice that persons applying to purchase Timber lands need not visit the Land Office at Olympia to make application, &c.

The Department provides the proper blanks which can be filled up by any one, but "must be verified by the oath of the applicant before the Register or Receiver."

Hoping you will insert this for the benefit of all interested, I am dear sir, Yours respectfully, P. P. CARROLL.

Olympia, W. T., Feb'y 27, '82.

Our friend has evidently misunderstood the import of Judge Smith's advertisement, which states nothing whatever about making application other than at the Land office—but says expressly that parties applying "need not go to Olympia to make proof and pay for their land."

DURING the past week two very interesting entertainments have been given in town. On Friday evening last the Good Templars gave an open temperance meeting that was accounted fully up to their uniformly successful efforts in this direction in the past.

MR. P. Kane, head waiter at the Cosmopolitan Hotel, and a Mr. Berry, of the U. S. Revenue Marine service, will take charge of the restaurant next door to the Post Office about the last of the present month.

FOR downright stupid blunders, the last legislature certainly takes the palm among all the choice collections of Washington Territory wisdom. The latest that has come to light is in reference to the terms of district court at this place.

se pence will be that cases must be hurried through, points involving the rights of parties, (and perhaps hundreds of dollars) will be passed over without due and proper consideration—and perhaps some of the business will either have to lie over till next term, or be attended to at Seattle. It must have been a serious oversight, to say the least—and our representative a lawyer too.

BRIEF LOCAL ITEMS.

MARCH.

Yes, you shall have a look at that daily.

SHERIFF Miller is busy assessing the county.

JUDGE Jacobs came down from Seattle on Wednesday.

The Lenten season began on Ash Wednesday, the 22d ult.

COPIES of the laws of 1881 have been sent out to county officers.

SALE of seized goods by the Custom's authorities next Wednesday.

THE Dispatch took a number of passengers to Clallam county this week.

ALL county taxes not paid on or before Tuesday last became delinquent.

DID you attend the Presbyterian entertainment Tuesday night? Wasn't it splendid?

When the spring opens there will be employment for a large number of laborers hereabouts.

POTATOES are worth eating these days. They are commanding 85 cents to 95 cents per bushel in Seattle.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Lotzgasell, of Dungeness, came up this week—also Mrs. H. Hoffman, of the same place.

Mr. T. M. Hammond is erecting a commodious two-story residence on Madison street near Washington.

Mrs. T. H. Cann, fashionable milliner, of Seattle, is in town exhibiting her wares, for sale at the Central Hotel.

We have received Painter & Co's Illustrated Annual, from Frisco. They are evidently "alive and kicking" yet.

Mr Bullene came down the Sound on Monday—and now expectant ones are listening for saw-mill matters to "crack" right away.

MESSRS. N. D. Hill & Son want it understood that they keep a full stock of the very best in their line constantly on hand. Read their new "ad."

Mrs. F. Roberts, of Dungeness, came up from there on Tuesday, to be placed under medical treatment for dropsy, with which she has been afflicted.

AMONG the passengers on the Dispatch from San Juan County this week we noticed Col. May, of Orcas Island, a Mr. Adams, and Mr. Chapman formerly of this place.

PRISONERS wishing to buy or sell improved or unimproved real estate will do well to call on J. A. Kuhn, Esq., of this place. Read his advertisement inserted elsewhere.

THE next quarterly meeting of the M. E. Church on the Port Townsend charge will be held at Dungeness on the 25th and 26th of this month, Rev. A. Atwood, Presiding Elder, officiating.

NEXT Monday our district court will convene. The docket is long enough to occupy lots of time, and it suggests the transfer of a good many dollars from the pockets of stubborn litigants to those of the wily "limbs of the law."

MESSRS. Jackman & Terry brought about a dozen beehives this week from Victoria—the finest we have seen in the market here for a long time. It is creditable to their enterprise, and will be appreciated by their patrons and the eating public generally.

THE sonorous tones of the new Presbyterian church bell last Sunday woke the echoes and reverberated in Port Townsend air for the first time. This bell is indeed a valuable acquisition to the church property of our Presbyterian friends, and seems to have fully met their expectations in all respects.

AMONG every available house in town is occupied, either for business or dwelling purposes. If some of those who have been talking so loudly about erecting tenement houses would only get to work at it, they would find a monthly rental awaiting their outlay at once.

ON Saturday last the steam tug Mattiek took on board a new planing machine at this place, for use in the saw-mill at Port Discovery. The machine is intended especially for planing square timber, and will plane four sides of a stick at once. It is an embodiment of latest improvements in that line.

