Kate's Accomplishment.

"Really, Kate, you have succeeded very well. Where my daughters are so truly accomplished I dare not draw comparisons; but I say to you that I consider your education perfect." And thus speaking, Mrs. Lanark, a woman of five and forty, and the mother of three grown up daughters, lay back in her easy chair.

Kate, the younger of the three, had just arisen from the pianoforte, where she had improved upon her course.— She was nineteen years of age, and her form was of the pure female type—not robust, yet fairly-like. She had certainly a good looking face, to call such a face pretty would sound tame and flat.
Mrs. Lanark, thought Isabel and Bertha were both prettier than Kate, while the father was of a different opinion. However, on one point there was no dispute.
The Judge would often say—"Well, my little Kate looks good, anyhow." And nobody had ever disputed him.

Isabel and Bertha, the other two, were both older than Kate, being aged respectively twenty-one and twenty-three.
They had graduated at a very fashionable school, and were deemed very highly accomplished; and moreover, they were called beautiful.

Judge Lanark was the father of these girls. He was a man of means, though not of large wealth. He had been a successful lawyer, and was now upon the bench, and his social position was at the very highest. Governors had been among his clients, and Senators looked to him for counsel and assistance. The Judge had reared two sons and sent them forth into active, useful life; but his daughters he had left to his wife.

"you do not play as well as your sisters, but it will come to you by practice. I think I may safely say that your list of necessary accomplishments is full."

"Not quite," said Kate with a nod and a smile. "There is one more accomplishment to add to my list. I longed for it many a time when I was at school, and I am led to long for it at many places I am forced to visit. I must learn to cook."

"To what?" cried Mrs. Lanark.
"To cook!" exclaimed Isabel and Bertha in concert.

"Aye," added Kate, "I will not consider my woman's accomplishments complete until I can, with my own hands, make a loaf of wheaten bread fit to set before my father."

The Judge caught his Kate by the hand and cried:
"Good, good, for Kate!"

Isabel and Bertha smiled derisively.— Their looks plainly showed that they considered the thing ridiculous.

Mrs. Lanark looked up in surprise and deprecation. It seemed a reflection upon her educational care of her daughters. Kate saw the look and answered:

"I do not mean a loaf of such soggy stuff as some of our friends make with cream of tartar and saleratus, nor yet a loaf of the puffly stuff that comes to us from the baker's, but I mean a loaf of such bread as my mother used to bake when I was a wee child."

Mrs. Lanark was mollified but not converted.

"Ah, Kate, times have changed since I was young."

"For the worse!" muttered the Judge.
But his wife did not notice him. She went on:

"You had better leave the making of bread to the help in the kitchen. If ever you have a home of your own, I trust you will have enough else to occupy your time without doing the work of your servants."

"If ever I have a home of my own," said Kate with mild decision, "I am determined that I will be able to superintend every part of it. My servants shall not be my mistresses. I will not be the slave nor the victim of my cook."

"Good," again cried the Judge. "Go it, Kate, and I will furnish the material.
Waste a dozen barrels of flour, if necessary—only bring me a grand loaf of bread of your own making and baking in the end."

Mrs. Lanark thought it foolish and Isabel and Bertha characterized it as very childish and whimsical. They fancied that it smacked of the nursery and playroom.

But Kate was in earnest; and as her father backed her up, she carried the day, and gained the freedom of the kitchen, where the servants soon came to love her.

The following winter Isabel and Bertha spent in the city. Kate remained at home, because her mother could not spare them all. During their visit to the metropolis, the elder sisters made their friends and formed a few pleasant associations. Among others, they met with Roland Archworth, a young banker, whose father had been Judge Lanark's class-mate and chum at college. In their letters home they had informed their father of this fact, and the Judge, remembering the elder Archworth with treasured love and esteem, and knowing the son to be the occupant of an exalted position in society, had invited the young man to visit him at his country house.

And thus it happened that when Summer came Roland Archworth came up to Lanark's pleasant home. He was a young man of five and twenty years, and to use the expression of one who knew him well, "every inch a man." He had inherited a fortune from his father, and was now a partner in the house which his father had founded.— There was no speculation in the business which he followed. With a banking capital fully equal to the greatest possible emergency, the house pursued a legitimate course, and its wealth was constantly and surely increasing.

Is it a wonder that Mrs. Lanark's heart fluttered when the prospect dawned upon her that the young banker might possibly seek one of her daughters for a wife? She cared not whether he choose Isabel or Bertha. They were both accomplished, and either would make a worthy mate for him.

And we do not do the Judge injustice when we say that even he allowed himself to hope that the son of his classmate might find it in his heart to love one of the girls. He had studied the young man's character well, and he believed it to be one of the purest and best.

