Puget Sound Dispatch. Democracy of Washington Territory. Mr. Newell, of the Walla Walla Statesman, accepts under protest the popular verdict against another Democratic convention to endorse the nomination of Judge McFadden for Delegate to Congress. He says: "In the canvass about to commence, it is important that the Democratic candidate be fully endorsed, and the mere recommendation of the Central Committee is not the kind of endorsement that is desirable. In matters of this kind it is necessary that party usage" should be adhered to, and everything done "decently and in order."

Our ancient party yoke-fellow cordially supports Greeley for President, but evidently has not yet come up to a comprehension of the principle of the contest, or recognized the nature of the revolution that is in progress, which means if it means anything, exterminating war upon all existing party organizations; upon party conventions organized to defeat the popular will, and ring combinations formed for personal ends to be achieved through party discipline. The time has passed when a party nomination presents any claim to honest disinterested popular support. Judge McFadden reluctantly consented to accept a party nomination, and only then from a Convention which fully endorsed the reform movement. No one will question that he is not only the choice of a large majority of the Democrats, but very many Republicans. What assurance has he or his friends that another convention might not be in the interest of some scheming partisan, as the Republican convention was for Garfield? Such things are common in party management, and we need not go out of this Territory, or the neighboring State of Oregon, for examples.

What measure of reform has party accomplished in the country for the past ten years? A Democratic party triumph gave the control of the New York City government to "Boss Tweed" and his organized gang of thieves. A Democratic party triumph in California gave to that State four years of an administration under which more special legislation and party jobs were enacted than under any previous administration, even in the days when the people deemed it necessary to organize Vigilance Committees to wrest the government from the hands of the legal officers. A Democratic party triumph in Oregon, under an honest representation of the popular will in convention, gave to the State an honest and able representative in Congress for two years. This was followed by a packed and purchased convention which triumphed in placing the State government in the hands of a corrupt ring intent only on personal aggrandizement, and this ring has in turn been overthrown by another combination equally as selfish, all through the manipulation and management of party machinery.

A large majority of the people of this portion of Washington Territory want no more of party trickery and management which inures only to the benefit of party tricksters. They will support Judge McFadden because they believe him to be honest and know him to be capable, and not because he has the endorsement of any party convention or committee. We would as cheerfully support Marshall Blinn, Cyrus Walker, Mr. Meigs, A. A. Denny, Philip Ritz, or any other fair minded and capable Republican under the same circumstances. In conclusion we would specially commend to the consideration of Brother Newell the following remarks of Hon. Geo. W. Julian, which we find in the same number of his paper from which we have quoted:

The student of American politics who looks beneath the surface of things, and remembers the history of parties in this country, cannot fail to see that we are in the midst of one of our periodical revolutions. Through the sudden upheaval of our politics we have entered upon a new epoch, very clearly foreshadowing the radical reconstruction of parties on the new and living questions of the time. Parties cannot live for ever. Political parties are not immortal, and when those agencies pass away, and parties themselves must perish. If they do not, they at once degenerate into mere factions, the great bane of republics, and ought to be exterminated. Take the old Federal party as an illustration. It was a grand old party in some respects, and had the support of as strong and true men as ever lived; but when its work was done it passed away. The old Whig party had its day, struggling manfully for certain measures of policy, but when the nation finally pronounced against them, the party died and was buried. The old Free-soil party, born of the question of slavery in our national territories, had its day, and it was a day of great usefulness. It was a sort of political John the Baptist, clearing the way for the mightier organization which followed; but when it was done it was translated into the Republican party, which it first committed to the essential articles of its faith. The Know-Nothing party had its day, and a dark day it was, and thank the Lord, a short day; and then it also died. The Republican party had its birth in the organized attempt to withstand the further aggression of the slave power; but as slavery now sleeps in its bloody shroud, the mission of the party is ended, and its time to die has come. How can a man live when the breath has gone out of his body? How can a party survive when the work which gave it life has been accomplished and irrevocably settled? My friends, the Republican party is a spent political force. It is an organized epitaph. It is to-day as dead as the bones of the prophet Ezekiel, and its issues as perfectly gone as those of the Mexican war. And the trouble with the followers of Gen. Grant is that they are today standing in the ruts of the past, or moving along in the same old party grooves, through the mere force of party traditions and the memory of past conflicts, while the supporters of Horace Greeley have the sagacity to perceive the real situation, and the courage to take their stand on the broad level of independent and untrammelled political action. "Gentlemen, am I not right in these views? Is it reasonable to preserve and garnish the scaffolding around an edifice after it had been finished? If Christianity were established throughout the earth, would the organization and machinery of our religious denominations be any longer needed? The champions of Gen. Grant seem to forget that a political party is not an end, but a means; that it is simply the instrument through which some desirable purpose is sought to be accomplished. I respectfully commend to them the views of Gerrit Smith, now their idol, as he expressed himself in 1869. Here is what he then said: "A very lamentable evil is the education of the people into the belief that a permanent political party is a great good, and therefore that such a party as the Republican or Democratic ought not to be broken up. But a permanent political party, with the constant tendency of every such party to deterioration, is a heavy curse; for it plants with great, and too frequently with invincible power, in the way of all progress, and clings for its own existence to the wrongs with which it is identified. No other but temporary political parties are justifiable—no other but such as occasion calls for."

