Early Life of William Henry Seward.

And, first, the school-boy—say about twelve years of age: a thin, pale, under sized, sandy-haired, freckled-face boy. He lived then in a pleasant, very small village, of about a hundred inhabitants, named Florida, in Orange county, New York. His father was a wealthy physician, of Welsh extraction, who gained his fortune by adding a large mercantile business to the practice of his profession—an exact, just man, who lent money to the neighboring farmers, and made them pay their interest punctually on the day. Dr. Seward, like most of the progressive men of that day, was a Jeffersonian Democrat. He served in the Legislature, and was County Judge in Orange for seventeen years. He lived to 1849, when his son was the foremost man of the State of New York.

An anecdote, which Mr. Seward himself used to relate, will set that sandy-haired school-boy distinctly before us. He was driving his father's cows home one evening, reading as he walked, oblivious of everything but his book and his cows. Some young friends of his, seeing him thus absorbed, kept throwing small stones at him, which he parried by walking backward, his eyes fixed upon the page. He soon wandered from the path, and so, missing a bridge over a small, deep stream, fell into it. Luckily an elder brother saw the catastrophe, and pulled him out, in time to save his life. This little story reveals to us the eager, studious boy, of mind somewhat precocious, and body ill-fitted for the world's rougher work. The house in which he was born was standing a few years ago, and probably still stands; and a tree of the ancient primeval woods casts its shade over a spring to which the boy was accustomed to repair, in order to learn his lessons in quiet.

Next, a college student at Union, under President Nott; an active member of his college society, foremost in the debates, and zealous for the interest and honor of the society. He was one of those students who are out of bed at four in the morning, and get their work so well forward that, in the evening, they are gentlemen of leisure, reading, visiting, practicing, or cramming for the next debate.

In his senior year he left college for a while, and spent six months as a teacher in Georgia. What he saw there of the working of the "peculiar institution" made an indelible impression upon his mind, and had an influence upon his conduct as a public man as long as he was a public man. He learned this lesson: that no man is good enough to be intrusted with irresponsible power over another.

A lawyer next. In his twenty-second year he went to live at Auburn, in the State of New York—a beautiful town, blackened though it still was by the stumps of the original forest. And now the romance of his life occurred. He entered the law office of a practitioner who was old, rich, and almost ready to retire from business, Elijah Miller by name. Judge Miller, as he was usually styled, had a beautiful daughter. Such was the engaging merit of this most fortunate of young men, that, by the time he had been a year in Auburn, he had won the confidence of the father and the heart of the daughter; and each of them gave him the most decisive possible proof of preference. The father gave him a share in his business, and the daughter her hand in marriage. The business he could have acquired for himself; but the wife whom he had won had few peers among women. In the circle which gathered round them, there were always some who had their objections to this or that in Mr. Seward's conduct; but who ever heard of anything but praise of his wife? I have myself heard Mr. Seward's most successful opponent speak of his wife as the best woman and most perfect lady of her time.

He was a laborious and successful lawyer, who excelled in patent and other cases involving research. He appears, also, to have had a generous inclination to defend the weak against the strong. There was one remarkable case in his practice, in which he set his face against the community in which he lived, and defended a man for whose blood all Western New York seemed thirsting. The prisoner was a negro, lately discharged from the State prison at Auburn, who entered a lonely farmhouse near Auburn, in the night, and murdered the whole family, father, mother, child and grandmother. It was with the utmost difficulty that the sheriff prevented the people from tearing the murderer to pieces.

The man had not a friend nor a dollar in the world. He was a negro, and he had been five years in the State prison. When he was arraigned, and the Judge asked him if he had any lawyer to defend him, the man said, stolidly: "I don't know."
"Will any one defend this man?" asked the Judge.
Mr. Seward rose and said:
"May it please the Court, I appear as counsel for the prisoner."

The truth was, that Mr. Seward and two or three benevolent persons of Auburn had become satisfied, after a laborious investigation of the case, that the man was an idiot, subject to fits of mania; and Mr. Seward was resolved upon trying to prevent his neighbors from doing themselves the grievous wrong of putting him to death. For four weeks this lawyer exerted himself, night and day, to save the prisoner; frowned upon, as he passed, by people who had esteemed him for years. The rage of the people could not be appeased, and of course the advocate had to share the odium. In his closing speech Mr. Seward had a few eloquent and touching words in defence of himself. On other occasions, he said he had been cheered on by popular sympathy, or at least by the gratitude of a client.