CUSTOMS CHANGES.—We learn that Inspector Jas. Price is to be transferred from Victoria to Neah Bay; that Inspector Arthur Attridge will take Mr. Price's place at Victoria, and that Inspector Ed. Leyman until recently established at Neah Bay, will assume the duties of Mr. Attridge's position here. Collector Bash says he contemplates making changes from time to time, as the necessities of the service may require, in order to secure the greatest efficiency.

NOT LOST.—The sloop Francis was not lost last week, as was feared, when she went ashore. From Capt. Garfield, who was in command, we learn that the sloop dragged her anchor during his absence and drifted out of the mouth of Sequim Bay, going ashore at Rocky Point just above. Upon learning of the accident, Capt. Garfield secured a crew of men and proceeded at once to the scene of disaster where they launched the luckless craft. Her injuries are reported to be comparatively slight, considering that she was on the beach about 24 hours.

OLYMPIA has a law and order society, who are attempting to see that the Sunday law is enforced. They lost their first lawsuit, but the "Standard" intimates that another test will be made soon. We always thought that Olympia was particularly a law abiding town. Port Townsend, with all the bad reputation it used to have, respects the Sunday law with due and universal observance. Some of our citizens are opposed to the law, but be it said to their credit they do not evade it.

HON. R. C. Hill, since removing to this place to live, has purchased the fine residence on the hill, known as the "Hunt property." It was built by C. C. Bartlett, and was subsequently purchased by J. J. Hunt. It has been occupied for some time past by B. S. Miller. The location of the property is an eligible one, and its value is perhaps second to none in town.

WE learn from a gentleman just down from the northern portion of Whatcom county, that a great deal of development is looked for in the vicinity of Sehome during the coming summer. The McPherson colony are preparing to branch out into various industries with a vim.

FARMERS who have potatoes to sell this spring are habitually in a good humor. Prices in the retail trade have already reached $1.85 to $1.95 per cwt. Potato crops, and especially their prices, are uncertain things—but when they are good they count.

THE side-wheel steamer Idaho, recently brought around from the Columbia river by Capt. Messegue, has taken the place of the Geo. E. Starr, and is temporarily on the route between this port and New Tacoma, under command of Capt. Orr.

LEAVE your order for that "ad." to be inserted in the Daily ARGUS soon to appear. You will get much more benefit from the same money invested than from its insertion in the weekly—especially if you are after the local trade.

MR. Frank A. Bartlett, of the firm of C. C. Bartlett & Co., is going to San Francisco by the steamer of the 10th inst. His mission will be the purchase of a Spring stock of goods to fill up that splendid store building.

TO BE BUILT.—We learn from a reliable source that the proposed extension of the P. S. Telegraph Co's line from Port Discovery to Port Angeles will be completed within the next ninety days.

MR. Thos. Knoph, of Dungeness, announces to creditors of, and all persons having claims against, the estate of B. G. Hotchkiss, to present the same within a year, or be forever barred.

ON 23d inst., a grand masquerade ball was given at LaConner. About forty couples were present. Mr. M. B. Cook got up the supper. It was pronounced a success all round.

THE many friends of Hon. H. A. Webster will be pleased to know that he has recovered sufficiently to return home. He is expected here to-morrow on the Elder.

JUDGE N. Meagher, of Port Angeles, was in town last week and called on us. Mr. Robert Cooper, one of the keepers of the Tatoosh light, came up this week.

THE March number of that splendid magazine, "The Californian," has come to hand. It certainly is one of the most interesting publications in the country.

MR. S. L. Mastick, of the firm of S. L. Mastick & Co., of Port Discovery, has been back at his saw-mill for the last two weeks, superintending its operations.

MR. Torjusen is erecting a frame building along side of the Franklin House to be used, we learn, for saloon purposes.

HON. H. W. Scott, editor of the "Oregonian," has gone with his wife to California, for the benefit of the latter's health.

MR. Jas. Morrison, of LaConner, will reopen the saloon on Union wharf next week.

Have Winter's Balsam of Wild Cherry always at hand. It cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, Croup, Influenza, Consumption, and all Throat and Lung Complaints. 50 cents and $1 a bottle.

Under the enterprising ownership of Mr. Torjusen the Franklin Hotel building is being rapidly transformed into quite a different looking structure. The old fire-places have been removed and new flues put in for stoves; a new floor has been laid in part of the lower rooms, while paint, paper, etc. is being freely used. A substantial new addition has been erected on the east side, and what will be done with the rooms on the second floor will more fully appear when the basement is finished. A thorough renovation, however, is in progress from bottom to top. The building being erected by Mr. T. on the west side is 20x22 ft., single story.

