OFFICIAL PAPER OF JEFFERSON CO
FRIDAY, JUNE 21, 1881.

THE INDIAN EDUCATION QUESTION.

With pleasure we publish the following letter of explanation from a gentleman who evidently was unfortunate in the first instance in having his production revised by a stranger.

EDITOR ARGUS—Your criticism in the ARGUS of June 10th of my article on Indian Education in Washington Territory as far as it had reference to the Neah Bay reservation is in a measure just—at least to Capt. Willoughby and his associates. The mistake occurred as follows: The original report was not printed, it being too long for publication. That perhaps was not as clear as it ought to have been, but it was condensed by another hand, and I did not see it until it was printed, when I immediately saw that it would convey a wrong impression, as those who are interested and know the truth plainly see that it has done. In order to render the meaning of the report clear a half a dozen words have since been inserted, so that the part referred to reads as follows:

"In 1874 a new Agent, Rev. C. A. Huntington, having been appointed, he took increased interest in the school, believing that the time spent in that line more profitable than in any other civilizing agency. The first school house was in the midst of the Indian camps where the children were surrounded by degrading influences. A new building having been added to the reservation two miles distant, it was fitted up for a schoolhouse, and the school was removed to it. For several years the school varied from thirty-five to fifty scholars, but in 1880 increased appropriations were made, and the number of scholars was increased by his successor, Capt. Chas. Willoughby to sixty-nine, with an average attendance for the year of forty-six."

Justice to Capt. Willoughby demands that this statement be made.

Sincerely,
M. EELLS.

There can be no doubt that "Veritas" makes some good points this week, on a subject that ought to interest all our wharf owners.

THE TACOMA MILL, at Tacoma, is one of the largest sawmills on Puget Sound. Its daily cut on 12 hours time averages about 90,000 feet, although during the past six weeks the cut has reached as high as 127,000 feet in one day. The mill contains all of the best and most improved machinery at present in use in establishments of this kind. The power is furnished by five engines in different parts of the mill, which receive steam from the boilers, which are heated entirely by saw dust, which is supplied to the furnace by a self-feeding apparatus, but this does not consume more than one-third of the saw dust, the rest being carried by means of a sluice filled with water to a distance of more than five hundred feet from the mill and deposited on the shores of the Sound. The mill has two gang and a number of circular saws. The company has four vessels constantly engaged in carrying lumber to San Francisco and foreign ports, viz: Dashing Wave, carrying capacity about 700,000 feet; Basnet, capacity about 900,000 feet; Shirley, capacity 800,000 feet, and Canada, recently purchased by the company, capacity over 1,000,000 feet.

The real name of Mr. Villard is said to be Heinrich Hilgard. He was born at Munich in 1834 and came to America when 10 years old. He became acquainted with Horace Greeley when that journalist visited the "wide west," who engaged him as a correspondent for his paper, the New York Tribune. As correspondent Hilgard assumed the non de plume of Villard, and under this assumed name he soon gained celebrity as an excellent newspaper writer, particularly as a war correspondent. The foundation to his immense fortune he laid during the time when government bonds stood very low, by fortunate speculation in those papers. During that time he visited Europe four times. His knowledge and pronunciation of the English language is such that he is taken for an American. Henry Hilgard (Villard) is a true specimen of a self-made man, and he has elevated himself to his present position by his own grit and intellect.

The telegraphic dispatches have been full of late with accounts of severe floods, violent storms and cyclones throughout the eastern and western states, destroying large amounts of property, with loss of numerous lives. Hardly a week passes without some one or more records of these terrible events, and during the past two weeks several have occurred, resulting in an unusual loss of life. This northwestern coast seems to be more exempt from these disasters than any part of the American continent, and our people should be thankful that they live in so peaceful a clime. The other countries also have their tornadoes, earthquakes, famines, plagues and pestilence; but our favored region has little fear of any of them.

The Advantages of Using Sandstone as Stone Piling for Support of Wharves, Warehouses, &c., and for the Erection of Sea Walls, Considered.