"But I speak now," he added, "in the hearing of a people who have prejudged the prisoner, and condemn me for pleading in his behalf. He is a convict, a pauper, a negro, without intellect, sense, or emotion. My child with an affectionate smile disturbs my care-worn face of its frown whenever I cross my threshold. The beggar in the street obliges me to give, because he says, 'God bless you!' as I pass. My dog caresses me with fondness if I but smile on him. My horse recognizes me when I fill his manger. But what reward, what gratitude can I expect here? There the prisoner sits. Look at him. Look at the assemblage round you. Listen to their ill-suppressed censures and their excited fears, and tell me where I can expect to find reward or recognition. I am not the prisoner's lawyer. I am, indeed, a volunteer in his behalf; but society and mankind have the deepest interest at stake. I am the lawyer for society, for mankind, shocked beyond the power of expression at the scene I have witnessed here, of trying a maniac as a malefactor."

The eloquent plea did not avail. The man was convicted and sentenced to death. He died soon after in prison, and a post mortem examination showed that the brain was so permeated by disease as to be destroyed as an organ of intelligence. The trial is vividly remembered to this day in Auburn.

Who ever thought of William H. Seward, as a military man? He was, however, for some years extremely active in the militia, and commanded a regiment noted in the county for its good discipline; and he was generally known as Colonel Seward until the whole country heard of him in 1839, when he was but thirty-eight years of age, as Governor Seward of New York.

His political life is fresh in the recollections of us all, and the whole country, I believe, is agreed in honoring his memory as a public servant whose career was not free from error, but in which the good greatly preponderated over the evil. Like most benevolent men, he was apt to be too sanguine, too hopeful. When the war broke out in April 1861, he was perfectly sincere in saying that the trouble would be over in sixty days—an error which brought upon him great ridicule. But, on the other hand, in the darkest hours of the war, and even when he lay himself in bed gashed by the assassin's hand, he had a joyful confidence, not only in the triumph of his country, but in the final triumph of his country's principles all over the world.

usually appear till the company were pretty numerous. When at length he came in, you saw a little man with white hair, ruddy complexion, and a countenance marked by a scar, of which all the world knows. His son, who received the company, wore a black, close-fitting cap, which also recalled that night of horror which no one can ever forget who was old enough at the time to follow public affairs. Mr. Seward's manner was quiet and friendly, such as became his character, his country and his place.—Parton.

A Fizzle
There is a queer fellow who lives somewhere up in Chimacum, who comes to town about once in eight weeks to buy clay pipes, he says; but other people, who are very observant, insist that he comes in to get drunk. He has a very effeminate voice, and when he talks (when drunk—we never saw him sober) he squeaks his words out through his nose. His face covered with beard, hair all awry, and brows arched over a pair of full eyes give to him, as he stands before you something in the shape of a letter Z, a decidedly comical appearance. Last fall, on election day, a couple of our most respectable citizens got hold of this wight to take him to the polls. He was perfectly willing to go and vote, but he wanted a "N-glass n-of whisky, first." Well they treated him two or three times, one of them gave him a hat, for he had lost the one he wore into town; but the genius went to sleep on them before they got him to the polls, and didn't wake up until after sunset. The other day this fellow came into town and as usual got drunk. Some of the fellows got about him and concluded to give him a benefit. As usual he had his pocket full of clay pipes. He dropped into Hunt's

"N-good n-evenin', Mr. Hunt; n-give us a n-glass n-of whisky, n-if you please," he squeaked.
Just then George H. ran behind the bar and yanked a tin out of the hurdy gurdy. "This hurdy gurdy—we don't mean a Dutch Girl—is made of wood and brass, though there's a good deal of brass about all hurdy gurdies. Well, as we were about to say, this hurdy gurdy was left in at Hunt's to be raffled for; but there is scarcely any need for that trouble, as the boys are very fond of it, and are loving it to destruction. As soon as the tune started Squeaky forgot his liquor, and commenced to dance. Jim. B. got hold of one of his pipes and put in a whacking big charge of powder and a thin layer of tobacco on top. As soon as the pipe was filled, all hands stopped for a smoke.