And Isabel and Bertha. Of course there was rivalry between them, but they agreed they would abide the issue.
If Isabel were selected to preside over the home of the millionaire, Bertha would not complain, and should Bertha prove the fortunate one, Isabel was prepared to yield.

One thing happened very unfortunately. On the very day of Archworth's arrival the cook had been taken sick.— What was to be done?

"Never mind," said Kate with a smile, "I will take the reins until the cook gets well."

"But for mercy's sake," implored Isabel, "don't let Mr. Archworth know it! He belongs to a sphere which would be shocked by such a gross impropriety.
He would look upon us as belonging to the canaille."

But there was no present help for it, and Kate went into the kitchen and took command of the forces in that quarter.

"Will you have some of this cake, Mr. Archworth," asked Mrs. Lanark, lifting the silver basket of frosted niceties.

"No," replied the visitor, with a smile. "If you will let me exercise my own whim you will please me. This plain bread is a luxury which I do not often meet. It takes me back to my boyhood's days. I have not eaten such since I eat the bread which my own mother made. If ever I keep house for myself I think I shall ask you to send me your cook."

For the life of them they could not help the betrayal of emotion. Poor Kate, who sat exactly opposite the speaker, blushed until it seemed as though all the blood in her body were running into her face—while Isabel and Bertha trembled as they would have trembled had they found themselves unexpectedly upon the verge of a frightful precipice. The Judge laughed outright.

"You get our cook into your house, and you'll find you've caught a tartar, my boy," said the Judge. And then to turn the subject, he added quickly:
"I remember your mother very well, Roland, and I have eaten her bread."

And thus the subject softened down into the memory of other days.

Touching Roland's association with Lanark's daughters, he seemed to enjoy the society of them all. If he seemed more eager to talk with one than the other, it was with Kate—not, perhaps, because he had found her more attractive, but because she kept herself hidden away from him so much. During the brief interviews which had been permitted him, he had found her not only accomplished, but he had detected an undercurrent of plain common sense, which had not appeared in the others.
And, again, when he had been speaking of his mother, he had noticed Kate's eyes grew moist with sympathetic light, while her sisters had only smiled in their sweet, pleasant way.

He fancied that the gathering moisture of those deep blue eyes he had looked down into a warm and tender heart—a heart that was both true and reliable.

One bright morning Roland Arch-worth rose with the sun and walked out into the garden. By and by he came round by the porch, and entered the kitchen to ask for a drink of milk, for he had seen the gardener just bringing in a brimming pail from the stable.

He went in and saw Kate Lanark at the moulding board, her white arms bare to the shoulders, kneading a snowy pile of dough. She did not see him at first, and he had a moment for thought and in that moment the truth flashed upon him. Here was the cook whom he had praised—the cook whom he had declared he would have in his own house if he could get her! And he could now understand the blushing of the maiden and laughing rejoinder of the Judge. And he remembered now of having overheard Mrs. Lanark speaking to a member of the family of the sickness of the cook, and how unfortunate it was, and so on. With a clear sense and quick comprehension, aided by keen powers of analysis and reason, Roland read the whole story. He had gone too far to retreat; so he pushed boldly on into the kitchen.

"Ah, good morning, Miss Lanark.
Pardon my intrusion, but I saw the milk pail come in and I could not resist the temptation. Oh! the old, old days! I never shall forget them, and trust I may never outlive them. It was my boy-hood's delight to take from my mother's hand the cup warm from the milking.— This is the first opportunity that has presented itself for many long years, and I could not resist the temptation.
You will pardon me, I know."

At first Kate had been startled terribly; but she met the suppliant's warm and radiant look, and the music of the old home love fell upon her ear, and she saw, as by instinct, that the whole scene was pleasant to him, she felt her heart bound with gleeful assurance; and brushing the flakes of dough from her arms she went and filled a bowl with the new milk and brought it to him.

"I trust," she said with a beaming smile, "that the dust of toil upon my hands will not render the offering less acceptable."

No matter what Roland replied, he said something and then drank the milk.
He evidently longed to linger in the kitchen, but propriety forbade, and, with more of his real feelings in his looks than in his speech, he retired.

A few days thereafter the young banker sought the Judge in his study, and said, as he took a seat, that he had something important to say.

"I come," he said, "to ask of you that I may seek the hand of your daughter."

The Judge was agreeably surprised.— He fancied that of late the youth had been growing cold towards his daughters.

"My dear boy," he said, "between you and me there need be no beating about the bush. I should be both proud and happy to welcome you as my son.
Which of the two is it?"

"Of the two?" replied Roland.
"Ah; is it Isabel or Bertha?"

"Neither, sir, it is Kate I want."

"Kate!" cried the old man in blank astonishment. But quickly a glad light danced in his eyes.

"Yes, Judge, your Kate is the woman I want, if I can win her."

