JUAN DE FUCA.

"S," a writer in the December "Californian," argues and praves to his own satisfaction that Juan de Fuca, whose proper name was said to be Apostolus Valerianus, never saw the famous straits to which his name attaches. Concurrent history, he claims, degatives the waoie story. There were also palpable and violent discrepancies as to time, geography, physical features of the country, accounts of the natives, &c. Juan de Fuca was a Greek, born in Cepba lonia, and by profession a mariner. He was a great navigator, and more than three hundred years ago he made his way to the West Indies. From there he naturally drifted on to Mexico, and over to the Pacific. He was sent on an expedition up the California coast, which was terminated by mutiny soldiers on board. In 1592 he was sent with two small vessels still further north, and according to his account he skirted the coast to latitude 47, between 48 he discovered a broad inlet of sea. He sailed up this more than twenty days, the inland sea continually widening. The land, he declared, was very fruitful, and rich in gold, silver and pearls, like Mexico. The straits at their mouth, he thought to be thirty or forty leagues wide. De Fuca's story, as told by a contemporary who claims to have got it from De Fuca himself, was evidently garnished with a good deal of matter intended to gratify those whom he was serving. He was praised highly for his discoveries, but was not otherwise paid, and after waiting about the Spanish court for a long time, and becoming more and more impoverished continually, he was glad to leave the country and go over to Italy and back to Greece. The straits were named after Juan de Fuca by Capt. Mears, who boldly alleged their discoverer to be "Juan de Fuca." "D. S.," on the contrary asserts that the straits were first seen by white men in 1787, and that those who saw it then were the crew of a long boat sent out by the Austrian ship Imperial Eagle, commanded by Capt. Berkly.

Walla Walla is putting on airs. Last week it convicted a murderer and sent one of its lawyers to the penitentiary, and on Monday a young man named W. G. Kirkman committed suicide. What next?

Peter Lamar, the young lawyer who robbed E. C. McCammon and purloined letters from the Walla Walla postoffice, a short time ago, has been tried and sentenced to four years-two years in the U. S. Penitentiary on McNeil's Island, and the other two years will be in the Territorial penitentiary at Se-atco. He was brought down last week by U. S. Marshal Hopkins.

FINE OPPORTUNITY .- We have a stocked farm for sale, not far from a good local market, in Jefferson county. To those who may be seeking investments of this kind, we deem the opportunity a rare one. The farm is situated on the salt water front, in a safe and commodious bay; it comprises 133 acres of land, about 40 acres of which is fine bottom and marsh. About 32 acres are clear and under fence. Good house, barn, outbuildings, fences, &c., &c., that cost upwards of a thousand dollars. There are about 175 fruit trees of There are about 175 fruit trees of various kinds, carefully and well selected, and including apple, plum, pear, cherry, prune and other trees—some 7 years old and all in excellent condition. A fine lot of stock and tools are also for sale with the land and improvement include. the land and improvement, including 10 cows, 1 yoke of oxen, 1 horse, 8 head of young stock (half Jersey) also bees, fowls, boat, etc. The place has a cash income of $50 per year from a logging camp, besides being near a good market for butter, eggs, beef, vegetables, hay or other produce. The whole property is offered very cheap—could be bought for less than $2,000—and possession will be given immediately if desired. The owner, on account of failing ilth, desires to engage in some lighter occupation. For particulars, enquire at the Argus office.

The High Water of 1880

Did not reach a point equal to that of 1876, but it was high enough to do a deal of damage. Time, however, will repair this, but time only makes worse every case of disease of the kidneys and urinary orgrus which a box of Oeegon Kidney Tea would cure. Sold by all Druggists.

Eastern Tourists.

Probably more Eastern tourists have visited this Northwest Coast during the present season than ever before, and they all bear testimony to our unsurpassep natural advantages and great resources and are enthusiastic in regard to our future when railroads shall have superseded the tedious ocean steamers and population comes pouring in. The proprietors of the Oregon Kidney Tea are equally sanguine of its future, for it has thus far cured every case of backache or disense of the kidneys and urinary organs that it has been tried on. Sold everywhere.

Rewar of Merit.

The Oregon Lidney Tea has been awarded two medals by the Oregon State Agricultural society, the first of bronze and the second gold, the difference in valence of the two indicating the increase in the esteem of the community which a year's trial of the remedy has induced. For all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs it is unsurpassed. Don't fall to rry it. Ask your Druggist for it.

Decay of the Teeth

Decay of the Teeth
Arises from various causes, but principally it may be attributed to early neglect or the indiscriminate use of tooth powders and pastes, which give a momentary whiteness to the teeth while they corrode the enamel. The timely use of that delicate around tooth-wash, Fragrant SOZODONT, will speedily arrest the progress of decay, harden the gums, and impart a delightful fragrance to the breath, it reanows those ravages which people sustain in their teeth from the use of sweet and acal articles.

Stocks and Honey.

Egw York, Dec. 1.—The stock market verges on a panie, but at the critical moment is held within bounds even by those working for lower prices. During the first hour rates declined to 5 for leading stocks, but a reaction began, and is still progressing good part of decline being recovered. Money commanded like premium, and is very hard to get. Bank fashlittles have been taxed to the utmost lately and they cannot help the tightness. The demand for money from the south and west is very large and is felt more than usual just now. Banks depend for replenishment chiefly on imports of specie, which have so far been inadequate. The treasury to-day begins payment of $2,812,500 interest on $4\%$ per cents.

THE NORTHERN PACIFIC.

More about the New Syndicates-The Road

More about the New Syndicate—The Road to be a ward on Al artisans.

New York, Dec. 1.—A Philadelphia special furnishes additional facts concerning the Northern Pacific syndicate. From the engineer's estimate it is thought that $10,300,000 will prove more than enough to complete all the lines. The syndicate take this amount in first mortigage 6 per cent, bonds, which are to be issued at the rate of $5,000 a mile. As the entire line will be over 2000 miles in length, it will be noticed that the issue will be exhausted before this limit is reached; but of the total issue, an amount equal to the bonds on the Pen d'Orellie division, which is bonded at the rate of $5,000 a mile, and the bonds of the Missouri division which is bonded at hair that amount, will be reserved to retire those bonds at maturity. The syndicate agree to take $10,000,000 of the issue during the coming year, and this is thought to be all that can be expended with advantage by the company. The Northern Pacific is to build the road itself, dealing directly with the contractors who do the work and without the intervening of a construction company. As the company has now completed road enough upon which to issue the entregamount of the bunds that are to be sold during the first year, work on three divisions of the line will begin simultaneously. The advance guard is now grubbling the line on the Montana division. The surveyors are locating the line on the Yellow-stone division or 420 miles, and work will soon begin on the Casade division on the Facinc coast.

Outrages on English Ve-sels by Natives of the 20 mmon tasseds.