"Take a smoke," said Jim to Squeaky.
"N-no; n-le's n-ave a tune—n-I kin dance—you bet!"
"Oh! pshaw! give us a rest. Take a smoke."
"N-all right, then. Give n-us a light."
Squeaky stuck the pipe in his mouth and commenced puffing, while Jim. B. held the match to light it; but Squeaky didn't hold the stem firm in his teeth, and the bowl of the pipe fell over towards Jim, and as it went "Whiff" went the powder.
"N-oh, give n-us a tune—n-I n-ain't afraid n-of powder!"
But Jim was. A particular friend of his was picking grains of powder out of his face all the evening, and next day he was veiled behind oil silk and cotton saturated with sweet oil. Squeaky went home to Chimacum all right next morning.

THE BRASS BAND.—The Brass Band is getting on finely, and it is the intention of Professor Shapcott to give the band an outside drill on Saturday evening. We should be pleased to see P. T. encourage the band with a little pecuniary aid towards paying its expenses, which run up, for tuition, etc.

San Francisco vs. Portland.

The high handed manner of doing business that is practiced by the steamers plying between Portland and the Sound is creating a great feeling of antipathy with our merchants against the line. So strong, indeed, is this antagonistic prejudice that it has made itself felt at Portland, and not long since a sailing vessel was laid on there to load for the Sound. By some hocus focus arrangement, between Ben. Holiday and the shippers, or with the owners of the sailing vessel, probably with both, the vessel was withdrawn, and in her stead two steamers were dispatched to the Sound in quick succession. But the state of affairs is not changed so far as our merchants are concerned. Freight is still held at $5 per ton—$1 higher than is charged from San Francisco to the Sound. And it is also regulated by the carriers that 1,800 pounds of shorts, or 1,500 pounds of bran shall be considered a ton of freight. A specific clause to the effect that the consignee is responsible as soon as the freight is loaded from the ship's tackle, together with the fact that these steamers are allowed by our Customs authorities to enter and discharge at any time of the night, is another serious drawback to our merchants, particularly so as there is no regularity about the time of arrival. There is a wholesome rule in force on the other side of the Strait that might well be adopted on this side, and that is not allowing vessels to discharge freight, outside of reasonable business hours. This rule would render harmless the rule of the carriers, for the consignees could then be on hand to receive their freight. But if the authorities whose duty it is will not adopt and enforce such a rule, the shippers and receivers should refuse to accede to the unreasonable demands of the carriers and in this way an equitable arrangement might be effected.

Some time ago an attempt was made here on the Sound to organize a company, buy a steamer and place her on the route between the Sound and San Francisco. The figuring of competent business men made a handsome margin over and above the expenses of running the steamer and interest on the capital invested, for profit. But while our business men see and feel the necessity for such an enterprise, they are unable to benefit themselves. Capital, the motive power of everything, is lacking, and while our people can easily figure on the profits of $100,000 judiciously invested, it is a far more difficult task to get that sum in hand. It cannot be spared from the business in which our money is already invested.

The accomplishment, however, of the idea of a steamer plying regularly between the Sound and San Francisco is a possibility and easily effected. Such a line would benefit San Francisco as much, if not more, as it would Puget Sound. It is a fact well known to all of us that Oregon produce can be bought in San Francisco and landed here on the Sound for less than we can ship it directly from Portland for. Why this is so, we are not at present fully prepared to explain; but it is a fact, and some of our merchants ship Oregon flour, hams and bacon by sailing vessels from San Francisco and realize a handsome per cent. by it. But the time of sailing vessels is too uncertain, and the most of our traders prefer to pay more and ship their goods by steamer from Oregon. Thus, it can be seen, were a steamer running between here and San Francisco, that city would command the entire trade of the Sound. But it must not be expected that any steamboat men will start this new line. Like book peddlers, each steamship company has its specified "territory." Puget Sound has fallen to Holiday. He won't put on a boat, and no other company can infringe on him. The San Francisco merchants are the ones to establish this line. They are able to do it; their business would be largely increased by it, and being themselves the backbone of the business for which the enterprise would be started, no outside competition against the line could effect them. The investment to them would be both safe and profitable.

Our Own Horn.

It is seldom that we tune our horn to sound praises of the Argus; but a translation out of the Koran says, "He who tooteth not his own horn upon the earth, whosever he may be, his horn shall not be heard in the kingdom of Heaven," and being thus solemnly admonished, we toot accordingly. Our sounds, however, are all echoes:

Mr. J. M. Kennedy, writes to us, from San Jose, Cal.:

"I must say that I like your paper; it is plucky, sensible and independent, and I hope it will prosper."