EDITOR ARGUS—Every now and then within the past ten years, we have heard of the downfall of somebody's wharf and storehouse, resulting in great loss and damage to the wharf, the building and to the merchandise stored therein. A few years ago a wharf fell at Seattle causing a loss which about broke the owners; afterwards the wharf and storehouse at Port Gamble fell into the bay. And now we have the complete collapse of the warehouse filled with goods, and a portion of the wharf, belonging to our townsman, Messrs. Waterman & Katz.

All losses of this kind as also the continual expense of keeping in repair all wharves built with wooden piles, can be effectively prevented at small cost, at least as far out as the extreme point of the lowest tide line, by simply using sandstone for building piles instead of driving wooden ones usually employed.

On the opposite shore of Port Townsend Bay is an abundance of soft sandstone which hardens by exposure to the air or salt water, which can be had at a cost little in excess of the expense of quarrying and transportation. Such stone in addition to its value for building purposes is very suitable for stone piling, underpiling for warehouses, sea walls, &c.

For ordinary piling purposes the separate stones should square as large as required, be then dovetailed or drilled through the center and keyed together by an iron rod or pipe filled with cement, extending from the top of the cross timbers of the wharf two feet below the foundation stone. Such a piling would last a century without repairs, and the complete cost of building such piles to low water line will not exceed from eight to thirty dollars per pile.

It is true that stone of all kinds not excepting granite with which the walls of dry docks are usually faced, will in time become abraded by the constant wash of the salt water, (although actually hardening under it) but it would take many years of abrasion, without repair, before such a misfortune as has happened to our townsman could become possible.

This article was written in the hope that those of our citizens who contemplate local improvements which they desire to be permanent, may avail themselves of the excellent and cheap material already at hand, without using the ordinary piles which are not safe after two years' service, or sending away, at great expense, to procure stone which, given equal care in selecting, is no better than our local sandstone that can be procured at one-third the cost.

Mr. I. Katz purchased the saloon property of Mr. T. Torjussen in this place yesterday. The purchase price was $3,000, we understand, the desirability of the property being on account of its eligible location and water front.

In the municipal election in Port land last Monday, Joseph Simon defeated Hon. D. P. Thompson, the present incumbent, for Mayor, by a majority of 9 out of about 3,500 votes.

WORK on Union wharf has been commenced. The loss of a small boom of piles in towing them from Scow Bay delayed the work a week or two.

ON Sunday next the new Episcopal Bishop, Rt. Rev. John Adams Fairbank, will preach in St. Paul's church here, at the usual hours, morning and evening.

THE program of the Port Discovery celebration, inserted last week, the prize offered for canoe race appeared as $5, whereas it should have been $20.

GROSS Bros. have received the largest assortment of Black Cashmere and Drepelate that ever was in Port Townsend.

JUDGE Swan is fairly irrepressible in the matter of Indian curiosities. He and Maj. VanBokkelen have a large figure of the regulation Thunder Bird ornamenting the skyward end of a pole in front of their office.

THE programme of the celebration at Olympia, neat and attractive, from the of the "standards," of that place, indicates that there will be varied enjoyments on that occasion, enough to fill up the whole day.

DO you know, Mr. Furios laid an egg in our sanctum yesterday, that measured 8 inches in circumference, the long way, and 4 1/2 the other? Fact. He explained that one of his Plymouth Rock hens was responsible for the production.

THE survey of the Green river pass has demonstrated, among other things, that a better and shorter wagon road can be had from Puget Sound to Ellensburg and the Kittitas valley than from The Dalles. At the present the only way of reaching Ellensburg is by way of The Dalles, over a road 140 miles in length, a road which is practically over a continuation of hills. A much superior route may be had from South Prairie, on the completed portion of the Cascade division, twenty miles from Tacoma. From that point to Ellensburg by way of the Tacoma pass, the distance is only 100 miles, on 40 of which, from Ellensburg to Thorp's cabin, there is already a good wagon road.