"PEOPLE WE MEET."

BY MAUD MILLER.

How many the people we meet on each day. Some homely, some handsome, Some gruff and some gay; Fair ladies out shopping, And dear children sweet; Ah! as well to take notice Of people we meet.

The merchant so busy, The brisk walking clerk, The pretty young shop girl, All hasting to work; The friend of a lifetime, The friend of a year, On the thoroughfare common You see them all here.

"THE OTHER ONE."

It was a distinctive title, which was almost as much her name as the Antoinette inscribed upon the baptismal register. People talked of the beautiful Miss Hammond, the talented Miss Hammond, and the other one; or of the eldest Miss Hammond, the youngest Miss Hammond, and the other one; or varied this by the brunette, the blonde, and the other one; and I am sure all the large circle of acquaintance who thus distinguished them will ridicule the idea of making a heroine out of "the other one."

Looking at her, upon the dreary December night which opens my story, you will see there is but little outwardly to mark her as fitted for the part. The slender little figure, so neatly draped in pretty blue merino; the glossy braids of brown hair, with no flower or jewel to decorate their profusion; the delicate complexion, soft brown eyes, and sweet flexible mouth, are each graceful and winning; but glancing from her to her older sisters who stand very near her, you will be forced to admit their great advantages. Leonie, the tall, superb brunette, in her black lace dress, gleaming here and there with rich crimson knots of ribbon, her hair drooping low and crowned with crimson flowers, is Juno like and bewildering in her regal beauty; while Lucy, the blonde, tall too but exquisitely ethereal in her floating robes of white, with starry jasmine twisted in her short curls, is only second to Leonie in loveliness.

Mamma, tall and dark, with worldliness written upon every feature of her handsome face, is in gala dress too, for to-night one of the growing festivities of the season is waiting the arrival of the Misses Hammond, and Mrs. Hammond always accompanies her daughters. Nettie, of course, was invited, but Nettie don't care much for parties, and has chosen to wait at home for papa; for papa, being a physician in full practice, has a fashion of popping in at all sorts of eccentric hours, and Nettie has noticed that he seems to relish his coffee or dinner more, when she hovers about him to pay personal attention to the sugar or salt question; to ask questions of the day's duties; to pepper his dinner with rattling anecdotes of home; or sympathize with him over some newly discovered case of distress. Leonie and Lucy have declared it a horrid shame that she won't go; her mother has added that Nettie has queer notions, and she has had her own way in the matter.

As soon as the carriage rolls away with the party goes, Nettie tidies the pretty sitting-room, and takes out her knitting, a pair of wonderful crimson and brown comforts for papa's wrists. She has not long to knit; for by nine o'clock she hears the gig drive up, and tosses aside needle and wool, to fly down stairs and greet her father.

"Come in the sitting-room, papa," she cries, drawing him forward; "it is so nice and warm there, and I have told Martha to bring up your supper, so you won't have to go down again."

"Rest all out?" asked the doctor. "Yes; gone to Mrs. Mosley's, the large party, you know, that we had cards for last week."

"Why didn't you go?" "Oh, I didn't care for it. Three of us are enough, and where Lee and Lou are, they won't miss me. Oh father, Leo was superb to-night; she had her hair dressed in the new fashion, with crimson flowers all woven in among the braids and drooping on the neck. She wore grandma's diamonds, too, and her dress was very becoming."

"You should have gone, Martha can wait upon me." "Yet while he said it, the doctor knew that Martha's fingers could never arrange a tray so temptingly, never wait upon him so thoughtfully and noiselessly, Martha's voice make such music in his heart, or give him such a sense of rest after the day's fatigue and anxiety."

"And now, papa, while you eat your supper, I want to read you a story Lou wrote to-day. One of her gems, with the prettiest song verses introduced. You are not too tired?"

The proud father was never too tired to admire Lucy's graceful sketches; so the story was read and admired to Nettie's full satisfaction.

"Ain't it lovely?" she said, as she folded the papers. "I am so proud of Lucy. It is so nice when I hear strangers wondering who L. H. is, to think she is my sister, and to have such a delicious little mystery to unfold."

"And now tell me what you have been doing all day?"

"All sorts of things. I helped Lou a little by copying her articles for her, and I made the knots of Lou's dress and trimmed mamma's gloves, and concocted that chicken pie you are eating, and did a lot of odds and ends, nothing much."

"Are you too tired to read me this article in the Lancet? My eyes are snow-dazzled and I should like to hear what this fellow has to say—'Diseases of the Eye.'"

"I am sure he recommends green spectacles for doctors who drive about on sunlit snow. By the way, papa, do you suppose any doctor ever practices what he preaches?"