We thank our friend for his kind words, and hope we shall continue to merit his good opinion.

Gray & Co., of San Francisco, in a letter to some gentlemen in town, say:

"Your paper is small but sprightly."

The Argus has swelled some, since that letter was written and as soon as we recover from the measles it will be none the less sprightly on account of its bulkiness.

We thank our brethren of the press for their favorable notices:

The Argus, published at Port Townsend, has been enlarged and changed from a semi-weekly to a weekly issue. It is a neatly printed and creditably conducted paper.—Seattle Dispatch.

The Argus is a very neat and readable sheet, and should be better patronized.—Tribune.

U. S. S. Tuscara.

The United States steamship Tuscara, Commodore Belknap, arrived here from San Francisco, on Tuesday evening last. Her officers are, Commodore, Geo. E. Belknap; Lieut. Commander, Thos. F. Jewell; Lieutenants, Geo. A. Baldy, Geo. A. Norris, and F. M. Symonds; Master, Webster Doty; Ensigns, M. D. Hyde, and E. H. Taunt; Midshipmen, W. H. H. Southerland, C. H. Lyeth, V. L. Cottman, T. E. D. W. Veeder, A. M. Knight, M. A. Shuffeldt, C. F. Putnam; Asst. Surgeon, Jas. L. Neilson; Passed Asst. Paymaster, I. Goodwin Hobbs; Chief Engineer, Louis J. Allen; 1st Asst. Engineer, J. H. Harmony; 2nd Asst. Engineer, J. M. Emanuel; Gunner, C. H. Venable; Sailmaker, John Roddy; Carpenter, J. L. Thatcher; Boatswain, J. T. Barker; Capt.'s Clerk, F. Kimball; Pay Clerk, Geo. W. Prescott; Naturalist, W. F. Fisher.

The Tuscara is on a commission to sound out a track for a submarine cable from this coast to Japan. The soundings will be commenced from Port Angeles spit (Ediz Hook) will continue on to Atkha, one of the Aleutian Islands, and thence to the coast of Japan. The apparatus used for making the soundings is that patented by Lieut. Brooks, with recent improvements by Commodore Belknap—it being the most perfect and practical of any extant.

The Tuscara will be two or three months engaged in the work. The cable, however, will not be laid, probably for eighteen months or two years; but when it is, the present line of the Puget Sound, Telegraph will, in all probability be a connecting link between the first Pacific Submarine Cable and the great system of continental wires.

We are told that Messrs. Pincus & Packher, of Steilacoom, intend building a large vessel. Work will be commenced on her shortly. These gentlemen built the Clara Light, one of the most successful of the many craft launched from the stocks on Puget Sound. We hope their new venture will be as profitable as their former one has proved.

New Vessel.—A fine new sloop of about 12 tons, called the Magnolia, owned by Pincus, Packher & Blyth, has been lately built at Steilacoom.

What is the Matter?

It is a fact which none of us can deny, that in the great strides of advancement which our country has made during the last decade, in the increase of manufactures, of agriculture and of population, our Territory has sadly failed to do its duty. Our "talents have been buried in the ground." The years have steadily rolled on, our "balance sheet" is drawn, our account is deficient. What is the matter? Is it that we live in a country incapable of developing such results, is our climate of such severity as to hinder the practice of industries which have made our sister territories states of no mean importance? When we reflect on our advantages of location, our facilities for transportation, our forests of timber, our coal fields and quartz ledges, the fertility of our soil, our climate free from malaria, our fisheries, our productions and our markets. Do our advantages not compare favorably with those of Texas and Arkansas, with Michigan, Minnesota and Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri? And yet these a little while ago possessing but the name of States, some of them almost desolated by war and its evil influences, have in the last few years risen to a point of prosperity, which the wisest heads failed to predict. Their broad prairies have been converted into waving fields, their ranges are covered with valuable cattle, their mineral resources have been developed, the buzzing saw and noisy forge, the steamboat paddle and screech of the locomotive, all tell a tale of progress. And what have we been doing all this time? While encouraged immigration has swollen their population to hundreds of thousands, and the value of their lands has increased a hundred-fold, we have made, comparatively, little progress.