"But, my dear boy, how in the world did you manage to find my pearl, my ruby, among the household jewels?— Where and when have you discovered the priceless worth of that sweet child?"

"I discovered it first in the kitchen, Judge; I first fell irrevocably and truly in love with her when I found her with her white arms bare making bread. I have known her better since. It is your Kate I want."

"God bless you, my boy. Go and win her if you can. And be sure you gain a treasure."

Roland went away, and half an hour afterwards the supernal light that danced in his eyes told his story of success.

And Kate, when closely questioned, confessed that the first flame of real love which burned in her bosom for Roland Archworth was kindled by the deep and true element of manhood which he had displayed on that early morning in the kitchen.

Of course Mrs. Lanark was willing, though she was surprised at the young man's choice.

Isabel and Bertha were disappointed; but since, at best, only one of them could have won the prize, they concluded, on the whole, that it was well as it was. They loved their sister, and were really glad that they were thus enabled to claim the wealthy banker for a brother-in-law.

As for Roland and Kate their happiness was complete. Of all the accomplishments his wife possesses, the husband is chiefly proud of that which enables her to be in deed, as well as in name, the "mistress of her home."

A NEW ARTIST.—The San Francisco correspondent of the New York Times writes as follows of a Louisville lady who has developed a wonderful genius in sculpture:

At Chico I met with a very interesting woman, the wife of Gen. Crosby, of Kentucky, during our "late unpleasantness," in the Confederate army, now very much reconstructed into a Butte county California ranchman. Mrs. Crosby, since living a life novel in its new cares and labors, but somewhat lonely and monotonous, has developed remarkable artistic talent, in brighter years undreamed of even by herself. She is a brave, cheery, energetic young wife and mother, full of freshness, enthusiasm and originality. It was actually by joining in, after her merry fashion, with her children's play one sunny day last winter, that she discovered her talent for sculpture. The little ones were manufacturing the immemorial mud-pie; she look up a lump of adobe, and fashioned not a pie but a pretty little head. "The thing grew under my fingers," she said.

The finer touches of her play-work were done by a hair-pen taken from her "bonnie brown hair." She did not know she had hit on Mr. Gibson's favorite little modeling tool. Finding the adobe not very pliable, and having no other sort of clay to work with—not knowing anything of the first process of sculpture—she next cut an ideal head from a large piece of chalk, chiefly with an old pair of scissors. Next she purchased a block of marble, and, like a female Buonarrotti grappled at once with the stone. Without a word of instruction, with no model or drawing, with no proper sculptor's implements, she has already chiseled a small ideal figure, graceful and beautiful—"Mignon." I believe she will be an admirable portrait bust. I have shown a photograph of the latter to several artists, and they have pronounced it, under the circumstances, a wonderful production.

Mrs. Crosby bears an odd resemblance to Miss Hosmer, and seems to have much of that brave little artist's will and spirit. In the passion of her new-found genius she has sometimes worked night and day, cutting and hammering till her small fingers have dropped blood on the marble. For the sake of art, and for her sake, I wish I could make her work easier and her path to fame bright and straight and short. As it is, she seems hemmed and impeded by womanly duties and disabilities. She is conscientious and she is modest; she will choose to do the right thing before the great thing, as she holds that she does not belong to herself. But I hope she will in some way manage to harmonize the dear claims of home and the importunate demands of her beautiful genius.

ANECDOTE OF TOM CORWIN.—When the late Tom Corwin was quite a young man he was elected a Member of the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, and early in the session he brought in a bill for the destruction of the public whipping-post. He made an earnest speech in favor of the measure, to which an elderly member replied as follows:—

BERIAH BROWN, : : : : EDITOR.

Seattle Thursday, June 20, 1872.

The Political Situation.

We are frequently asked for our opinion as to what the Baltimore Convention will do in relation to the nomination of candidates for President and Vice President. The most intelligent reply we can give to these questions is, we don't know. It might be different if we had not lost all faith in the patriotism and good policy of professional politicians, or had any assurance that a delegate Convention would fairly reflect or represent the popular will. Very few intelligent men doubt the fact that either Grant or Greeley will be the next President; or that the nomination of another candidate by the Democratic party would insure the election of Grant. The few who profess to think otherwise and try to persuade themselves and others into the belief that the Democratic party may achieve a party success by the divisions of the Republicans, take counsel of their wishes instead of the unbiased conclusions of their judgment.