San Francisco, Dec. 1. - From the Sydney Horsist of the 4th of Navember: The brigantine Corealis, while seeking harbor at Win, near Malata, of the Solomon group, was attacked by natives. Of the crew, the whites and one Fijian were killed. Capt. McKenzie, government agent, and a boat's crew, who were sahore at the time, pulled a distance of 40 miles to procure assistance. Three other vessels returned and recaptured the vessel. The natures of the murdered crew are Daniel Creener, mate; James Natherwood and Win. Kershaw, seamen; W. McKenzie, the captain's son, and William Huntley, apprentice. The steward, George Ward, was severely wounded, but managed to conceal himself till the vessel was retaken. Two native men, one woman and a boy, were captured and taken to Levaka. The natives of Reva completely weeked the residence of Mrs. Williams at Samatia, who narrowly escaped with her life. While the cutter Idaho, Captain McMillan, was recruiting labor at the Island of Sante natives boarded her under the pretense of inquiring for labor, and in the shence of a boat's crew at the shore tomahawked the captain, and the native crew remaining on board except two, who got below, obtained muskets and drove the murderers overboard. The boat's crew were attacked at the same time, and all were killed but two, who reached the cutter and salled away. The shooting of some natives and running down of some cances, about three mounts and only over the causes of the attack. The natives are armed with modern weapons obtained from Queensland, and grow daily more daugeous and insolent. Traders assert that no one's life is safe amongst the lelands, nor will be ac until there is a radical change in the absurd regulations which have nourished contempt in the native mind for the English flag.

"Say, pard you've stood by me through thick and thin, you have. It'll be one white spot on yer book in the next world, that will. Raise my head up, there, that'll do, old pard. You and 1, we've been a long time on the same road."

"Aye, that we have, Joe."
"Do, you know pard I'm going on the same road."

"Do you know, pard, I'm going on a long tramp in a little while?"

"You? why, where, Joe? You and I can't give up the road now?"
"Ah, yes, pard, we must; you'll stay here. Those rains—the cold, wet garments—they've done the job for me, pard. I'm going to apply at a new door in a short while."

"Why, you're sick, Joe. You'll have to rest here in this old barn till I can brace up your tired body a bit.

"Ah, friend, I've no need for bodily rest now. It is the soul, the mind that is heavy. I've kept up as long as I could, pard. But I didn't want to give out—

"Before! Come, pard! I'll tell you some hing. Do you see those beams up there? Yes; well, when I was a boy I've played many a time tag up there on the same beams. Those holes cut in the clap-boards up there under the eaves-I eut for my doves. Open the barn door there, that'll do. Do you see that little red house there at the further end of the lot? I was born in that house—yes, I was. I've felt this body growing weaker was. I've felt this body growing weaker every day, pard; but I kept up—I wanted to die near the old home." "'Old home, Joe?"

"Yes, this was the home of my boy hood. Here in this barn I've helped my father thresh many a bushel of wheat I've pulled the wagon out of the corner many a Sunday morning, hitched the team to it, and took the old folks to church. It was too good to last long, pard. I must go to the city, I thought. When I left the dear old home I was honest; yes, honest—and would wrong no man of a cent, knowingly."

THE BIG PORK DEAL. - The Chicago Times places the profits of Armour & Co.'s pork deal, now just closed, at $7,000,000. Newspapers are not usually let into the inner secrets of speculation, but the story runs that Philip Armour and his partner, John Plankington began the purchase of pork in August, 1879, buying 60,000,000 pounds of ribs and 60,000,000 barrels of pork. The price went 000,000 barrels of pork. The price went up, their paper profits reached $2,000, to collapse came last spring and the firm lost $3,000,000. The capital of the firm remained and the partners began at the lowest point last spring to buy again till they had practically secured control of the pork markets of the world. Sales to the amount of 500,000 barrels were skillfully made in order to provent the price from going up with a jump, and the steady market tempted in hundreds of speedlators. A "fiver" in pork during the steady market tempted in hundreds of specalitors. A "flyer" in pork during the last few months appears to have taken the place in the West of a flyer in grain last year—and when the net was drawn at last Armour & Co. had recovered their loss with $4,000,000 more. #### To Prevent Fires.

Most of the fires that occur might be avoided by proper care, and the follow-ing hints, if carefully observed, will aid ing hints, if carefully observed, will aid materially in avoiding such accidents:

1. Never leave matches where they can be reached by children, and if one should fall on the floor, be sure and search for it until you find it. A match, when trodden upon, readily ignites and if unphaseved may cause. nites, and if unobserved, may cause a serious fire, or, what is more likely, set a lady's dress in flames. Rats and mice have a great fondness for matches, and often carry them off to their holes, where, by nibbling, they set them on fire. Always keep matches in tin boxes, and never in paper packages.

2. Children should be strictly prevented from playing with fire, and severely punished, if caught so offend-ing. It is far better that they should undergo the inconvenience of wholesome chastisement than either set the house on fire, disfigure themselves or be burnt to death from the want of being severely punished for disobedience.

3. Never leave a lamp or candle burning at your bedside on a table when you go to bed, and avoid reading in bed; this is a most fruitful cause of loss of life and property.

If a piece of a paper is used to light a lamp, see that it is properly extinguished before leaving it, as it will sometimes burst out on fire after it is supposed to have been completely extinguished.

If there is an escape of gas, so that the smell of it is very apparent, open the doors and windows immediately to allow its escape, and facilitate the entrance of fresh air; and above all things avoid coming any way near with a light of any description. As soon as you can, shut off the gas at the meter.

Is "Damn" an Oath ?

"Damn," as a noun substantive is an old regular word, used frequently in English writers down to the first part of the seventh century. We do not see why so ponderous a word has been dropped by lexicographers. In some places, as, if lexicographers. In some places, as, if we speak of how original sin lies heavy on us, it seems a most appropriate word.
"We inherit, with Adam's nature, the damn cleaving to it!" This use of the word came down to our American grand-fathers, and lasted even till the time when the "Continental currency" was a dead "loss." So came the expression when the "Continental currency was a dead "loss." So came the expression "Not worth a Continental;" "Not worth a Continental damn," or "dead loss." And for short: "Not worth a damn"—or bit of paper that was a dead loss! It is not to the credit of our American lexico-It is graphers that they have not recognized this origin of a phrase peculiarly Ameri-can, and that if "slang" at first, having a basis in fact, like a countless number of other words, it has been enrolled as a factor in our accepted language—as "gerrymandering" has been. The people did better than their writers of primers, grammars, and dictionaries. Damn ers, grammars, and dictionaries. Damn means a loss (in American parlance, as above, a worthless scrip.) Damnable, above, a worthless scrip.) Damnable, for its general meaning, signifies "worthy of severe censure." Only when used in a theological connection does it imply what Puritans suppose. It, most certainly, is not "swearing!" And, ex-cept by the imposition of the Puritan signification, it is not cursing! And yet we remember hearing people, using a phrase whose history they knew not, say "I do not care a cuss"—meaning a curse.—[Freeman's Journal.

Some Things to Disbelieve.

When a man advertises for a partner, and wants a young man to put in a small investment of one handren or five hundred dollars and promises to pay him a realization of fifty or one hundred per cent. profit, don't believe it. When a man offers to give away knowledge of the ut-mest value for the cure of consumption, and any and all other diseases, by merely sending a three-cent postage stamp to pre pay lostage, don't believe it. When a man proposes to make every one else rich, and looks to other people's interest when a man offers to give you something of great value for some-thing of less value—in other words, you something for nothing, gives don't believe it. Many persons advertise on purpose to filch young men of their money gained by hard labor, and before entering into any speculation which may be offered to you take advantage of the many means at your command, ascertain the facts with reference to the proposed business before you invest, and thus assist in effectually breaking up these swindling establishments.