Self condemnation is not a pleasant thing. To look back on years of mispent time and to regret lost opportunities is apt to make the heart ache. And if such influences should be felt by individuals, why not by communities? The responsibility of a community is even greater than that of the individual—in the one case the fortunes of few are at stake, in the other the fortunes of many. Let us ask ourselves as a people, have we left a record behind us during the past few years that we should be proud to exhibit to the world, can we recall no lost opportunities, when by strict integrity and conscientious performance of duty, we might have materially advanced our condition and in a measure kept pace with the general progress of the nation? We fear not. The natural advantages of our country, have, to an extent, proved a curse instead of a blessing. A living can be had too easily. Too many of us have been idle, and as idleness is the inveterate enemy of virtue, we have repented the natural virtues of our own sowing. The practice of piety and morality so necessary to the maintenance of an orderly and prosperous community has been sadly neglected, and even the education of our children has not been properly attended to.

Let us turn over a new leaf. Micawber like, we have been long enough "waiting for something to turn up" and all the while, permitting the golden opportunities of the present to pass by unheeded. We must be satisfied with small profits, we must be patient and above all, we must practice industry and economy. The excellence of Athenian skill and the wealth of Persia, astonishing as it seems when we reflect on the condition of other nations at the time these were in their glory, was all owing to the untiring industry of their peoples. With them idleness was not only a disgrace, it was a crime. Let each member of a society follow steadily some legitimate occupation for a livelihood, and that which he has to do, let him do with all his might. This is the only avenue to success.

"God hath set Labor and rest, as day and night, to man Successive." And any departure from a well defined law of the Almighty, must inevitably bring with it, crushing consequences. TO WORK THEN!

PROCLAMATION By the Governor of Washington Territory. TERRITORY OF WASHINGTON, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, Olympia, August 30, 1873.

WHEREAS it appears from satisfactory evidence filed in this office, that a vacancy exists in the Joint Representative District, composed of the counties of Jefferson and Kitsap, by the removal from the Territory of Luther L. Moore, Representative elect from said District. Now, therefore, I, Elisha P. Ferry, Governor of the Territory of Washington, do hereby declare said office of Joint Representative for the counties of Jefferson and Kitsap vacant, and by virtue of the authority in me vested by law, do hereby order That a special election be held in the aforesaid counties of Jefferson and Kitsap on Monday the twenty-second day of September, A. D. 1873, for the election of a Joint Representative to represent said counties in the Legislature of the Territory of Washington for the unexpired term for which the said Luther L. Moore was elected.

In testimony whereof I have here to set my hand and caused the great seal of the Territory to be affixed. Done at Olympia in said Territory, this thirtieth day of August in the year of Our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Seventy-three, and of the Independence of the United States the Ninety-eighth. Divorce Notice. In the District Court of the Third Judicial District of the Territory of Washington, holding terms at Port Townsend, in and for the Counties of Jefferson, Clallam, Island and Whatcom.

JOSEPH H. BRIDGES vs. ANN BRIDGES—Action brought in the District Court of the Third Judicial District of the Territory of Washington, holding terms at Port Townsend for the Counties of Jefferson, Clallam, Island and Whatcom. Complaint filed in the County of Jefferson, in the office of the Clerk of said District Court, on the 4th day of February, A. D. 1873.

To Ann Bridges, Defendant: IN THE NAME OF THE UNITED States of America, you are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above named Plaintiff in the District Court of the Third Judicial District of the Territory of Washington, holding terms at Port Townsend, in Jefferson county, for the Counties of Jefferson, Clallam, Island and Whatcom, and to answer the complaint filed therein (a copy of which accompanies this summons) within twenty days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons— if served within this county; or, if served out of this county, but within the Third Judicial District, within thirty days; or, if served out of said District, then within sixty days—or judgment by default will be taken against you according to the prayer of said complaint.

This said action is brought to obtain a divorce from the bonds of matrimony entered into between you and the above named plaintiff, and for such other relief as may be just and equitable, and the Court is competent to grant in the premises, and you are hereby notified, that if you fail to appear and answer said complaint as above required the Plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief in said complaint demanded. Witness the Hon. O. Jacobs, Judge of the said District Court, and the Seal of the said Court, this 30th day of June, A. D. 1873. JAMES SEAVEY, Clerk. Bradshaw and Hall, Attys. for Plaintiff.

THE WEEKLY ARCUS.

LOCAL NEWS.