The nomination of a Democratic party candidate would divide and distract the Democratic party, frighten back to the support of Grant all hesitating Republicans, and utterly destroy the Liberal Republican organization, which is solely dependent upon aid in the election of a Democrat by dividing the opposition forces. Any man who has taken any pains to inform himself as to the popular sentiment on the subject, will bear witness that not less than four-fifths, and perhaps nine-tenths, of the disinterested portion of the Democratic party, are opposed to any other nomination, while a considerable portion of the Republicans prefer Greeley to Grant and will vote for the former if there is a reasonable prospect of his election. Those who insist upon a Democratic party nomination are almost exclusively those who have a personal interest in maintaining a separate party organization—members of Congress representing Democratic districts, and editors of newspapers deriving their chief support from party patronage. The New York World dislikes to share its present party lead with the Tribune; the Chicago Times objects to dividing its party monopoly with the Tribune of that city; the Philadelphia Age and the Washington Patriot cannot afford to part with the party prestige which is their chief dependence for support, and hence they in patriotic phrase speak of maintaining the old Democratic organization at all hazards as the only honorable and safe policy. Members of Congress who hold their seats solely by party favor also harangue their constituents and the country on the inconsistency and sacrifice of principle involved in the support of the Cincinnati platform and candidates.

Such pretences are the veriest clap-net and sophistry. The principles and policy embodied in the Cincinnati platform are precisely such as meet the views of almost the entire Democracy of the country. If that platform had been adopted by a Democratic Convention, not one Democrat who now objects to the action of that Convention would have raised his voice against it. The declaration of principles being satisfactory, the only other test questions which Democrats have ever professed to regard, are as to the candidate—Is he capable? Is he honest? Not one of the Democratic cavaliers, so far as we have heard, has pretended to question the capacity or the honesty of Horace Greeley, and among the prominent Democrats of the country, only Mr. Voorhees, and two or three of the most ultra of the Southern secession leaders, have declared their preference for Grant. The sole pretence upon which the Cincinnati Convention is rejected, is then, that it would destroy the integrity and time-honored organization of the Democratic party, which dates its existence from the formation of the Government, by accepting a candidate who has heretofore acted with an opposition party. Those who make this objection ignore the history of the party. Like all other political party organization the Democratic party has been subjected to mutations and changes quite as marked as that now proposed. In the days of Jefferson the party was called Republican, and was known by no other name until after its reorganization under Jackson, whose first candidacy was against Crawford, the regular Republican candidate, Henry Clay, a Jeffersonian Republican and others. With Gen. Jackson, Buchanan, Woodbury, and many other leading Federalists came into the Jackson party, which subsequently took the name of Democratic, without professing to change their party sentiments.—An era has now arisen in our political affairs which demands a new organization of parties, and Mr. Greeley has quite as much right to be classed with Democratic Republicans as Mr. Buchanan ever had. If the Convention at Baltimore fairly represents public sentiment Mr. Greeley will be adopted as the candidate of the party of reform which all honest Democrats can support without doing violence to their previous professions. If the politicians only are represented, the will of the people will be disregarded and the old Democratic party will sink into guerrilla bands of unorganized opposition, without influence and without the respect of any.

RUFFIANISM.—One of the most brutal and unexcusable exhibitions of ruffianism which we have ever been called upon to chronicle, was an assault made upon Charles Prosch, the editor of the Tribune, by Gen. McKenny, late Superintendent of Indian Affairs, at Olympia, on Saturday evening last. The account of the affair, as related to us by private letter from a responsible source, is, that Mr. Prosch was accompanying his wife and two other ladies on a shopping tour. While the ladies were engaged in the store of Mr. Omette, McKenny came to the door and called Prosch out. The latter, unsuspecting of any hostile intent, came to the walk; McKenny without warning dealt him an assassin's blow with a heavy cudgel which felled him to the ground, and continued to beat and stamp upon him until pulled off by Mrs. Prosch and the other ladies of the party. Such an assault, in such a presence, would shame the veriest ruffian outside the penitentiary, and justify any citizen against whom he harbored a grudge, to shoot him down like a vicious dog, as a necessary precaution against assassination. McKenny is a vigorous man, in the prime of life, and Prosch is considerably past his prime, and no match for him on equal terms. In condemning this assault, we are very far from ignoring the personal responsibility of editors for publications affecting private character; nor do we deny that they are often guilty of such abuses of their position toward private citizens as would justify a resort to club law as the only means of redress. But this was not a case of that kind. The offense for which Prosch was assaulted was of a public character; the mere reflection of popular sentiment in regard to the official acts of a public officer.—The affairs of the office held by McKenny had been investigated by two or three separate commissions, each time with the same result, proving conclusively irregularities which demanded his removal; and yet by a ring combination of Federal officers at home, and by favoritism at headquarters, he was permitted to retain the position long after his official character had been impeached, and was finally superseded only to avoid further public scandal to the administration. It was to suppress the publication of these public facts, and to intimidate others, that he resorted to the ruffian's device against public criticism. If he supposes he can subjugate the independent press of this Territory by fear or force, he has very much mistaken his men. He and his associates have established a press of their own—which by a lavish expenditure of money, the only source of supply of which is the public treasury—they hoped to dominate or destroy all others in the Territory, and thus secure to themselves immunity from public criticism. But their subsidized press is but a scorch in the nostrils of all honest men, and hence the resort to brute force. That too, will fail so long as there is one man in control of the newspaper press in this Territory who dare express the honest sentiments of the public again the corrupt and corrupting rule of a ring of Federal spoils gatherers. When public thieves are forced to resort to assassination to avoid the exposure of their crimes, their case is desperate indeed.