Prof. Fanning is Correct.—"No, gentleman, says the Professor, "ever gives a military salute to a lady." Well, hardly; we should say he wouldn't. The military salute differs from a simple, graceful wave of the hard to three ruffles of the drum's color, trumpets sounding the flourish and arms presented and ing the flourish and arms presented, and ing the flourish and arms presented, and so on up to the President, who is en-titled to a salute of twenty-one guns, and the "highest honors—all standards and colors dropping, officers and troops and colors dropping, officers and troops saluting, drums beating, and trumpets sounding." Now, if the gentlemen of America get into the habit of raising such a racket that every time they met a lady, it would be rather more startling than a chronic Fourth of July. Professor Fanning is correct. This sort of thing should be discouraged. A LITTLE WISE WOMAN.

Louis Clare had gone out for a walk quite early in the morning, and as it was Saturday, she had lingered over her enjoyment of the beautiful day, the fresh, sweet air, and the cool breeze from the sea. Louisa was a school teacher, and I am quite sure not one of the noisy, wild creatures whom she sought to guide in the paths of knowledge, enjoyed the weekly holiday as she did.

But even Saturday was not all holiday—she had brought home exercises to correct, and copy-books to look over; and she began to reflect that she could not afford to stay out much longer, even on holiday morning. She had sat down to rest for her long walk had tired her—on a seat formed by an old tree-trunk that had hain long enough to be all green and moss—covered, and only a little way in front of her the sea washed up against the rough, shingly beach. Louisa still lingered, and flung little, loose stones into the water, and as each skimmed the surface and disappeared she thougt.

'I must really go—this will be the last.'

Then, with an effort, she rose, and urned resolutely toward home; and as she did so she became aware of the figure of a man at a little distance. He was walking rapidly toward her, and though she scarcely recognized him, she was conscious of a familiar look about his ap-of a man at a little distance. He was walking rapidly toward her, and though she scarcely recognized him, she was conscious of a familiar look about his appearance—his figure, his walk—altogether he looked like some one she ought to remember, yet could not. As he came quite close, she uttered an exclamation which signified at once recognition and surprise; and she stood still staring at him and wondering.

It was Mr. Glover—Glover the millionaire, as some people called him; but he was past all doubt, the great man and the rich man of the place. Among other things, he was a power in the school where Louisa taught; and in that way she had seen him occasionally, and had exchanged words with him now and then. But never in all her experience had Louisa seen Mr. Glover—or any one else—look as that gentleman now looked. His face wore the pallor of the dead; his eyes were wild and haggard; his dress disordered and his movements uncertain and shaky like a drunken man's. He would were wild and haggard; his dress disordered and his movements uncertain and something told her she must do so.

Mr. Glover stopped and looked at her stupidly, as though the sound of his own name was strange to him, and he was trying to think what it had to do with him, or why it was spoken to him.

Louisa was frightened at herself, as well as at him, and began to tremble; and then her eyes filled up with tears that presently rolled down over her cheeks.

that presently rolled down over her cheeks.

"O, Mr. Glover," she sobbed, "what is is the matter—what is the matter? And then Mr. Glover—who was a good deal of a gentleman by nature—seeing a woman in tears, forgot his own trouble and looked at her attentively.

"Why, it is Miss Clare—little Miss Clare, the school ma'ann!" he said, as he recognized her. "And what is the matter with you, my dear? Why do you cry, and who has been annoying you?"
"No one—oh, no indeed—and there's nothing the matter except that you seem to be in such deep trouble sir, and—I was afraid."

"And that's why you are afraid—you cry for me?" asked Mr. Glover; "can it be possible?"

He sat down on the moss covered treetrunk where Louisa had been resting, and

He sat down on the moss covered treetrunk where Louisa had been resting, and motioned to her to also, he said:
"Sit down, Miss Clare, sit down."
Louisa obeyed instantly.
"Are you very unhappy, Miss Clare?"
asked Mr. Glover.
"Unhappy, sir—about what?"
"Oh! nothing in particular. I mean morely in a general way."
"I am not unhappy at all sir."
"Is it possible? And yet, your salary—let me think. I believe it is something about three hundred dollars a year that they give you?"
"Just three hundred dollars a year, sir."

"And yet you are not unhappy-are "Very seldom. I am very happy on the contrary. Ab! sir, it is not alone the possession of money that makes people happy."

And then, fearing she had said some-tning so personal it might be rude—for Mr. Glover was so rich and so evidently

"Do you think a man might ever be happy, and yet quite poor?" asked Mr. Glover—"so poor that, compared with what he had been, his position would be one almost of poverty?"

"Oh! yes, sir," said Louisa, with a gentle confidence in her own words; "I am quite sure of that; for what does the most extravagant wealth give more than one can enjoy by simply having enough? One can only eat, or drink, or sleep enough—at least one ought not to do so any more than enough," she added with any more than enough," she added with a smile, "and those who do are not hap-pier for it."

Mr. Glover looked at her as though she had solved the great problem of ex-

"What a wise little woman!" he said; and then drawing a pistol from his poc-ket, he rose took a few steps forward, and flung the weapon far from him with such force that it went singing through the air, and fell into the water beyond. Louisa had started up with a scarcely repressed a cry of fright; but as Mr. Glover returned and reseated himself, gratefully, "you have saved me from committing a great crime. I came out here to kill myseif with that pistol that you have seen me throw away; and but for the intervention, the tears in your gentle eyes, and the hopeful courage in your voice, I would have done it. I will tell you now—what all the world will know to-morrow—I am a ruined man. But I will not die like a coward; I will live and face the music, as they say. But I will not die like a coward; I will live and face the music, as they say. Good-byc, you wise little woman. You have saved a life—more, perhaps—you have saved an immmortal soul this morning simply by being the brave, contented, hopeful being that you are. Goodbye! goodbye."

He wrung her hand hard enough to bring the tears in her eyes, and turned away, while Louisa went home rather dizzy, her heart in a whirl, and altogether too much amazed by the scene just ended to think much about her own share of it.

When the state of Mr. Glover's money When the state of Mr. Glover's money affairs became public there was the usual nine days' wonder. He yielded everything to his creditors, and found that they were more nearly satisfied than he had hoped for; they even left him a little house which was once rented at a low rate to Louisa Clare's mother, and which Louisa, in her wildest dreams of future granders had once or twice which Louisa, in her wildest dreams of future grandeur, had once or twice wished some day might become hers. Beyond that he had absolutely nothing; but he was still an able man. He had failed honorably, and people were willing to trust him. And after it was all over he went one day to see Louisa and told her that he found she was right; his state of mixd was far from desperate. In fact, he was almost happy.