DEPARTED FOR SAN FRANCISCO.—Capt. E. S. Fowler, C. C. Bartlett and J. J. Hunt, Esqs., and Mrs. Shattuck, left yesterday on the North Pacific to take passage on the Prince Alfred for San Francisco. Capt. Fowler, who has been suffering for some time past with affections of the head, goes for health; Messrs. Bartlett and Hunt on business, and Mrs. Shattuck is returning home from a visit to her brothers—the Messrs. Learned. All were re-eraded on the eve of their departure from this place by the Vieuxtemps Brothers, and a chorus of gentlemen, and from the former the lady received a handsome wreath. Bon voyage, to all.

ACCIDENT.—On Wednesday the 3rd inst., a sad accident occurred at the Port Ludlow Mill. One of the employees, Nicholas Costly, had his right leg badly jammed against a "carriage," by a log making a sudden roll, while being placed in position. The unfortunate man came to Port Townsend on last Monday and was taken to the Hospital, where he received every attention. The injury is a serious one, although no bones were broken. At latest accounts Mr. Costly was doing well.

RECOVERED.—Dr. Calhoun informs us that Mr. Crandall, of Lopez Island, has recovered, and is pronounced cured by his physician. Mr. Crandall has been laid up for more than two months from gun-shot wounds accidentally received, and only about two weeks ago Drs. Calhoun, Taylor and Hill amputated his foot and the stump has entirely healed from first intention, which is unusual with old patients.

DYING.—The man Brown, who was shot and stabbed at Ludlow some months since, has at last yielded to the effects of his wounds and is dying. This man has clung to life with wonderful tenacity, and for a long time it was thought he would recover from the wounds that in nine cases out of ten would have killed a man outright; but the effects of an old disease combined with the wounds, and together they will gobble up their victim.

PUGET SOUND MINSTRELS.—This troupe has budded and blossomed here in Port Townsend, and to-morrow night, in the loveliness of its bloom and beauty, will gush to a delighted audience in the Good Templars' Hall. The talent comprising this troupe of minstrels is mostly native, and the wonder is, how it has been kept so long latent. Don't fail to go and see them.

THE WELL.—This item is becoming chronic. There is a little change in the symptoms this time, however. The well is down 156 feet, and the borers are banging away into a stratum of gravelly cement. Savants predict that when the hole is punched through this the water will flow. Hope it will.

MUSIC.—The Vieuxtemps Brothers are doing an extensive business in the music line with Gray & Co., of San Francisco. Almost every steamer has something for them. Yesterday they received a very choice selection of sheet music. They take orders.

NEW LAW FIRM.—The law firm of Bradshaw & Hall has been dissolved and Mr. Hall has associated himself with D. W. Smith, in the law business. See advertisements.

The ship Revere arrived at San Diego, Cal., on the 11th instant. Passage, seventeen days.

LUMMI RESERVATION TO BE SURVEYED.—Mr. Joseph M. Snow, of Couville, Island County, passed through on last Wednesday to the Lummi Reservation, the survey of which he will commence at once, and divide the same into forty acre lots, to be distributed among all the Indians on the Reservation wishing to avail themselves of the benefits of the Department regulations in reference thereto.—Mail.

REED'S PANORAMA.—This panorama was exhibited last evening to a small but appreciative audience. The paintings were all of them, of scenes with which many of us are familiar, and comprise the chief scenic attractions of the North-western corner of Uncle Sam's dominion—principally of and along the Colombia. Only two pictures were shown of Puget Sound views, Monnts Ranier and Baker; but as was explained to the audience, both of these pictures are detective and will have to go under the painters brush again. The panorama is generally correct, and when taken there will give our friends in the east a vivid idea of the grandeur of our mountain and river scenery, which excels in its varied beauty that of the most boasted of Switzerland and the Rhine.

The most cruel action of our Government, and at the same time evincing a total disregard for the lives and property of frontier settlers, is the compliance by the Department of the Interior with the demand of the Sioux chiefs for rifles and ammunition. When one contemplates such heartless disregard for the welfare of the frontiersmen of the United States on the part of these inefficient and imbecile officers of the Government, the desire naturally comes over one to see such tied to the stake and burned. In the name of God, how long must the people tolerate such heartless dealings on the part of corrupt and careless officials?

