A Gazette special from Conway, Ark., says: A young lawyer by the name of M. Smith living in town on last night took advantage of the absence of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Martin, who had gone on an excursion to New Orleans, to inveigle their little daughter Jesse, aged 12 years, a cousin to the young man, by his room and their ravished her. Mayor Bolton, wishing to use the room for some purpose went to the door and tried to enter and failing, suspicious were aroused and he watched the room and saw the young man and the girl come out. He told the landlady, the girl's uncle, and upon an investigation the girl confessed everything, and stated that Smith had threatened to murder her if she told. Smith, finding that he was suspected, fled to the woods where he was found and captured by the lawless citizens. He is under a strong guard but it is feared that he will escape before morning. The parties are of the best people in the community.

The president's withdrawal of all the important pending nominations for New York, except that of Judge Robertson, excited much comment and is likely to become the engrossing topic of discussion in political circles for some days. The universal interest upon it is due to the fact that of an open declaration of war to the knife on the issue raised by Conkling's opposition to Robertson, and it is also understood to be intended as an explicit intimation to the republicans of the senate that the president is not willing to have Robertson's nomination left at final adjournment without action. The withdrawals were doubtless precipitated by the confirmation of one of Conkling's friends as postmaster at Albany, which gave to the republicans a strong reason to take some such summary action all of the Conkling nominees would shortly be confirmed, and then be found leading their assent to the president's action against the president and Robertson, whereas by suspending their appointments he kept control of the entire New York patronage in his own hands.

There is no indication that Conkling has yielded in any degree his determination to exhaust every possible resource to secure the re-election of the president. The election of senate officers, but the democratic senators resumed the tactics of alternating motions to go into executive session and adjournment. Daves gave up the fight for the day, and upon his motion the senate went into executive session.

Word has reached Parsons, Kansas, that everyone on the Muskege and Fort Smith branches of the Missouri Pacific, have been driven off by Cheyennes. Asst. Attorney General McKim, who is in charge of the Missouri Pacific, left for the scene of difficulty. The Indians are reported determined, but it is not doubted that the Missouri Pacific will assert their right to build the road.

The Tribune's Washington special says: There are strong indications that the senate will very soon be ready to adjourn sine die. Senator Daves, in expressing the opinion that all necessary business can be finished in two or more days. It is understood however, that the president will not send in his recommendations which it was thought expedient to hold back until the senate should be ready to act upon them.

One of Green's coal shafts near Carbonade, Kansas, was ignited, consuming all timbering at the foot of the shaft. Twenty miners were at work, and none could escape until the fire was brought under control. Men were lowered and the miners taken out, fourteen alive and three dead. The names of the dead and missing are: Henry James McDonald, Andrew Warner, Charles Jones, Michael Mulloy and Pat Mulloy, a boy. All those brought up alive are recovering slowly.

Senator Miller received a telegram from a prominent San Francisco merchant reading simply as follows: "Matthew, 25th and 21st, Vox Populi." For the benefit of those who may not have their attention attracted by a foreign thing, we will make the matter more plain. Enter then into the joy of thy Lord!

Henry Ward Beecher, in a lecture speaking of the antipathy to the Chinese, deprecated it, and earnestly said that the boasted institutions and policy of America were a sham if its people were not willing to have the Chinese or any other people as neighbors. He said that we will assimilate all people who come to us. When a lion eats an ox the lion does not turn into an ox, but the ox turns into a lion. So an immigrant comes to our country, and he and his children are assimilated by our people.

Senator Daves has telegraphed the following to New England: "Please say to-morrow that all state members that I, or any committee of which I am on, have advised the president to withhold from the next session, I have recommended to him or to the caucus that action on the nomination be postponed until another session, are false."

OFFICIAL PAPER OF JEFFERSON CO

FRIDAY, MAY 20 1881.

CONKLING'S DESPERATE MOVE.

The latest sensation created by the notorious senatorial despot from New York is the resignation, by himself and colleagues, of their respective seats in the U. S. Senate. Billed at every turn in his desperate struggle to prevent the confirmation of Mr. Robertson as Collector of the port of New York, Mr. Conkling found himself in the desperate straits of a man compelled to either suffer defeat or run from the battle field. He chose the latter course, though the thinking public will agree that had he remained at his post of duty and conscientiously discharged the functions of his high office, much more credit would have attached to him, even though he had stood alone in his opposition to any confirmation.