After that he went to see the little school teacher quite often—indeed so often that he seriously interfered with her duties; and when she came to know him quite well she used to tell him so, with the sauciest toss of her head, and a faint blush in her pink cheeks.

with the sauciest toss of her head, and a faint blush in her pink cheeks.
"I can't help it, dear," said Mr. Glover—he often called her so, for he was many years older than Louisa—she was such a child-like little creature. "You such a child-like little creature. "You are my counselor—my comforter—my all in the world. More than wealth, or houses, or lands—and though it looks as if I was going to be a rich man some time again, Louisa, it will be nothing to me without the wisest little woman in the world to show me what to do with my money, and the best way to make it a real source of happiness to myself and others."

So it came to pass that Louisa said.

So it came to pass that Louisa said, "Yes," being much entreated; and she went to live in the house she had vagnely dreamed of years before.

A Duel on Horseback.

The Earl of Glencairn challenged Licutenant-General Sir George Munro for grossly opprobrious language used by him toward the Highland troops, as being "no other than a pack of thieves and robbers." They met in a field near Dornock, "by gray daylight." They were both well mounted on horseback; each of them were to have one pistol, after discharging of which they were to fight with broad-swords. The pistols were fired without doing hurt. They then engaged with their swords, and after a few passes, my Lord had the good fortune to give Sir George a sore stroke upon his bridle-hand, whereupon Sir George cried eut that he was not able to command his horse; "and I hope," says he, "you will

Whereupon they both alighted, and at the first bout my Lord gave him a sore stroke on the brow, about an inch above his eyes, which bled so much that he could not see. His Lordship was going to thrust him through the body, but John White, his man, pushed up his sword, and said, "You have enough of him, my Lord."

His Lordship, in a passion, gave John a stroke over the shoulders, and then took his horse and came to his quarters. Munro and his brother went to headquarters, but with much ado, for the breeding at head and hand."

A Colporteur's Death and Fortune.

In the year 1849 Rev. Giles, wife and daughter resided in Setauket, Long Island. On the 28th of September, in that year, the husband and father left that year, the husband and father left home by stage for Stony Point, Long Island Sound, five miles distant, intending to return by water with a sail boat, and has never since been seen by his family. Many years passed, but Mr. Giles was never heard from, and it was at last supposed that he had been drowned. The fact that the sail boat had been found capsized led to this belief. Accepting this as true, Mrs. Giles became the wife of the late David F. Lyon, of Schenectady. On Tuesday, Nov. 9th, a man known as the Rev. John Edward Giles died of acute apopiexy at Niskaman known as the Rev. John Edward Giles died of acute approxy at Niskayuna Centre, Schenectary county. Upon his person was found nearly $20,000 in government bonds and bank notes. He was slightly demaged, and for years has followed the occupation of a colporteur. He was always reticent as to his family relations, saying he "did not like to speak of them," although he admitted he had a wife and child living. The body was taken to Schenectady and deposited in the vault temporarily, and finally Mrs. Lyons and daughter, whose name Mrs. Lyons and daughter, whose name is Giles, learned of the circumstances. "My son, I have decided to adopt a different course with you. Heretofore I have been careful about giving you money, and have wanted to know where every cent went to, and my supervision has, no doubt, been annoying to you. Now I'm going to leave my pocket book in the bureau drawer, with plenty of money in it, and you are at liberty to use all you want without asking me. I want you to buy anything you desire to: buy your own clothes, and feel as though the money was yours, and that you had not got to account for it. Just make yourself at home now and try and have a good time." good time.

self at home now and try and have a good time."

The boy looked at the old gentleman, put his hand on his head, as though he had "got'em sure," and went out to see the lamplighter climb that soft soap. The next day the stern parent went out into the country shooting, and returned on the midnight train three days later. He opened the door with a latch key and a strange yellow dog grabbed him by the elbow of his pants and shook him, he said, "like the agur."

The dog barked and chewed until the son came down in his night shirt and called him off. He told his father he had bought that dog of a fireman for $11 and it was probably the best dog bargain that had been made this season. He said the fireman told him he could find a man that wanted that kind of a

He said the fireman told him he could find a man that wanted that kind of a dog.

The parent took off his pants, what the dog had not removed, and in the hall he stumbled over a birch bark cance the boy bought of an Indian for $9, and an army musket with an iron ramrod fell down from the corner. The boy had paid $6 for that. He had also bought himself an overcoat with a sealskin collar and cuffs and a complete outfit of calico shirts and silk stockings.

In his room the parent found the marble top of a soda fountain, wheelbarrow and a shelf filled with all kinds of canned meat, preserves and crackers and a barrel of apples. A wall tent and six pairs of blankets were rolled up, ready for camping out, and a buckskin shirt and a pair of corduroy pants lay on the bed ready for pulling on. Six fish poles and a basketful of fish-lines were ready for business, and an oyster can full of grub-worms, for bait, were squirming on the wash stand. The old gentleman looked the lay-out over, looked at his pocket-book in the bureau drawer, as empty as a contribution-box, and remarked:

"Young man, the times have been too flush. We will now return to a specie basis. When you want money, come to me, and I will give you a nickel, and you will tell me what you intend to buy with it, or I'll warm you You hear me?"—[Springfield Republican.

A Nice, Light, Toast Lunch.

It often happens that after a late heavy dinner, or when arriving home late in the evening, or when one is an invalid or dyspeptic, and especially when a troubledyspeptic, and especially when a trouble-some tooth or other mouth ailment pre-vents proper mastication of harder food, one wants a light, easily digested and easily masticated dish of lunch. Well cooked oat-meal, the grains nearly whole and not "all in a mush," is quite good but is not always accessible, and is not liked by all. Latterly we have found the following very good, especially for a late supper or lunch, eaten only an hour or two before retiring: Toast some or two before retiring: Toast some slices of bread pretty well, scraping off any blackened, charred portion; lay the slices on a plate, preferably a soup-plate, and pour on preferably a soup-plate, and pour on cold milk enough to wet it through, and leave half an inch or so in depth of milk in the plate. Good milk; a little extra cream in it is all the better, and a very trifle of salt improves it for our taste. Put over the toast thus prepared an inverted large earthen bowl, or tin basin large enough to cover it, and set down upon the plate all round. Put this in a warm, not very hot, stove oven, two, three or more hours in advance. The milk will cook and evanorate, and its milk will cook and evaporate, and its substance be condensed in the toast, while the cover will keep the toast moist. It is then very good, and eats well without butter, though a little may be used if desired.—[American Agriculturist.

Gilhooly lives down on Galveston avenue, not far from a milkman. Yesterday he met the milkman, and taking nim off to one side asked him seriously "Wasn't there a fire in your barn early yesterday? I had a great notion to rush yesterday? I had a great notion to rush over to your assistance?" "Why, there wasn't no fire about the barn," said the milkman, his eyes sticking out like door knobs; "what made you think so?" "Nothing, except I saw you pump two buckets of water right quick and rush into the stable with them where you milk your cows."

Endeavor to be what you appear to be.

RICH DISCOVERIES.