Macanley's Point. Not seeing the expected accommodations, and not knowing whether to go, three of the passengers walked along the beach to town to acquire information, and reached the police station at about two o'clock in the morning. The authorities went with them and conducted the party to the spot, arriving there at daylight in the morning. JOURNALISM.—The local of the Portland Bulletin had the bad taste, in announcing the death of a young lawyer in that city, to couple the slang epithet of "shyster" with the name of the deceased. The editor of the Bulletin took the earliest opportunity of vindicating his own character as a gentleman, by deprecating the style of the article, and explaining that it had appeared in his columns without his knowledge. Our contemporary adopted the offensive article by copying it without note or comment. Scandalous aspersions upon the dead which betray innocent surviving kindred, and a cowardly and malicious disposition in their authors and copyists.

DR. ABORN.—The afflicted are hereby informed that Dr. Aborn will arrive in Seattle, and be ready to receive calls at the Occidental Hotel on Friday, June 21st. The Doctor will remain about one week.

THE PUGET SOUND BANKING COMPANY received their safe by the steamship Idaho, and have opened their Bank for business at their rooms in the Dispatch Buildings, under the management of Major Sam. P. Warren.

MAJORITY STRAWBERRIES.—C. W. Lawton, Esq., of White River, has presented us with a box of strawberries, raised by himself from seed imported from England two years ago, embracing four varieties of mammoth proportion and exquisite flavor. We measured one which was 3 1/4 inches in circumference one way and 5 inches the long way. He exhibited to us several varieties of flowers of his own culture which were floral curiosities.

DISEASES OF THE EYE, EAR, THROAT, LUNGS and chronic diseases generally are treated by Dr. Aborn with unprecedented success. Rooms at the Occidental Hotel, Seattle, for one week commencing June 20.

L. B. Andrews, Esq., of this city was made a member of the National Republican Committee by the late Convention in Philadelphia.

FOR GREELEY.—At a meeting of the Democratic State Central Committee of California it was ascertained that fourteen of the eighteen members were in favor of endorsing the Cincinnati nomination.

MR. J. N. GALE, of Olympia, has been in the city for the past week soliciting subscribers for the Transcript, a Liberal Republican paper.

SOUND NEWSPAPERS.—There are eight newspapers published upon Puget Sound of which only one is recognized as a Democratic organ: four are for Greeley and McFadden, two for Grant and only one for Garfield, and that is owned and sustained by Federal Office holders.

DR. ABORN—Oculist, Aurist and Physician and Operating Surgeon for chronic diseases. Rooms at the Occidental Hotel, Seattle, for one week commencing June 20th.

W. H. White, Esq., who went to Victoria a week ago to meet Col. Larabee, who was among the passengers quarantined, returned last evening and reports all as well and happy as could be expected under the circumstances.

CATARH, Bronchitis, Asthma, Lung disease, Deafness, Discharge from the Ears, etc., successfully treated by Dr. Aborn.

A DOOMED CITY.—One of the St. Louis delegations lately on a visit to San Francisco, writes of the city as follows:

With the fearful destruction recently wreaked in Chicago by the dread demon of fire vivid in my mind, it is impossible to walk through the streets of San Francisco without feeling a presentiment of an even more terrible fate in store for this great metropolis. One is forced irresistibly to look upon it as a doomed city, and the wind cannot but paint to itself a horrible picture of the lapping flames leaping from one frail timber-box to another, until not one-third of a thriving, prosperous city is swept from existence, but the whole. Their fire department appears to be efficient and excellently managed, but how futile would be the efforts of a dozen such, should a large conflagration, such as that which once visited Chicago, once get a fair start. All the powers of man could not prevent its march from one end of the town to the other. Every day violent winds blow over the town and what the stranger deems a perfect gale old residents call a gentle breeze. The fire-king would ask no better chariot, and riding on one of these gales his progress would be irresistible. It needs no gift of prophecy to predict the future, for it is inevitable, and written so plainly that in very truth "he who runs may read."

Remember the Seattle Dancing Club will meet at the North Pacific Gardens on Wednesday evening of each week, until further notice.