"I don't know, dear, I'm sure, I should probably preach very loudly at any of my patients who drank such strong coffee as this in the evening, or who ate his eggs as I do mine, boiled to perfect bullets."

"I am so glad you are not going out again," said Nettie, as her father donned dressing-gown and slippers, and struck an attitude, peculiar to tired doctors, upon the sofa—"though," she added thoughtfully, "it must pay for being tired to comfort so many poor sick folks as you do."

"And to have such a nice little girl to make one lazy," said her father. "You are right, Nettie; the power to soothe a sufferer, to comfort a mourner, to aid nature to restore or smooth the path to the grave, is a gift God sent, for which I give him humble and hearty thanks, I was sent for to-day to the C— Hotel, to prescribe for a gentleman, stranger here, who fell upon the ice, and has got an ugly compound fracture to keep him a prisoner for a long time. He is all alone, his family being in California, and I really think was more grateful for an hour's chat than for all my bandages and splints."

"I should say the chat was decidedly the most agreeable. Poor fellow! Who is he?" "You'll find the card in my coat pocket. Not that—not that—that's it!" "Leonard Williams! Why, papa, that's Leonard Williams." "Well, dear?" "But, papa, you remember Hattie Simpson?" "Yes, dear," said the bewildered doctor, looking at Nettie's flushed cheeks.

"Who went to California three years ago, with her father, and married John Coles. Well, her father married the widow of the great banker, Willis Williams, and she wrote that Leonard, the only son, was coming here on his tour through the States. You must have heard Leo talk of it."

"Well, you know, dear, I don't hear Leo much. As she never comes down to breakfast, and is out every evening, and as I am away all day, there is not much chance of her telling me the news. But I remember Hattie very well. So this is a connection of hers?"

"Why, papa, all the girls are crazy to see him. His father left him an immense fortune, and he is one of the most successful lawyers in San Francisco. Hattie describes him about as near perfection as one of Lou's heroes."

"He is rather a fine-looking fellow, with large, frank eyes, that look straight at one, and he has a good, clear voice, too, as if he was ashamed of nothing he had to say. He a hero! Well, he won't captivate a heroine just yet, Nettie, for his arm is in a bad way. Now, the Lancet!"

The long, able article was read and criticized, and quite a perceptible impression made upon the knitting before the doctor and Nettie concluded to seek their respective apartments, and if there had been one lingering regret on Nettie's mind from the brilliant party she had lost, her father's warm kiss, and "God bless you, darling," quite drove it away.

The next morning Leonard Williams was fully discussed at the breakfast table. Leonie and Lucy were still dreaming of the conquests of the previous evening, but Mrs. Hammond decided that the invalid must be their guest. The doctor was only too glad to offer their hospitality to the stranger, and Mrs. Hammond fully appreciated the "chance" thrown in her way. Leonie and Lucy were much too fascinating for a resident in the house to leave the heart whole, and visions of the stranger's immense wealth danced in fascinating confusion through mamma's brain as she dressed for the ride to the C— Hotel to offer her motherly care to Leonard Williams.

He was up and dressed when the doctor entered the room, but there was a contraction of the lip and brow, a deadly pallor and weary expression that told of acute pain, borne quietly. To say that he accepted the doctor's invitation gratefully, gives but a faint idea of the glow in his cheek, the light in his eyes that expressed his pleasure. A home!

"We can all feel independent when we are well, doctor," he said, smiling; "but there is nothing like a twinge of pain to recall mother love, or a good fit of sickness to bring out home memories. But I am afraid to tax your kindness so far. A stranger—"

"Not at all. The women folks have discovered an old friend. You may have heard Hattie Cole speak of the Hammonds."

"Speak of them! Haven't I bowed in spirit before Miss Leonie's picture, and admired even to Hattie's content the exquisite stories of Miss Lucy. And you are really Dr. Hammond?"

"Really, and Mrs. Hammond is waiting in the parlor to add her invitation to mine, and see that you have the proper number of pillows in the carriage."

The reception and first impressions of our hero, are best put in his own words. In a pile of letters tied with a ribbon, and tucked away in Mrs. Cole's worktable drawer, there was one which read thus:

P—, Dec. 18—.

DEAR HATTIE:—You were very anxious to have me write as soon as I had seen your dear friend Leonie Hammond, and tell you how she impressed me, so here goes for a long letter. First and foremost, you must go to mother for the details of a lucky fall I had, and the subsequent invitation to make Dr. Hammond's home my home; then, fancy me fairly domesticated, in a charming room, with that dear old gentleman to pay me daily visits, his stately wife to see that I have every comfort, and the young ladies flying in and out, as the whim takes them. I have never been too sick to come down stairs, but appear daily in a charming crimson wrapper that suits my Spanish complexion to a nicety, and slippers that would make most anybody lazy.