At last the gold and silver mines of Alaska are becoming more known and their value demonstrated. We have always contended that in this unknown land would be found some of the richest mineral deposits on this continent, and if half the news is true which was brought by the last steamer from Sitka, our prophecy is already more than fulfilled. It is stated that rich placer diggings have been discovered at Takou, twenty miles long by eight wide, and that good pay dirt is the result. No sufficient prospect has been made to speak definitely of their value, but those who are there are fully satisfied with results, and it is expected there will be a great rush there during the coming spring

On the mainland, outside the coast range, between Auk and Schuck, the most extraordinary and wonderful discovery has been made of gold, silver and galena. The assays go into the thousands-one lot of ore showing $3,000 to the ton. The gold can be seen with the naked eye and can be felt by a blind man. A new mining district has been formed and named after Harris, the discoverer. He has taken up a town site of 160 acres, of land, situated on the coast. If these stories are true next summer will behold there one of the most flourishing mining camps on the Pacific coast. A few men are now there at work, old Alas ka mountaineers, mured to the hardships and cold of that peculiar cli-

Our source of information is from the most undoubted authority. The steamer Favorite has gone to the new diggings with Goo. E. Pilz, the asssayer, and mining engineer, whose party of prospectors are amongst the first locators of the new mines. Several of the most experienced miners who were wintering at Sitka have also goue in the Favorite to ascertain the truth of the report. We have ourselves seen some of the rock and it is fabulously rich in appearance. Still, until further advices are received, we would caution the public against putting too much reliance in . the statements made. There will be plenty of time between this and spring to ascertain the truth. The season of the year is inclement, the winter even here has set in with unusual severity, and and at Takou it is rigorous, boisterous and very cold. An unprece dented rush at this season might result in untold hardships and disasters. It is better to wait until the spring opens, when if these marvelous stories are substantiated we shall look for an exodus equal to that of the famous Fraser River excitement A number of valuable lodes of also been discovered, located and secured, porth of Cross Sound, and merged into a company composed of experienced and go-ahead men. Some of this rock-an average lothas been assayed, and realizes $180 in silver and $40 in lead to the ton. Specimens of this ore can be seen at the office of Major Morris, Special Agent. Samples have also been sent to the mining magnates of Boreels Building, New York. One mine of this kind only is needed to make all parties connected therewith independently rich. Major M. P. Berry, late Collector at Sitka, is President of the company. He is an old miner, and a man of great caution and experience.

We take pleasure in noticing the remarks contained in the recent report of the Secretary of the Navy, regarding the establishment of some form of civil government in Alaska, and also congratulate our neighbors there 44,000,00 bushels. How is President in his last message, wherein he recommends this to Congress, fully endorsing the report of Secretary Thompson in every particular. Once establish the fact of productive mines in Alaska, and the question of population is settled. It will not be long before she will have as many white people as there are in the state of Nevada We shall keep our readers advised as we hear from that,

SENATOR THAT SHALL BE.

"Harper's Weekly," for Dec. 4th, has these kind words for one of Connecticut's notable public men:

"No man has earned his Senatorial spurs more truly and satisfactorily than General and Governor Haw ley, of Connecticut, whom it is now said the Republican majority of the Legislature will unanimously elect to succeed Mr. Eaton.

General Hawley has been for some time a conspicuous figure in our politics, and wherever he has been seen in the furmoil the white plume of Henry of Navarre has seemed to flash. He belongs to the best kind of public men and of Republicans, a man instinctively sound and 'square' upon every great question, who believes not only that the Republican party has done a great work, but that it has a great work to do.

It is men like Hawley, upright, manly, brave, not ashamed of loyalty to great principles, and full of confidence in the moral forces in poli tics, who really carry the flag of Republican progress, and kindle the enthusiasm of youth. His great experience and ability, his incisive intellectual force, his intrepid heart and conscience and tongue, will make his entry into the Senate a public benefit, and a great re-enforcement to the Republican side."

General Hawley represents the truest, strongest and best type of Republicanism. It is a type of character so broad as to be not merely partisan, but American, and it forms the firm basis of enduring success for party and nation. It is founded in intelligent, truthful devotion to right principles and the planting of party banners on these foundations, knowing that however unpopular they may be in the present the future will vindicate the right and bring success to those upholding the truth.

General Hawley was the first volunteer from Connecticut in behalf of the Union in 1861, and was a strong favorite for the Presidency at Chicago, among those elements that ninally united in nominating General Garfield.

To BE SOLD .- Posters are out announcing that the U.S. Surveying Schooner Fauntleroy will be sold at public auction on Saturday, December 13th, at Olympia. The Fauntleroy was for many years under the command of Capt. J. S. Lawson, a portion of which time Capt. Chas. Willoughby was her sailing master. She was then rigged as a brig. In 1874 she was converted into a schooner, and has done good service for the Government. Having outlived her usefulness, she is now ordered sold at public vendue.

IRON.-The "Ledger" closes a long editorial, upon the subject of iron industries, as follows: "We hail with most cordial greeting the efforts of our neighbors at Port Townsend, hoping with perfect confidence that they will grow rich as they deserve. They have put their money into one of the most profitable investments, if the works and business are properly managed, that can be found in this part of the world. They can make iron with charcoal, and they can save in expense by wsing coke from Carbonado."

In 1875 we sent to France 5,700, 000 bushels of wheat; in the year ending June 30th, 1880, we sent on the decided stand taken by the this for an increase of business?

WOOLEN FACTORY NEEDED.

Upon this subject the Tacoma "Ledger" has the following:

"All the woolen factories on the Pacific coast are crowded with orders, and running on full time. This state of affairs has existed for a long period, and brings the fact prominently to the front that an establishment of this kind on Puget Sound, managed by men who know their business, could not fail to be profitable. As the case now stands, our wool is shipped to San Francisco and the East in the dirt-freight being paid on two pounds of grease and dirt to one of wool-manfactured into blankets and all kinds of cloth, shipped back to us again, and sold to consumers at rates ranging from $2 to $5 per pound, according to the quality and texture of the article. There are those who say that a woolen factory will not pay here, but the assertion is entirely erroneous, as any practical man knows who will figure on the proposition a moment. The attention of capitalists is invited to the suggestions here advanced."

The above is very well put, and ought to receive the attention that the importance of the subject de mands. Last winter Mr. Friemersdorf, a wealthy factory owner from Cardiff, Wales, half brother of Capt. deLion, of this place, paid Puget Sound a visit with a view to establishing a factory at some point on our waters. Just before his return he expressed himself highly pleased with the country, and stated to us that a railroad connecting the Sound with Eastern Washington would open the way for a large trade here in that business. We trust the field will not long lie unimproved.

EXPERIMENTS in cotton raising were made last year upon the Kern county lands of Haggin and Carr, in California, and with great success. It is reported that the fibre produced is equal to that of the best upland growth in the southern States, and so encouraging in all respects have been the results of the efforts made in this direction, that the owners named have declared their intention to plant a thousand aeres in cotton next season.

INFORMATION received at Washington by telegraph from China makes it certain that the new treaty on the subject of immigration will be entirely satisfactorily to the Pacific Coast sentiment. It does not attempt to regulate the subject by treaty stipulations, but broadly clears the way for Congressional action to restrict, to any extent the United States may deem advisable, the immigration of Chinese laborers.