Telegraphic

LOWELL, June 12.—The Democratic Convention to-day selected delegates to the Baltimore Convention, and adopted resolutions commending the adoption of the Cincinnati platform.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—Prominent members of the administration unite in the opinion that the United States will not consent to the postponement of the Geneva Arbitration. The British Government has satisfied itself through secret agents that the Geneva Tribunal is inclined to give damages to the United States.

NEW YORK, June 13.—A Washington special says the Supplemental Treaty Article adopted by the Senate concludes as follows: After consideration, the President has, with the advice and consent of the Senate, consented to the establishment of a new feature in international law for the guidance of both nations, to the effect that neither of the contracting powers shall be held responsible for the acts of its citizens as against either government in favor of any belligerent power with which either government may be at war, and consents that he will make no claim on the part of the United States in respect to indirect damages as aforesaid before the Tribunal of Arbitration at Geneva.

BALTIMORE, June 13.—Dr. Huston has been indicted by the Grand Jury for adultery.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—The bill to remove the political disabilities of ex-Governor Vance, of North Carolina, and George S. Houston passed by 16 to 2.

NEW YORK, June 14.—It is reported the Grand Jury has indicted one of the prominent leaders of the eight-hour strikers.

Six strikers were arrested to-day for breaching workingmen, who refused to join them.

Five thousand mechanics, iron moulter and boiler makers of Brooklyn, are strikers for eight hours labor or ten hours pay. The employers refuse to accede to their demands.

The steamer Rhein, with German Imperial Band of Emperor William of Germany on board, arrived this evening. The wife and daughter of Horace Greeley were also passengers.

NEW YORK, June 15.—It is reported here that Gen. Sickles is en route to this country.

A storm here yesterday did great damage to many buildings, and considerably hurt the shipping. Many persons were injured in New York, and in Brooklyn three were killed.

CHICAGO, June 15.—A fearful explosion occurred on the steamer D. McDowell, on the Mississippi, near McGregor's, yesterday. The boat is a total loss, and many are wounded and missing.

MADRID, June 14.—The Cortes has adjourned and the Ministerial crisis continues.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 14.—Surveys for bringing Blue Lake water to San Francisco are nearly completed. Two hundred and forty bales of high grade Sea Island cotton, received here from Tahiti were shipped overland en route for England to-day.

The death of R. B. Swain, ex-Superintendent of the Mint, and a prominent business man of San Francisco, coupled with rumors of his suicide, took the city by surprise this afternoon. The facts are habit of taking valerian, and getting up in the night to take a dose, it is supposed he got hold of a bottle of laudanum instead. This morning his wife found him breathing heavily, and was unable to awaken him. Physicians were summoned and every effort made to restore him to consciousness, but in vain. He died about 11 o'clock. He was a native of Naticket, Mass., aged 47 years, and had been identified with the leading charitable institutions of San Francisco since 1855. He was a strong personal friend of Starr King and was connected with the First Unitarian Church up to the time of his death.

LONDON, June 14.—In the House of Commons last night Mr. Gladstone stated in reply to a question by Torrance, that the Government had received nothing official in relation to San Juan boundary question now before the Emperor of Germany for arbitration. In answer to an inquiry by Ibbotson, the Premier said that the United States Government had declined to join the British Government in the application for the adjournment of the Geneva Board. Viscount Bury inquired as to the truth of the statement that the American Government would oppose any effort of the British Government to submit to its arguments as to the Geneva Board on the 25th inst. under protest of the truth of reports about the reserved rights of England. Mr. Gladstone declined to answer without the usual notice.

MADRID, June 14.—The Cortes ad-journal and the Ministerial crisis continues. GENEVA, June 15.—The Tribunal of Arbitration of the Alabama claims met at noon to-day at Hotel de Ville. All the members were present as follows: Count Schloess, representing the King of Italy, President of the Court; Charles Francis Adams, Arbitrator on the part of the United States; Alexander Cockburn, representing Great Britain; Jacob Steempfi, the Swiss Government; and Baron Ditrigruba for Brazil. Summaries of the protest and arguments in support of the case of England and United States were furnished to the arbitrators by the respective agents of the two countries. The arbitration soon after adjourned on Monday next at 2 p. m.

Further than as above stated the proceedings of the tribunal are secret. WASHINGTON, June 16.—Letters from Earl Granville to Sir Edward Thornton, dated May, claim that he is able to show upon the testimony of Reverdy Johnson, corroborated by extracts cited by Secretary Fish, that at the first discussion none but the Direct Claims were known as claims, and that the indirect losses were mentioned by the American High Commissioners not as claims but as grievances, and were mentioned only for discussion.

Gen. Sickles has gone to Madrid to present his letters of recall. No successor will be appointed until several matters in controversy including the liberation of Dr. Howard has been adjusted. The Spanish Government is not yet convinced that Howard is an American citizen, but may release him in accordance with the request of our Government.