In his letter to Gov. Cornell, accompanying his resignation, Mr. Conkling takes a long, round-about way of bringing in many outside matters, and to set forth his particular reasons for considering the President's selection of Robertson unwise. Without making any charge of unfitness against Robertson, he concludes that rather than be a party to the transaction, and be forced to surrender his manhood and senatorial prerogative, he will resign. It is difficult for a dispassionate observer to see just wherein the force of this proud politician's logic lies. In the first place, President Garfield merely exercised his plain, constitutional prerogative in sending the nomination to the Senate. It does not appear that any attempt has been made to force "Boss" Roscoe into voting in any particular way, or against his convictions of duty. The Senate is given the power to reject or confirm any nomination sent to it for approval, and if Robertson could be fairly approved by the Senate in spite of Mr. Conkling's opposition, it is not quite plain that he would in any degree be responsible for such confirmation, or be regarded as a party to it. If we mistake not, the calm and enlightened judgment of the public will pronounce such labored and flimsy excuses to be the merest sophistry, and the course of the principal actor that of an arrogant, conceited and selfish political despot. If his reasoning is sound, then, on the other hand, had a majority in the Senate voted to reject Robertson, the President could consistently have said: "My rights are invaded. I am forced to name some person for Collector of New York, other than the one I chose. Rather than be a party to such an action, therefore, I will resign." Now, wouldn't that be an interesting position for a statesman to place himself in? And yet it represents the precise role in which the great New York apostle voluntarily figures today. He says in substance: "Because I cannot be absolute dictator as to this appointment, I will refuse to perform the duties of the high office which I accepted at the hands of the people and thereby agreed to carry out." When his imperious will first clashed with that of the President, Mr. Conkling made a great show of bluster and brag about how he was going to annihilate the latter by defeating the confirmation; then, after dallying along and delaying as much as possible in order to gain strength, he sees defeat utter rot staring him in the face in a fight of his own seeking, and he resolves to "jump the game" and cover his own weakness and folly by an act intended for purely dramatic effect. Evidently relying on the N. Y. Legislature, which was elected mainly in his interest, to send himself and Platt back to the Senate, he might possibly be mistaken in his calculations, even with all his political shrewdness. That Legislature has already endorsed Robertson in emphatic terms since his nomination for Collector, and now that Conkling has resigned on the Robertson issue alone, they could hardly endorse him by re-election if they wished to be consistent and to show any manhood.

Back of all the sophistical covering with which Mr. Conkling seeks to gloss it over, the fact is patent to all observers that the N. Y. Custom House controls a vast amount of patronage in that state, and because the haughty dictator cannot control it he is willing to sacrifice his party. This is the truth and inevitable outcome of the whole affair, which Mr. Conkling cannot by any reasoning, however, subtle, escape. True, there is a kind of haughty independence and bold daring in his recent move that is admired by some; but he may yet find that discretion is the better part of valor, and that the interests of his country and his party outweigh individual ambitions. The President's firmness and dignified stand is admired by the people, and is in strong contrast with the ravings of his hot-headed antagonist.

[Since the above went in type, we have been informed by telegraph that Robertson was confirmed on Wednesday without roll call—hardly half a dozen votes being cast against him—and that when the news was received by the New York Legislature that body adjourned amid the wildest cheering, hand-shaking and general enthusiasm. This would seem to bode no good to Messrs. Conkling and Platt, as to their chances of re-election. A careful estimate pronounces it to be impossible to return them, although Conkling tells everybody that they will be. Newspaper and other comments pronounce their action childish in the extreme.]