THE Cunard line is launching a steamer 500 feet long; the Anchor line one 550 feet long; the Inman line one of 8000 tons; the Guion line one of 6400 tons; the North German line one of 5000 tons, and the Allen line one of 5500 tons. The business of the great Atlantic steam ferry requires constant addition to the number of vessels of all the lines.

THE Chicago "Times," an independent paper, which exhibited democratic tendencies during the recent contest, says: "The hour is not far distant when a republican administration and a republican congress must attempt to prevent the suppression of the negro vote in the southern states, or confess that their party has a questionable reason for existence."

Our tabul ir vote of the territory, inserted this week, shows a majority of 1,797 for Mr. Brents. THE decision in the debate on Wednesday evening, at the meeting of the literary society, was won by Prof. Kerr and Mr. Bradshaw on the part of the affirmative. The negative side of the question "Resolved, That the revenue law passed by the last legislature of our territory ought to be repealed," was ably supported by Messrs. Roberts and Haller. The discussion lasted an hour and a half, and brought out the various good and bad points of the law in their strongest light. The question for debate next week will be: "Resolved, That the President of the U. S. should be elected by the direct vote of the people, the person receiving the highest number of votes to be declared the choice." This question will be discussed by Mr. G. M. Haller on the part of the affirmative, and Mr. C. M. Bradshaw on the part of the negative-with such assistants as they may select. We look for some facts, tigures and items to be brought out in this debate. The members will be allowed to invite visitors, who will receive a cordial welcome.

Dinner was over at last, and Mr. Walter Currie, English Commissioner at the up-country station at Huttee-Bagh, in Northern India, had gone up on the verandah with his wife and his two guests, the Colonel and Major of the -th Light Infantry, to enjoy the cool of the even-

On three sides the house was suron three sides the noise was sur-rounded by its compound, a large en-closed space serving for the purpose of a courtyard, but the fourth was only separated by a small patch of garden from the public read, along which a number of native women were passing with their little pitchers upon their heads.

The sight of them naturally turned the conversation upon a favorite subject with all Anglo-Indians, viz., the character of the natives and the best method of dealing with them.

"There's only one way," said the Colonel, emphatically. "Tell 'em what they are to do, make 'em do it, and thrush 'em well if they don't. That's my way."

"Well, I venture to differ from you there, Colonel," said Mr. Currie, quietly. "I had to do some thrashing once or twice, I own, but most of my native servants seem to get along very well without it, and they serve me excellently, I assure you."

without it, and they serve me excellently, I assure you."
"I wish you had been in my place, then, retorted the Colonel; "you'd have changed your opinion, I warrant you. Why, the year before last, when I had charge of two battalions of the rascals down at Sutteepoor, because there was not another Queen's officer within reach—just like my confounded luck!—there was no getting anything done unless I did it myself. By Jove, sir, I had to doverthing at once—my own quartereverthing at once-my own quartereverthing at once—my own quarter-master, my own sergeant major, my own caterer, and—"

"And your own trumpeter, Col. An-nesley?" asked Mrs. Currie, with an arch

The Colonel's broad face reddened The Colonel's broad face reddened eminously, and an explosion seemed iminent, when a sudden clamor of an angry voice from the road below drew them all to the front of the verandah.

The cause of the disturbance was visible at a glance. Two half-drunken English soldiers, swaggering along the road, had come into violent contact with a native who was running past; and one of had come into violent contact with a native who was running past; and one of them, enraged at the collision, had felled the poor lad to the ground, and was unclasping his own belt with the evident intention of heating him unmeroifully. "Serve the young whelp right," shouted the Colonel, rubbin his hands; "that's just what they all want."

The other officer, Major Armstrong—popularly known as Major Strongarm—was a huge, brawny, silent man, whose forte lay in acting rather than in talking.

During the whole discussion he had

During the whole discussion he had sat like a great bronze statue, never uttering a word; but at the sight of this man ill using this child, he woke up rather startlingly.

To leap to the ground twelve feet below, to dart across the garden, to vault across the high stockade beyond, was but the work of a moment for the athletic major; and in another instant he had lifted the fallen boy tenderly from the ground, while saying to the foremost soldier, in the low, compressed tone of a man who generally means just what he says:

"Be off with you!"

"And who the deuce are you, shovin' yer nose in where you ain't wanted?"
roared the infuriated ruffian, to whose eyes the Major's plain evening dress bore no token of his being an officer; "jist

The sentence was never finished.

At the sound of that insolent defiance, Art the sound of that insolent detance, Armstrong's sorely tried patience gave way altogether, and the powerful right hand which had hewed its way through a whole squadron of Shik cavalry, fell like a sledge-hammer upon his oppo-nent's face, dashing him to the ground as if he had been blown from the mouth of a gun.

of a gun.
"Well done, Major Armstrong!"
shouted Mr. Currie from above. "You deserve your name, and no mistake."

At that formidable name the soldier took to his heels at once; and Armstrong, without even looking at his prostrate antaromist, proceeded to examine the hurts of the boy.

The latter was sorely bruised in many places, and the blood was trickling freathy over his swarthy face; but the little hero still did his best to stand erect, and to keep down every sign of the pain which he was enduring.

"You're a brave lad, and you'll make a soldier some day," said the major to him in Hindostanee. "Come with me, and I will see that no one molests you again."

The lad seized the huge brown hand which had defended him so bravely, and kissed it with the deepest reverence and the two then walked away together.

Six months have come and gone, and Mr. Currie's hospitable house presents a very different spectacle. The pretty garden is tramped into dust and mire, and the bodies of men and horses are lying thick among the fragments of the half-destroyed stockade, All the windows of the house are

All the windows of the honse are blocked up, and through the loop-holed walls peer the muzzles of ready rifles, show how readily the besieged garrison stands at bay against the countless ene-mies, whose dark, ferce faces and glit-tering weapons are visible amid the half-ruined building and matted thickets all speedily. Day was just breaking when two men held a whispered counsel in one of the upper rooms.

"No fear of the water running short," said Major Armstrong; "but, even upon half rations, the food will be out in four

'And then we'll just go right at them. and then we'll just go right at them, and cut our way through, or die for it!" growled the old Colonel, with a grim smile on his iron face, for, with all his arshness and injustice, Col. s grit to the backcode. We must not say anything to them about it, though," he added, with a side glaace at Mr. Currie, who was standing in the fur-ther corner, was anxiously watching the thin, worn face of his sleeping wife.

At that moment a loud cheer from be-low startled them both, and the next mo-ment Ismail (the "Major's boy," as every one now cilled him) burst into the room with a glow of unwonted ex-gitement on his dark fee.

"Sahib," cried he, "there is hope for yet! A detachment of Ingleez (English) are coming up the other bank of the river; if we can send word to them as they pass, we are saved!" "How do you know?" asked the Major, eagerly.

eagerly.

"I heard the Sepoys say so, when I was lying hid among the bushes yonder," answered the lad.

"Among the bushes yonder?" roared the Colonel, facing around. "Have you actually been in the midst of those cutthroat villains, listening to what they said! Whatever did you do that for?"

"I did it for Sahio Armstrong's sake," replied the how, proudly: "because he replied the boy, proudly; "because he was good to me."