NEW YORK, June 16.—The S. S. City of Brussels started this morning with the British Grenadier guard band, en route to the Boston Jubilee. BOSTON, June 16.—The Prussian band arrived this morning. The Coliseum is ready to be opened for the International Festival to-morrow. The hotels, boarding houses, and private quarters, are rapidly filling up with visitors.

NEW YORK, June 17.—A Geneva special says the proposition for the adjournment of the Arbitration will occupy the Arbitrators on Monday and perhaps longer, as the purpose of the session on Monday is to hear the argument of both sides; many delicate points will also be raised for the judge to decide.

The statement that the summary of the British claims has been laid before the Arbitrators is not to be credited. The English Agent have presented no papers and came unprepared to present any. The proceedings were meagre in point of detail.

The American argument was resented to the court in an octavo volume of six or seven hundred pages, with a smaller supplementary volume printed only in the English language. The American agent declared his readiness to proceed, and the English agent asked for an adjournment without a specification of any fixed period. The American answer is that the request of the presentation of the final papers is not according to the proceedings laid down in the Treaty regarding a conspiracy which they will not broach without instructions from their Government.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17.—The Democratic Primaries called for to-day are formally announced as withdrawn, in accordance with the vote at the Saturday evening meeting.

Arrived—Steamer Great Republic from China and Japan, with 29 white and 14 Japanese passengers, including Governor Ito and other members of the Japanese Embassy, and Rear Admiral John Rogers, U. S. N., Capt. C. F. Nichol, and Lieut.-Com. W. K. Wier, U. S. N. There are 13 white and 2 Japanese for Europe. She has a full cargo of tea and Chinese and Japanese merchandise.

All the flags in the city were displayed at half-mast this morning on account of the funeral of the late R. B. Swain.

STROTTON, June 17.—The 10-20 freight train from Sacramento last night, ran over a hod-carrier named Dan Callihan, severing both legs from his body. He died this morning.

Greeley in Washington.

The Washington correspondent of the San Francisco Examiner, under date of May 20, writes: There having been a number of rumors as to the views of Democratic members of Congress, regarding the policy of the Baltimore Convention endorsing the candidate of the Cincinnati Convention it may not be uninteresting for your readers to know that out of one hundred and five Democratic members there are fifty-five who either strongly advocate or favor the nomination of Horace Greeley, thirty-three who are negative, non-committal or doubtful, and eighteen who bitterly oppose him. All, without exception, will both vote and work for him in the event of his endorsement at Baltimore. The opposition to him comes from Delaware, Indiana, Kentucky, Maryland, New Jersey, Ohio, Wisconsin and Oregon.

Jerry Black, in speaking of the situation, said: "The country is in great danger. Now the revenues of the Government are used to enrich incorporated monopolists; legislatures are owned by railway companies; senatorial chairs are openly sold to the highest bidder; our courts are packed and corrupted, etc., etc. How much longer this will be borne God only knows; but unless human nature is greatly changed, sooner or later, there will be resistance. The platform put forth at Cincinnati is a broad, fair Democratic platform. There is nothing passive in that. Now if the Convention that meets at Baltimore, finds in its wisdom that Greeley fits the platform, we will make the best fight for him we can." This is the General feeling here even among those who are decidedly opposed to Mr. Greeley's nomination.

I have it from good authority that ex-Governor Seymour, of New York, has written a letter to a member of Congress from that State, urging him to use his efforts for Mr. Greeley as the best thing to do under the circumstances.

A letter was received here on Saturday, from Gen. Merritt, proprietor of the State Register at Springfield, Ill., in which he states that forty-five out of seventy Democratic newspapers in the State had already hoisted the names of Greeley and Brown at the top of their editorial columns, and he claimed that the vote of the State would be thrown solid for them at Baltimore.

The Liberals claim that the re-election of Orin S. Ferry to the United States Senate by a combination of Democrats and Liberal Republicans in Connecticut and the endorsement of the Cincinnati platform, by the New York Democratic Convention, are most significant and foreshadow the action of the Baltimore Convention.

The friends of Greeley and Brown have rented a large portion of the St. Marc hotel for a headquarters and are at work already. John D. Defrees is in charge until the Congressional organization is perfected.

MONTGOMERY BLAIR.—In a letter addressed to a prominent Democrat at Baltimore, Montgomery Blair says: "We will have to take Greeley or Grant, and we will take Greeley, reluctantly of course, but not the less certainly. And he will be the more certain of election because the Democrats do not wish to embrace at first. As for their running a candidate of their own, that would be both disastrous and disgraceful. For my own part I go for the movement initiated at Cincinnati to arrest the further progress of radicalism. It is the only practical way of arresting. As for running in a straight Democratic ticket between Greeley and Grant, that is a dodge that will not be allowed to succeed. That can be done only in the small field, of local politics, where the contest between the real aspirants is personal and has become embittered. The moment that the Democracy shall set up itself, the North will close its ranks again; and the only effect would be to sacrifice the leaders in the liberal party who had attempted to help us. This would disgrace us, and so help to defeat us, not only now but hereafter."