But all this time you are waiting to hear of your friend, Hattie, she is bewildering; even your descriptions fall short of the reality, and your vignette portrait is a miserable libel. Such eyes—now full of fire, now beaming with mirth, now melting with pathos—such a queenly figure, such beautiful, rich tresses, such a sunny complexion—well, words do her no justice. She is the most wonderfully beautiful woman I ever saw.

Of Lucy, I see but little; she is abstracted and self-contained, spends whole days shut up in the doctor's library, and seems to pass her whole time in dreaming out her new stories or poems, which are certainly worth the trouble.

But, Hattie, why did you never tell me of the other one, Nettie, the household fairy, the wee, witching, graceful Cinderella to these lovely sisters? No, not Cinderella, for the heroine was abused and neglected, and Nettie just wraps round her warm heart the love of the whole family. While Leonie is riding, driving, skating, or sleeping, and Lucy is shut up in the library bewailing the sorrows of Araminta or creating a situation for Clementina, Nettie is the home fairy. She appears in the sitting-room daily with delicious compounds which she informs me she has manufactured for my especial delight, though I notice there is always a duplicate dish for the doctor's dinner or supper.

She comes in demurely to sit down to great piles of white stuff which she very gravely states to be the "week's mending," and shoots a tiny glittering needle in and out, reducing long ends of thread to miserable inches in less time than it takes to tell it, her tongue all the while keeping up a merry rattle, or tracing out deeper thought as the whim takes her. The others are very gay, and dazzle me night after night by coming in to twist around before the pier glass as they start for a party, sometimes dragging Nettie off too, spite of her reluctance, to bring her home full of pleasure at the admiration lavished upon her sisters.

But the most charming time of all is the evening. Dr. Hammond is generally at home, or when he is out, one of his sisters remains. On the latter occasions, we have music and small talk; but when the doctor presides, then Nettie lets all her hidden inner self out, and a charming self it is, so womanly, so true, pure and good. No deep thought to startle, but the quiet, reliable intelligence of a child, frank and questioning, yet full of beauty. She reads beautifully, and we have all Lucy's stories, as she writes them, varied by the articles in the Lancet, the news of the day, poetry, fiction, history, anything that one of the trio will suggest. She seldom plays when her sisters are present; but for the doctor and I she will accompany herself to simple ballads, which she sings with taste, in a clear, sweet, but not very powerful voice, often giving me the use of her fingers to carry out the tenor you are so fond of. It is very beautiful to see how they all love her, and rely upon her. She can always produce the doctor's lost spectacles or instrument case, knows exactly where her mother laid her fan last evening, is always ready to trim Leonie's dresses, and lend her finery, or braid her magnificent hair, has time to copy Lucy's articles, hunt up her quotations, pet her headaches, or find out the complimentary notices in the papers, feels amply rewarded by being kissed, petted, and imposed upon by every member of the loving family.

Ah, Leonie is superb, Lucy has wonderful talent, but, Hattie, for a home bird, for a companion, friend and wife, give me the "other one." It created something of an excitement in the family when the millionaire, the gentlemanly invalid who had won the affection of all, made his sentiments public, but when he announced his intention of taking an adjoining house and setting up his office in the city, the doctor gave a glad consent to take him for a son-in-law, while Leo and Lou declared he would make the most delightful brother-in-law imaginable.

"To think," said Leo, laughing, as she stood contemplating a pile of silk and lace, heaped up in the sitting-room, "that the first wedding in the family should carry off—"

"Not the beauty," said Lucy. "Nor the authoress," said her mother. "But," in chorus, "the other one."

JOHN FITZPATRICK.

The leading Scientists of to-day agree that many diseases are caused by disordered Kidneys or Liver. If, therefore, the Kidneys and Liver are kept in perfect order, perfect health will be the result. The truth has only been known a short time and for years people suffered great agony without being able to find relief. The discovery of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure marks a new era in the treatment of these troubles. Made from a simple tropical leaf of rare value, it contains just the elements necessary to nourish and invigorate both of these great organs, and safely restore and keep them in order. It is a POSITIVE Remedy for all the diseases that cause pain in the lower part of the body—for Toxemia, Headaches—Jaundice—Dizziness—Travel—Pain, Agitation—Lividities, and all difficulties of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs. It is an excellent and safe remedy for females in pregnancy. It will control Menstruation and is invaluable for Leucorrhoea or Falling of the Womb. As a Blood Purifier it is unequalled, for it cures the organs that make the blood.