The Colonel turned hastily away to hide the flush of not unmanly shame that overspread his hard face; and Armstrong smiled slightly, as he heard him mutter:

"By Jove! these chaps are'nt so black as they're painted, after all."
"But if the troops are beyond the river, how can we communicate with them?" asked Mrs. Currie, who, awakened by the shouting, had arisen and joined the group. "They may not pass near enough to hear the firing, and we have no possible means of sending them werd."

"Fear nothing for that, mem-sahib," (madam,) answered the Hindoo boy, quietly. "I will carry them word myself."

"But how can you possibly do it?"
cried Mrs. Currie, thunderstruck by the confident tone in which this mere child spoke of a task from which the hardiest veteran might well have shrunk.
"Listen, Sahib," answered Ismail. "I will slip out of the house and make a dash into the enemy's lines, as if I were deserting from you to them, and you can tell your people to fire a shot or two after me with blank cartridge as I go.
Then the Sepoys will receive me kindly. Then the Sepoys will receive me kindly, and I will tell that you are all dying of thirst, and that they need only wait one day more to be sure of you, so that they won tcare to make another attack. Then, when they have no suspicion, and think I'm quite one of them, I'll steal away, and slip across the river."

"But are you quite sure the Sepoys will believe you?" asked Maj. Armstrong, doubtfully.

doubtfully.

"They'll believe this, anyhow," re-plied the boy, deliberately making a deep gash in his bare shoulder and staining his white frock with the blood as he glided from the room, followed by Armstrong.

The plan was soon explained to the

The plan was soon explained to the men below and a moment later Ismail's dark figure was seen darting like an arrow across the open space in front of the building, followed by a quick discharge of blank cartridges from the marksmen at the loopholes. The sound of the firing drew the attention of the Sepoys, several of whom ran forward to meet him.

In another instant he was in the midst of them.

"I can scarcely see for those bushes," that he seems to be said Col. Annesley; "but he seems to be showing them the wound on his shoulder, and telling them it was all our At that moment an exulting yell from the enemy came pealing through the air. "That's the story of our being short of water, for a guinea!" said the Major was a very good thought of his. If it only delays their attack two days longer there may be time for help to arrive vet."

Slowly and wearily the long hours of that fearful day wore on. The heat was so terrific that even the native soldiers of the garrison could barely hold their own against it, and the handfu! of Englishmen were also helpless. Had the Sepoys attacked them, all would have been over at one blow; but hour passed after hour, and there was no sign of an

At length, as after noon gave place to evening, a movement began to show itself in the enemy's lines. Thin curls of snoke rising above the trees showed that the evening's meal was in preparation; that several figures with pitchers in their hands were seen going toward the river, among whom the Colonel's keen eye detected Ismail.

"By George!" cried the old soldier, slapping his knee exultingly, "that lad's worth his weight in gold! There's his way down to the river right open to him without the' least chance of suspicion. Why, he's a born gentleman—nothing At length, as after noon gave place to Suddealy, as Ismail stooped to plunge his light wooden dipper into the water, it slipped from his hands and went floating away down stream. A cry of dismay, a loud laugh from the Sepoys, and then the boy was seen running frantically along the bank and trying in vain to catch the vessel as it floated past.

"What on earth is he up to?" grunted the Colond, completly mystified.
"I see!" cried Major Armstrong, triumphantly; "there's a boat yonder among the reeds, and he's making for it. Well done, my brave boy!"

But at that moment a yell of rage from the Sepoys told that the trick was discovered.

Luckily those on the bank had left their pieces behind, or poor Ismril would soon have been disposed of; but the alarm instantly brought up a crowd of armed comrades, whose bullets fell like hail around the boat and its gallant little

"Let us fire a volley and make a show of sallying out," said the Colonel; "It'll take their attention from him."

But in this be was mistaken. The first rattle of musketry from be-hind the house did indeed recall most of Ismail's assailants, but at least a dozen were left, who kept up an incessant firstriking the boat again and again.
Il at once the Colonel dashed 1 glass to the floor with a frightful oath. Between the two guests of smoke he had seen the boat turn suddenly over, and go whirling down the river, keel upward.

"There's an end of the poor lad," muttered the veteran brokenly. "God bless him for a brave little fellow. And now, old friend, we must just die hard, for there's no hope left."

The first few hours of the night passed quietly, and the exhausted defenders, utterly worn out, slept as if drugged by opium. But a little after midnight the quick ears of the two veteran officers—the only watchers in the whole garrison, except the sentries themselves—caught a faint stirring in the surrounding thickets, which seemed to argue some movement on the part of the enemy. on the part of the enemy.

Listening intently for a few moments, they felt certain that they were right, and lost no time in arousing their men. The scanty store of food were opened once more, and, crouching together in the darkness, the doomed men took what they fully believed to be their last meal on earth.

"They're coming," said Maj. Armstrong, straining his eyes into the gloom through a loop-hole. "I hear them creeping forward, though I can't see them."

"What the deuce was that?" exclaimed the Colonel, suddenly. It looked like a firey arrow flying past."

"It's worse than that," said the Major, in a low voice. "The rascals are shooting lighted chips of bamboo on to the roof to set it on fire. Send the women up with buckets to flood the thatch; there's not a moment to lose."

"I'll go and see to it myself?" cried there's not a moment to lose.
"I'll go and see to it myself?" cried
"I'll go and see to it myself?" cried

Mrs. Currie, hastening out of the room. But the power of this new weapon had already become fatally manifest. The house was an old one, and dry as tinder from the prolonged heat, and as fast as the flames were quenched in one place they broke out in another.

When day dawned the fire had already got a firm hold of one corner of the building, and a crushing discharge was poured upon all who attempted to extinguish it, while the triumphant yell of the human tigers below told them that they feltsure of their prey.

"It's all over with us, old fellow," said the Colonel, grasping the old comrade's hand; "but at least we shall have done our duty.

our duty."

"Give me one of your pistols," whispered Mrs. Currie to her husband, in a voice that was not her own. "I must not fall into their hands alive."

At that moment Maj. Armstrong was seen to start and bend forward, as if listening intently; for he thought—although he could scarcely believe his ears—that he had suddenly caught a faint sound of distant firing.

In another instant he heard it again, and this time there could be no more doubt, for several of the others had caught it likewise, and a gleam of hope once more lighted up their haggard faces and bloodshot eyes.

and bloodshot eyes.

Louder and nearer came the welcome sound, while the sudden terror and con-fusion visible among the enemy showed that they, too, were at no loss to guess its meaning.

Then high above all the din rose the well-known "hurrah!" and through the smoke-clouds broke a charging line of glittering bayonets and ruddy English faces, sweeping away the cowardly murderers as the sun chases the morning mist.

"That boy's worth his weight in gold," said Col. Annesley, as a few hours later, the listened to Ismail's account of how he had dived under the boat and kept it between himself and the Sepoys, that they might think him drowned. "He's the pluckiest little fellow I've seen, and although he belongs to the Major, I'm going to take my same of helping him,

Tom (eight years old): "Well, you see, when I go to bed I ask God to take care of me whilst I am asleep; but, when I'm awake, there's no need, because any little boy of my age can take care of himself then."