TOMATOES IN IRON POTS.—There are a thousand and one things I would like to know, (and probably shall, in time, unless I have to learn how to vote, but this I do know, that tomatoes must not be cooked in an iron pot. Some beneficent housekeeper, following in the footsteps of the illustrious "scrapple" maker, gives a recipe in last week's Rural for a cheap soup, in which she directs the ingredients to be put in an iron pot. I sometimes, at good tables, taste tomatoes which have been made bitter by this process. If the intention is to medicate them, the result will satisfy the design.—Rural New Yorker.

THE BEST WAY TO KEEP POTATOES.—Potatoes should always be kept in the dark. Intelligent rural housekeepers need not be told this; but many others, living in towns and cities, should know that potatoes exposed to the light for a day only, have their flavor injured; and the longer they are exposed the worse they are. Never use a greenish potato, as such tubers are unfit for human food. When Irish potatoes are removed from the cellar, they should always be spread out thin on the floor, in a cool building. If the apartment is not dark they should be covered with boards, to exclude the light. It is a good practice, also, to cover them with clean straw or sawdust. The injury done to potatoes by the light, after they are carried from a dark cellar, is the chief reason why there is such a universal complaint of poor potatoes in the spring and during the forepart of summer. Every sort of vegetable that grows in the dark—beneath the surface of the ground—should be stored in a dark apartment; while those vegetables and fruits which mature in the light will ripen more satisfactorily, and develop a more luscious flavor, if they are stored in a light room.

Live within your means is a good principle to keep in sight in all matters of Domestic Economy. If your income is five dollars a day, spend but four. If it is one dollar, spend eighty cents. If it is but ten cents, spend nine. If it is three potatoes, save half for seed. Thus you will gradually acquire something, while if you spend and consume as you go, you will never get ahead one inch in a life, but every sunset will look on you poorer than at sunrise, because you will have used unprofitably one day more of your strength and your allotted term of life.

MELTON VEAL.—This is a standard dish at the Melton Race in England, and is composed of alternate slices of veal and ham. Butter a good sized bowl and slice as thin as possible six hard-boiled eggs, then line the bowl with the slices. Place in the bottom a layer of raw veal steak in thin slices, and sprinkle over it a small quantity of salt, pepper and grated lemon-peel; proceed in the same way with thin slices of raw ham, but leave out the salt. Fill up the bowl in this manner. Cover it with a thick paste of flour and water, so stiff as to be rolled out. Tie a double cotton cloth all over the top and boil three hours, putting it into boiling hot water at the first, and keeping the water just below the level of the bowl. When cooked, take off the cloth and the paste, and let the veal stand until the following day; then turn it out on a platter, and cut very thin after it comes to the table; garnish with sliced lemon and parsley. It is "a dainty dish" to set before a king. It is also delicious as a side dish for dinner, and makes a good breakfast.

ARSENIC IN COLORED CARPETS.—Hallwachs has found that not only green but also the red colored carpets frequently contain arsenic. He particularly asserts that the brilliant dark red colors now so greatly in demand, contains enormous quantities of this poisonous substance. The goods burned with the blue flame of arsenic, and gave its characteristic garlic odor. Enough of the color could be rubbed off with the finger to give a distinct precipitate of arsenic with the usual re-agent, and in solution in hydrochloric acid covered some copper pieces with the greyish coating characteristic of the substance.

TO PRESERVE STRAWBERRIES.—To two pounds of fine, large strawberries, add two pounds of powdered sugar, and put them in a preserving kettle, over a slow fire, till the sugar is melted; then boil them for half an hour as fast as possible, have ready a number of small jars, and put the fruit in boiling hot. Cover the jars immediately, and keep them through the summer in a cold, dry cellar. The jars must be heated before the hot fruit is poured in otherwise they will break.

TO PACK AWAY DRESSES.—Carefully fold in very dark blue paper, as highly glazed as possible. This will preserve the color of them, but they must also be kept in a dry place, or be occasionally nufoled and hung for a few hours in a dry room, and the paper be dried, too, otherwise they are sure to get spotted with mould.

PENDLETON IS FOR GREELY.—The Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun, May 16th, says: Hon. James C. Robinson of Illinois received this morning a letter from Hon. George H. Pendleton, in which strong ground is taken in favor of the endorsement of Greeley at Baltimore. He also says that only two classes are opposed to Greeley's endorsement, and that they are first, those who are too foolish to see that it is the only chance for a future good government, and second, those who desire the re-election of Grant. This letter places at rest all dispute as to the position of the great Ohio leader.