READ THE RECORD. "It saved my life."—E. B. Lakely, Selma, Ala. "It is the remedy that will cure the many diseases peculiar to women."—Mother, Macine. "It has passed severe tests and won endorsement from some of the highest medical talent in the country."—New York World. "No remedy heretofore discovered can be held in one moment in comparison with it."—Rev. C. A. Harvey, D. D., Washington, D. C. This Remedy, which has done as much for the LAKEST SIZED BOTTLE of any medicine upon the market, and is sold by Druggists and all dealers at $1.25 per bottle, is the only one for WARNER'S SAFE DIABETES CURE. It is a POSITIVE Remedy. H. H. WARNER & CO., Rochester, N. Y.

Social Uses of the Telegraph.

"Queer messages pass through our hands continually," said the Western Union telegraph correspondent, "but we do not often recollect their contents. A message may cause a smile at the time, but is sent and then forgotten. Operators do their work mechanically. The words are ticked off at their finger ends, and are forgotten at once."

"Do you ever get regular social letters for telegraphic transmission?" "That has become a matter of frequent daily occurrence, and often they come to us in regular epistolary shape, beginning with 'Yours truly.' Of course the telegraph company is quite willing to adhere to epistolary forms, for they make so many more words to charge for. Some time ago we had a regular, downright love letter by telegraph. It was from some fellow traveling in the south—a drummer, I guess—to his sweet heart at home, and it began with 'My Darling Lizzie,' and went on to say that this would show to her how fervently and devoutly he loved her when he could not even wait for the mail to tell her how she was in his thoughts night and day, and so on for several hundred words. That sort of thing is unusual, of course. If it was a regular way of lovers we might find ourselves called into court occasionally as witnesses in breach of promise cases, because the originals of the letters are in our custody."

"It is a common thing for us to send out telegraphic announcements of a betrothal, and get a flood of congratulatory telegrams in reply. Telegraphic birthday congratulations are also of frequent occurrence, and the Purim festival always brings out a crop of telegrams between friends and relatives. Sometimes a message will simply read, 'I drink your health.' We get such even for cable transmissions."

"The uses of the telegraph for social purposes have become very large, however, among people generally," the telegraph man went on. "It constitutes about twenty per cent. of our domestic business, and about seven per cent. of our cable business. Most of our half-rate night messages are of that character. 'How is Ida this morning?' a man will ask his relatives in some other city. Every day telegraphic queries of a similar nature go across the ocean. The telegraph brings people into one community and, aside from the expense, there is no more trouble in making such inquiries than in sending around to a neighbor's house to find how a sick friend is getting along. Some times a man visiting here on business will send a short letter to his wife by telegraph every night. Want of form and ceremony is excusable in telegraph messages, and busy men to whom the expense is no consideration are getting more and more in the habit of preferring the telegraph to mails, even when there is no necessity in the world for such expedition. Fellows who come to town on larks sometimes can't wait till they get home to tell their comrades of the good times they are having. Their messages have a high flavor at times, but we rarely make any objections. Even profanity goes by wire sometimes."

"Since the introduction of cipher codes the amount of business correspondence transferred from the mails to the wires is very great. About sixty per cent. of our business telegrams are now in cipher, and by means of the codes in use a great deal can be condensed into a little. Where a business man used to send by mail, he will now write a cipher letter to get at half rates at night. He can write at the close of one day's business, and the telegraph puts his letter on his correspondent's desk before business hours of the next day. In fact, the transfer to the telegraph of matter that used to go by mail has been so great since the adoption of the half-rate night system six or seven years ago, that the amount of business increases faster than facilities can be provided. Business telegrams fluctuate in quantity from day to day, but taking the year by seasons, the amount of work remains pretty steady. But in summer, when people are traveling about for pleasure, the increase of social communications is tremendous. We have to increase our staff of operators along the coast watering places fully twenty per cent. Lots of little offices are opened that there is no demand for in the winter months. People send gossip, love, congratulations, regrets, jokes, condolences, appeals, and money by telegraph."—[N. Y. Sun.

Bismarck as a Patient.