GRAND LODGE, A. F. & A. M.—The Grand Lodge, A. F. & A. M., closed its annual session on Saturday evening last. The following is the list of officers for the ensuing Masonic year: D. C. H. Rothschild, W. G. M.; J. R. Hayden, D. W. G. M.; Thos. S. Russel, G. S. W.; E. S. Saloman, G. J. W.; Benj. Harned, G. T.; T. M. Reed, G. S.; H. K. Hines, Chaplain; W. H. Wallace, Lecturer; S. P. Andrews, Marshal; Wm. E. Boone, Orator; J. E. Burns, Bible Bearer; Colin Chisholm, Sen. Gr. Deacon; J. M. Lowe, Jr. Gr. Deacon; Robert C. Hill, Gr. Deacon; Enoch S. Miller, Sword Bearer; R. G. O'Brien, Henry Bowman, Grand Stewards; Wm. Billings, Tyler.

Secret of a long life.

My Uncle Daniel Smith, of Oxford, Maine, was most emphatically a man of regular and precise habits.

"And well I may be," said he "I have done more hard work than father ever did."

"No," replied Mark, "he was never idle; but I never knew him to hurry."

"He stopped—he was not more than forty then—and setting the tail of his rake upon the ground, he answered me."

"I saw my Uncle Daniel, at the age of eighty-seven, swinging a scythe upon the very piece of intervalle where his son had sought in vain to bury him seven-and-forty years before."

TACOMA.—The hardest story on Tacoma came to us yesterday. It appears that after having visited Seattle, Admiral Pennock proceeded in the Saranac to visit the far famed terminus of the Northern Pacific Railroad on Puget Sound—Tacoma.

A South Salem girl agreed to kiss a young man every night for one year on consideration that he quit smoking.

The editor of the Gazette, having heard that sulphur in the socks will prevent cholera, has worried a stick of brimstone out of the new druggist, and now wants someone to loan him a pair of socks while he tries the thing.

A Clay County, Kentucky, auctioneer pulled out a revolver and announced: "If any man goes flogging around while this sale is going on, I shall interrupt him in his career. Put them shot-guns over by the fence and leave 'em thar."

A Sioux chief, after following a surveying party on the Northern Pacific for some days, mildly remarked, "that they might go on for he'd be d—d if he'd freeze to death for what hair there was among that crowd."

Someone tells a story of a steambot passenger watching the revolving light of a light-house on the coast and exclaiming, "Gosh! the wind blows that light out as fast as the man can strike it."

Mark Twain wants to know whether there is any truth in the report that the Shah is to visit America next winter on a lecturing tour, at $100,000 a night, and to chose what subject he likes.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT.—We respectfully tender our thanks to Mr. H. L. Tibbals for a basket of luscious plums.

TOOTH PULLING BY STEAM.—His name was Baumgardner. He was going down to Cape May on the steambot, and on the way his tooth began to ache in the most frightful manner.

When you are carrying several articles and one of them slips, it is best not to try to recover it. An Essex street man named Roberts was helping his wife to prepare the dinner table on Sunday, as one of the deacons was to take dinner with them.

CHINA—SIAM—JAPAN.—The Foreign Missionary remarks, that "it is a significant fact that the rulers of the three great heathen powers, which lie opposite to us across the Pacific, are all governed by youthful sovereigns—men who have no old and stiffened ideas of the past to unlearn, and who, with flexible characters and comparative freedom from prejudice, will the more readily enter into the full tide of modern progress."

A youth of ten years, residing at Binghamton, played so long that he did not get home until after supper was over, and consequently was told that he could have nothing to eat.

A Memphis girl was married the other day, and immediately sold her piano, bought a sewing machine, and made her husband a suit of clothes and herself two calico dresses, and now fourteen young men are seeking the hand of her unmarried sister.

A New York Herald correspondent has seen in Florida a spider that would weigh three or four pounds. We have often seen one as heavy as this in our kitchen. What skillet takes to get up such stories.—Lowell Courier.

A Connecticut farmer who set out an elaborate scarecrow in his strawberry patch, was disgusted to find that a pair of robins had built their nest and were raising their young under the hat.

The retiring editor of a Kansas paper "valeted" himself as follows: "I'll have said anything through these columns that I am sorry for, I'm glad of it. To my friends, I thank you for your liberality, and to my enemies, you can go to the devil."

"Ower at the cauld foot There bides an old troot, No mony there be that are wiser; It baffles a' skill, To tether his gill, An' gi'e the sly boy a surpriser."