The unities not preserved: Last Sunday a Galveston boy came home radiant from Sunday school and exclaimed: "I was the only boy in my class. All the rest of the boys went down to the railroad to see the circus come in." "That's right, my son," said the proud parent; "never neglect your Sunday school duties. But did the circus really arrive?" "Of course it did. Didn't I see it myself?"

self?"
Says the New York Commercial Advertiser: "The Buffalo Express wants to know who invented kissing. We don't think it was ever invented; it just came kind o' natural, like a shock of sugar-coated electricity. Our first mother, in her maiden innocence, asked Adam to tell her if her back hair was all right, and we presume he couldn't help it. We couldn't if we had been Adam, and the girl's mother away at prayer meeting. girl's mother away at prayer meeting.

Huffy People

One of the oddest things to witness, if not one of the most disagreeable to encounter, is the faculty which some people have for taking offense where no offense is meant—taking "huff," as the phrase goes with reason or without—making themselves and everybedy else uncomfortable, for nothing deeper than a mood or more than a fancy. Huffy people are to be met with, of all ages and every station, neither years nor condition bringing necessary wisdom and unsuspiciousness; but we are bound to say that the larger proportion will be generally found among women, and chiefly among those who are of an uncertain social position, or who are unhappy in their circumstances, not to speak of their tempers. Huffiness, which seems to be a self-assertion in what may be called the negative form, and which the possessors thereof classify as a high spirit of sensativeness, according as they are passionate or sullen, is in reality the product of self-distrust. The person who has self-respect, and nothing to fear, who is of an assured social status and happy private condition, is never apt to take offense.

Many and great are the dangers of action with huffy people; and as sure as One of the oddest things to witness, if and happy private condition, is never apt to take offense.

Many and great are the dangers of action with huffy people; and as sure as you are to flounder into the bog with them, while you are innocently thinking you are walking on the solidest esplanade, the dangers of speech are just as manifold. The dangers of jesting are, above all, great. It may be laid down as an absolute rule which has no exception anywhere, that no huffy person can bear a joke good-humoredly, or take it as it is meant. If you attempt the very sima joke good-humoredly, or take it as it is meant. If you attempt the very simplest form of chaffing, you will soon find out your mistake; and not infrequently the whole harmony of the evening has been set wrong because a thinskinned, huffy person has taken a pleasant jest as a personal affront, and either blazed out or gloomed sullenly, according to his or her individual disposition and direction of the wind at the time.—[Household. -[Household.

Own a Home.—Every man who has or expects to have a family, should strive to become the owner of a home, for without one he can never feel or be independent. With a home of his own he becomes better contented, feels a deeper interest in public offsire and is a deeper interest in public offsire and is becomes better contented, feels a deeper interest in public affairs, and is a better member of society. No man should rest satisfied until he possesses at least a small portion of the grandest of all the estates—lawd—the fruitful mother of all the productions which sustain existence, secure comfort and give stability and independence to life. Every man makes his life what it is out of the material circumstances which surround him. How different the feelings of a family with a home they can call their own from those who are dependent tenants.

OFFICE OF THE "INDUSTRIAL ERA."

To Whom it May Concern:
I take a great pleasure in making the following statement: I have been efficied with a disease of the kidneys for the past two years and have tried numerous remedies with only parial and temporary relief. Waraer's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure was recommended to me, and aftertaking it the pain and distress left me, and I am to-day feeling strong and well. I am perfectly satisfied that Warner's Safe Kidney Cure is the medicine needed, and can cheerfally recommend it to others.

OUR WASHINGT ON LETTER

WASHINGTON, D. C. Nov. 20, 1880. THE FUTURE WASHINGTON, AND THE COMING PRESIDENT. A NEW SO-CIAL BRA PREDICTED, LITERATURE VERSUS THE WALTZ.

A ride around the city of Washington brings one to the realization that this city is becoming,, in fact, what it has heretofore claimed without much reason, a tachionable as well as a political centre. The capitals of all nations are their great so cial centres, as a rule. Washington has been an exception, but it is so no longer. Its climate, its freedom from business entanglements, i s political life, its honors and distinctions, and its society have drawn to it that great and increasing class of people who have money to spend and leisure to enjoy, and have retired from or "cut" business. The wonderful change that has taken place in the fashionable West End proves that this class is making its winter home here. The increase in the number of elegant residences is astonishing, and all the other appurte nances of wealth and opulent leisure are too marked to escape observation. It is thought that the White House, under the administration of President Garfield, will tend to increase the popularity of Washing ton and elevate the tone of society. He is known to be devoted to intellectual cuiture, is, in fact, the President of a local literary society, in which he takes great interest, is a student of the classics, a religious teucher, and a man of letters; and it may be concluded that such influ ence as the White House has will be cast in the intellectual rather than the srixolous scale of society. The cultivation of the intellect will displace dancing as an amusement, perhaps, and pretty women will discuss the classics instead of indulging in that reckless feat of contortionism, "the racquet." The Capital City may thus invade the province heretofcre ceded, by right of presump tion, to intellectual Boston. There will probably be a rage for literary societies as the result of all this, and people with a reputation for "culchaw" will be looked upon as minor deities. As there is always a class ready to take advantage of the mutations of society to impose the spurious for the real upon those who do not know the difference, the longbaired poet, who poses in an attitude of contemplation, and the blue stocking, who musses her hair, chews her penholder, and looks unutterable things, will and those who will worship at their alturs. But out of it all, no doubt, will grow a higher and better social sentiment. A social innovation is most devoutly hoped for by all except those newspaper correspondents who were born to describe what Mrs. Shoddy wore, and how sweet Miss Sweetie Wildwood looked at Mrs. Shoddy's danc

It is thought not improbable that Mr. Garfield, on taking the place now compied by Mr. Hayes, will send Mr. Hayes as minister to France. For several reasons this would be highly proper. Mr. Haves has given the country a clean and eputable administratian, a fact which contributed more to Mr. Garfield's success than anything else. Again, the high place held by Mr. Hayes in public estimation, and the recognition he would receive as an ex president of the United States, would render his appointment upon a firs class foreign mission a very worthy one. Gen. Noyes of Ohio is now our minister to France. It is believed he will be recalled, as it is related that he joined in the contempts to blacken the fatter's character began some years ago, and that they have not since spoken to each other.-"Oregonian."

A EATHER good story comes from an Indiana town, which is worth telling even if it is a tardy one. The democrats of the village shared the condence of their distinguished statesman, William H. English, and were absolutely sure of the perfect triumph of the democratic ticket. On the night of the election they placed a loaded cannon on the town square, and patiently awaited the news. It came-and the democrats slunk home, leaving the unfired cannon behind. Thereupon the enthus iastic republicans placed over the dumb mouth of this piece of ordnance a card bearing the well known words of the hymn:

"A charge to keep I have."

Notice to Tax-payers. OF JEFFERSON COUNTY.

The duplicate assessment roll of the county for the year 1880 is now in my possession for the collection of taxes levied therein; payable at the Cornty Treas-

Ayer's

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The Vigon cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair,

The Vigor is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the tollet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.