It may be interesting to many of our readers, says the Berliner Tagblatt, to take a look at the most powerful statesman of the age, the "Iron" Chancellor, on his weak side, namely as a patient. The Prince's chief trouble, as is well known, is a painful nervous affection, which the physicians call "sciatica," and which they greatly dread on account of its obstinacy. Besides this, the Chancellor suffers at times from an inflammatory swelling of the veins in the feet, and like all other mortals, occasionally from lighter indispositions—colds and indigestion. It seems that the patient is as inconsistent regarding the methods of his treatment as he is in other matters. With "the same feeling of 'absolute indifference' which, according to his own words, he manifests in certain political topics, he also deals with the exigencies of the medical science. Homopathy or allopathy—it is all one to him as long as he believes one or the other will cure him. It has even happened that he allowed himself to be treated by an allopathic physician and soon after by a homoeopathist. When at Friedrichsruh he sends for Privy Sanitary Councilor Dr. Dohn of Hamburg, who is an allopathist.

At Varzia, when medical attendance is needed, the physician, also an allopath, in the adjacent town of Schlawa is applied to. When at Kissengen the Prince consults the well known Diruf, also an adherent of the old school. At Berlin, however, he inclines to homoeopathic treatment. Since 1870 the Chancellor, as well as the whole of his family, are regularly attended by the Sanitary Councilor, Dr. Swingenberg, one of the most noted representatives of homoeopathy in Berlin. Nevertheless (at all events before 1870), the Chancellor also frequently consulted the present Director of the Imperial Sanitary Bureau, Dr. Struck (allopath). At present Dr. Swingenberg seems to be the Chancellor's only medical adviser, who visits the patient twice a day, and has frequently been sent for from Varzia as well as Friedrichsruh. Previously Prince Bismarck had put himself in the hands of the late Dr. Velmsleyer, and before him in those of Dr. Kleinschmidt, occasionally also Dr. Martens, all of them homoeopathists. The Prince has frequently expressed the opinion that he is less concerned about the mode of treatment than about the result of the same. At times he goes so far as to insist upon being restored to health and activity within a specified time; if his physician succeeds in this the Prince is content but rarely ever has a word of appreciation for the brilliant achievements of his medical attendants. Thus it will be seen that the Iron Chancellor, even in private life, stands on as completely realistic a ground, and calculates as realistically concerning his health, as he does in his peculiar "policy."—[American Register of Paris.

The Man Who Was warned

During the uncertain days following the close of the war there were certain localities in the South where a man who had a grudge against a neighbor got rid of him by writing him an anonymous letter warning him to leave the State inside of ten days or prepare to fill a grave over which no one would feel particularly interested in keeping the grass green. One day Colonel Blank, who had removed to Arkansas from Southern Michigan and was attending strictly to his business, received such a missive. It was the rule to turn pale as death, rush home and pack up, sell out or nothing and skedaddle on the wings of chain lightning, but the Colonel did not follow it. It struck him that he knew the handwriting and he went home and buckled on a knife and revolver, and took a ride of three miles into the country. He dismounted at the cabin of a long-haired, long-legged old swamp owl, named Patterson, who was in the back yard mending a harness. The Colonel approached him within three feet, and after they had seated and dispensed the state of the weather, the Michiganander remarked:

"Patterson, I am going to leave Arkansas."

"Shoo! Anything wrong?"

"I've been warned away."

"You don't say!"

"I've been given five days to leave the State."

"And you calkerlate you will go?"

"Yes, I'll have to go or be waylaid or hung up."

"Yes, I reckon that's so," chuckled the old man.

"But I want to take something with me to remember Arkansas by," continued the Colonel, "and I came out after your scalp."

"My what?"

"Sit still, old man, or I'll bore you through! That's it—up with your hands! If I go back to Michigan and tell 'em I was warned out of Arkansas, and that I got up and dusted without firing a shot, they'll call me a coward. If I carry your scalp back I've got something to show for the two years I've put in here and the $6000 I've laid out. Old man, if you know the Lord's prayer you'd better repeat it quick, for I'm in a dreadful hurry to get back."

"Say, Kurnel, don't you like the kentry down here?" asked Patterson.

"Yes."

"Is the climate all right?"

"First rate."

"Chance to make money?"

"Good chance."

"Then, Kurnel, don't go back! I don't keer two cents about my scalp, but somehow I've got attached to you, and it will rip up all my tender feelings to see you go! Let my old scalp stay right whar' she is, and you stay right whar' you be, and if any of the boys look cross-eyed at you fur the next ten years I'm a kyote if I don't drive 'em into Mexico or make 'em lose themselves in the ground!"

The Colonel is down there yet, and old Patterson never meets him without anxiously inquiring if he's got over being homesick yet.

Portsmouth Tribune: At the request of President Arthur, the coal grates have been taken out of nine fireplaces in the White House. The interior is arched with polished soapstone and framed with fluted brass, and furnished with all the conveniences for burning wood. The President knows the pleasure of a wood fire in the house, but he says he never has fished or hunted, and hence, perhaps, has never enjoyed the delights of sitting at a camp fire in the woods of an October night, and watched the blaze crawl and sputter around the big "back log" and listen to the fitful wind as it wafted the aroma of fallen leaves among the trees.