THAT TELEGRAPH LINE.—At the special meeting of the stockholders of the P. S. Tel. Co., held in this place on Monday, it was decided to extend the line down to Dungeness and there meet the British authorities who will lay a cable across from a point near Trial Island, just off the mouth of Victoria harbor. Dr. Minor, President of the company, was authorized to borrow money necessary to accomplish the work of extending the line. It was at first thought that Port Angeles would be the terminal point on the American side; indeed that port had long been regarded as the proper objective point from the fact it was thought to be the nearest to Victoria, and that the bottom was better across there than by any other route; it was also deemed an important fact (and still is, for that matter) that Port Angeles has the first really good harbor above Neah Bay, to which a wind bound, disabled or becalmed vessel could work her way and report. But recent surveys show that the distance from Dungeness across is but 15 1/2 nautical miles—only a little farther than from Angeles—and that several miles of line on this side could be saved by connecting at Dungeness. Careful soundings showed the greatest depth of water on the route selected to be but 80 fathoms, and that the bottom is gray sand all the way across with no dangerous currents or obstacles of any kind. The line is already built and in good working order as far as Port Discovery where another office was established, temporarily in charge of Mr. Livingstone, of that place. It will therefore be speedily built to Dungeness where another office will be opened. This progressive measure will prove a great convenience to the growing commerce of Puget Sound, besides being a profitable investment for the young and struggling company undertaking it. It was opposed by a prominent stockholder who, for business reasons, was interested in seeing the Western Union line kept up between Seattle and B. C. His only reason seemed to be that the W. U. Co. would abandon their line below Seattle as soon as this one effected through connection to Victoria. If they do that, it would seem that the present one is a brilliant move for the P. S. Co., as in the event of a monopoly of the business, it would add to their income far above the proportionate money outlay. The company thus enlarging its field of operations is evidently under enterprising control, for which everyone interested in the development of this section ought to feel thankful.

CHANGES.—Yesterday's telegraph news contains the startling announcement that Hon. H. A. Webster, Collector of Customs for Puget Sound District, has been superseded by Hon. Albert W. Bass, of Indiana, who had already been confirmed by the Senate. Hon. J. B. Allen, U. S. Prosecuting Attorney for Washington Territory, has also been displaced by the appointment and confirmation of Hon. Wallace R. White, also of Indiana. This news will be received with regret by nearly all of our citizens, who have seen the able and efficient manner in which these gentlemen have performed their respective duties. However, as no one can expect to hold office always under our government, their removal means nothing to their detriment.

INTELLIGENT CHRISTIANITY.

NO. 3. PHILOSOPHY.

For many centuries this was the great study of educated men. Of late years they have turned their attention to scientific studies, but previous to the present century it was mental and moral philosophy to which they devoted their attention. There were different schools of philosophy much as there are to-day different schools of science, some for and some against religion. Men reasoned and philosophized on the subject until at one time it is said that nearly all of Europe was involved in the strife—a strife so bitter that those of one party would hardly speak to those of the opposite party, and all classes of person from the king to the peasant took part in it. Men tried by mental philosophy to prove that there is no God in reasoning so subtle that we can hardly comprehend it. But how changed now! We hear but very little of this. They have abandoned this kind of argument, and the writing of works on mental and moral philosophy is now mainly left to those who believe in God and the Bible. It is felt that the study of the human mind sustains the Christian religion.

ASTRONOMY.

One of the first branches of science which men began to study was astronomy, but when a few hundred years ago it was discovered by Galileo that the earth revolved around the sun, instead of the sun moving around the earth, a great cry was raised by the enemies of religion, that this science was opposed to the Bible, and some Christians trembled and held their breath, while others studied and waited patiently until they should know more. And when they did, they found that there is hardly a study which leads man up to God and the Bible more than this so that it has become a proverb that "The ungodly astronomer is mad." Skeptics do not now try to prove from this branch of science that the Bible is untrue. Says the author of "The Ungodly Astronomer," "The most interesting and useful thing about astronomy is the illustration it pours out the attributes of the Supreme Being. When under the open dome of heaven I open myself candidly to all their silent suggestions and mag netisms, I feel myself drinking in faith, that the actual universe, instead of swearing with decisive voice and hand that there is no isosoteria, is, in fact, significantly asking, 'Is there not such a Being?'"

GEOLOGY.

Fifty years ago this branch of study began to attract great attention, and it is said that Moses made a mistake when he wrote the first chapter of Genesis, and again some Christians held their breath, while others waited and studied. But after a half a century of study men have begun to learn that when Moses said "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth," it is just what they have found geology to say—that it was created by great Being, in the beginning, but when that beginning was neither say. That when the Bible says that the world will at some time be burned, geology says it contains all the elements within it which will be needed for the purpose; and that the miracles which are recorded long before the Bible was written, and that God is good. Geologists who are not Christians now find that the testimony of the rocks and the Book agree so that they are asking where Moses got his information. He some how knew what it has taken science four thousand years to discover, and geology is not now used to destroy a belief in Christianity as it was twenty five years ago. But some of our best geologists as Dana, Hitchcock, Dawson and Hugh Miller, who have written works that have lived, have been and are as firm believers in Christianity as in science.