FOUND AT LAST.

A Positive and Never Failing Cure for Rheumatism, Neuralgia and Gout.

Hundreds of testimonials given to Dr. Henley, uncollected, are in his possession from his own townsmen, living right here among us, testifying to the wonderful curative powers of his Rheumatic Neutralizer. Dr. Henley refers only to the testimonials given by well known parties in our midst, and never writes on far off and unknown individuals, as supporting what he claims to be true of his Rheumatic Neutralizer, that is, it will cure any case of Rheumatism in existence. The doctor long since discovered the folly of applying external remedies for a disease that has its seat in the deepest channels of the blood, and therefore set to work to discover a remedy for Rheumatism, and mankind may rejoice in his Rheumatic Neutralizer.

A DEFINITION OF RHEUMATISM.

If you have a thorn or splinter in your finger and you put on Chloroform, or some other drug, you stop the sensibility of pain for a time only. The thorn is still there, and as soon as the effect of the drug dies away the pain returns. In order to get rid of the pain you must have that thorn plucked out of the flesh. That is precisely the same way with Rheumatism; you might rub on the skin some drug to stop the pain for a little time, but the pain is sure to return as soon as the effect of the drug dies away. Now it has been proven beyond the slightest doubt that Rheumatism is in the deepest Channels of the Blood, and that there is no other way to reach it, only by the Blood. This has been demonstrated right here in Portland by dozens of people that have been cured by Dr. Henley's Rheumatic Neutralizer. That it is the only medicine that has Ever Reached the case and made Lasting and Permanent Cures. In fact, the only true remedy for Eroding Rheumatism from the system is through the Blood. It is a pack of nonsense to attempt any other method, that is, if you would wish a Permanent and Lasting Cure.

The Doctor has come to the conclusion, after twenty-two years travel and close investigation, that the Liver has a great deal to do with Rheumatism. A man or woman with a good sound Liver seldom or ever has any pains or aches. The Doctor has got up a Concentrated Liver Pill, one pill for a dose. One of these Pills has more effect in rousing the torpid Liver than a gross of other Pills. By all means use the Concentrated Liver Pills in connection with the Neutralizer.

OREGON TO MASSACHUSETTS.

Some time ago Messrs. Hodge, Davis & Co., of this city, read in a Massachusetts paper that Hon. Charles H. Ladd, auditor of that state, was afflicted with the terrible kidney disease, and had been obliged to give up work and return to his home. They immediately sent him a box of their celebrated Oregon Kidney Tea, and from time to time sent him other boxes. A few days ago they received from him the following letter:

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS. ) Auditor's Dep't, Boston, Nov. 11, 1881. )

Messrs. Hodge, Davis & Co.: Dear Sirs—I have no hesitation in saying that I have been much benefited by the Oregon Kidney Tea as a remedy for a kidney difficulty which has troubled me for six or eight years. I can heartily recommend it to those who are similarly afflicted, as a safe and agreeable remedy. I shall test its virtues further, for I have great faith in it as a specific for many diseases of the kidneys. Respectfully yours,

CHAS. R. LADD.

PUGET SOUND ARGUS.

SARGENT'S APPOINTMENT.

Post-Intelligencer, Feb. 25th. Some two months ago, when Aaron A. Sargent of California went to Washington, at the instance of President Arthur, it was generally supposed that he would receive the appointment of Secretary of the Interior Department, and it was doubtless the intention of the President, at that time, to appoint him to that position. But as Mr. Sargent had some matters pending before that Department, the appointment was necessarily postponed. This delay gave the enemies of the ex-Senator, as well as those who had axe to grind for themselves and friends, time and opportunity to work, and it may be depended upon that no time was lost. The whole matter, however, has been set to rest, at last, by the President nominating Mr. Sargent as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Germany, as will be seen by our telegraphic dispatches this morning.

Aaron A. Sargent was born at Newburyport, Massachusetts, September 23, 1827; was a printer and editor in early life; emigrated to California in 1849; studied law and came to the bar in 1854; was district attorney of Nevada county, California, in 1855 and 1856; received the degree of M. A. from the College of California in 1865; was elected to the Thirty-Seventh and Forty-First Congresses; was re-elected to the Forty-second Congress as a Republican, receiving 18,055 votes against 15,377 votes for J. W. Cofforth, Democrat; and was subsequently elected to the United States Senate as a Republican to succeed C. Cole, Republican and took his seat March 4, 1873.