The meaning of "sea" seen in nearly all legal documents, is not generally known. Many have inquired the use of the cabalistic device, until the question having got into the newspapers, a correspondent of the "Globe-Democrat" after much research, has decided that the symbol is derived from the Latin phrase "sine saltibus"—meaning those within jurisdiction.

A CHECK for $2,000 was given to the wife of Mr. Robt. by the lodge of A. O. U. W., the day her husband was buried. It will be recalled that Mr. Robt. was murdered a few weeks ago at Astoria. In every case, so far this worthy Order has been as prompt as could be wished for in distributing benefits.

LATE rains are said to be beneficial to Kansas farming interests.

FAD-DEATH.—The schooner Tessor, arrived yesterday from the sailing grounds off Cape Flattery, bringing the body of Capt. H. McCrea, and the sad news that he was killed by the accidental discharge of a rifle on board the schooner, on Tuesday evening at about 6:30 o'clock. He had gone toward to raise the jib, and the gun was lying across it, muzzle toward him. In putting it toward him, the hammer caught in such a way as to discharge the gun. The ball entered the right breast and came out at the left side. He lingered about seven hours in four-death relief. The schooner was about 30 miles S. W. from Cape Flattery at the time of the accident. Mr. Quinn, the faithful mate of the vessel, immediately put on all sail and steered for Neah Bay which was reached Wednesday afternoon about 3 o'clock. There, Capt. Willoughby held an inquest upon the body, the jury returning a verdict in accordance with the facts as above stated, and at 10 o'clock that evening Capt. Quinn left for this place, arriving at noon yesterday. By his last request, deceased will be buried under the auspices of the Odd Fellows and Good Templars, of which orders he was an honored member. The funeral will take place from Good Templars' Hall today, at 2 P. M. He was about 34 years of age, and was of Danish descent. He had been on Puget Sound several years, and his bluff, honest and manly ways had earned him many staunch friends.

FROM MISSOURI.—A correspondent from the above named state says: "Wheat, if not entirely frozen out, will not be more than a fair crop. Fifteen bushels to the acre is considered a full crop here. A great deal of stock froze to death during the winter and disease in the human family followed. There seems to be a complete revolution in the elements, in regard to cold. It seems that what we term a temperate zone has become frigid, and countries heretofore frigid have become more or less temperate."

WITH all due respect to Mr. Viant, remarks the Wash. Statesman, "It is a mighty good thing for the country that he has not obtained control of the Northern Pacific Railroad. Had he the control it would have been the cause of Portland's pre-eminence over the whole country east of the Cascades, and the Lord knows that we have no wish to be tyrannized over any longer by that ungodly party."

THE WINDS OF GOD

Blow, soft spring wind! Out of the ether west, when down the sky The shadows slowly step, and heaven's lit lamp...

On Making Calls.

On one side, that of tasmatic well, this subject has been worn call through-bare. As the double of Dr. Loghans was taught to remark, "So much have been said, so well said, that I will not detain the audience further."

The Black Death.

Already Europe is becoming alarmed at the appearance of the plague, or black death, in the East, and fears are expressed that it may spread westward.

Reid's Time Saver.

The other morning as the managing editor of the only really first class advertising medium on the Pacific coast was grinding out an editorial entitled, "Our Country's Future."

WHAT THE FARMERS AND MECHANICS' STORE ARE DOING.

A Splendid New Store Being Taken Possession Of—The Men Who Work to Develop the Resources of a State.

It has been said that the men who succeed in life are the men who expect to succeed; and the men who fail are the men to whom success would have been a surprise. It is certain that some men, early about with their feet and unshakable will of an eagle, in everything they do, have a certain amount of success.

FARMERS AND MECHANICS' STORE

At 124 First Street, Portland, Oregon.

And a short history in connection therewith will be of interest to our readers. Some four years ago an enterprising gentleman came to the city of Portland and opened a Clothing Store, which he appropriately called the Farmers and Mechanics' Store.