St. Helens' Hall had closed its third year with 11 teachers and 193 pupils.—The graduating class numbered 5. The increase of boarding pupils necessitated another building last winter, which now accommodates 50, besides the faculty and the Bishop's family. It is now by its growth and prosperity the third church school for girls in our country, and ranks no lower in instruction than any. In the three years of its existence it has numbered 283 pupils. The Bishop stated that a Chinese school had been opened in one of the rooms of St. Helen's Hall, which showed a list of 120 names on the roll. Six of the scholars can read the Testament with ease, converse and write. The Bishop Scott Grammar School closed a successful year on June 18th, with just 100 pupils. The additions to the school during the year have been a gymnasium and apparatus, geological collections, maps, charts, philosophical apparatus and books. The library now numbers 1,050 volumes. A large dining room, kitchen and laundry have been added in the basement, and a laboratory, reading room and museum on the second floor, during the summer. Friday morning after prayer at Trinity, the Convocation began its business meeting in the school room. A more perfect organization was made and measures adopted to further Christian education. The Oregon Churchman was recommended and provision made for its improvement. In the afternoon the meeting of Convocation was continued. At 7 1/2 o'clock, p. m., after divine service, the Rev. Mr. Babcock, of Corvallis, preached on Christian education.—The Convocation resumes its services in the morning at Trinity Church.—Oregonian, Sept. 6.

A VERY STRICT JUDGE.—Old Otsego county boasts a Justice of the Peace who flashes out in the annals of local fame as arraigning himself for a delinquency. The Justice of the Peace referred to—no matter about his name or where he belongs—possesses the excellent attributes of integrity, ability and worth, but on one occasion he forgot his magisterial integrity. He let down in a weak moment the judicial bars which should hedge him in, and roamed into the fields of Bacchus. In short, on a recent occasion he imbibed too much strong drink, and in consequence awoke with a realized sense of that fact the next morning. Now here was a pretty go. A Justice of the Peace had been on a bender, or part of one. A man who was appointed to swing the scale of justice over the heads of poor unfortunate fellows, wandering over into the wrong pasture himself. But there it was. He felt reminded of it in the occasional throbs of headache. But what was to be done! The more he viewed it the more he became disgusted. He made up his mind. He would attend to his case. He would vindicate the outraged law. So, at the usual hour, he entered his office. He formally opened court, and then he called his own name as defendant in a suit in which "the people" charged him with an offence against the law, went over the circumstances in detail so far as he could remember them, read "the statute in such cases made and provided," and then asked "the prisoner what he had to say." In the role of prisoner he pleaded guilty to the offence, said it was a shame for a man of his years and position, but hoped "the court would not be too severe on him, as he was determined to reform."

"The prisoner will stand up," said the stern old justice. "I am very sorry that you have been brought into this Court on a charge which so seriously affects your good name and standing in society; you have set a bad example, and if you go on at this rate you will bring sorrow and disgrace on yourself and family. I sentence you to pay a fine of $10 and costs, or to thirty days' imprisonment in the County Jail." "The prisoner" said he would prefer to pay the fine, and then the Court closed.

Chief Engineer W. Milnor Roberts, who has recently (July 15, 1872,) completed a tour of inspection along the line of the Northern Pacific Railroad in Minnesota, and as far west as the valley of Heart river in Western Dakota, writes as follows: "The valleys of the Cheyenne and the James, where our line crosses, are particularly lovely, having abundant water, trees enough to relieve the eye, and a rich soil. The Missouri is a noble river where the road strikes it—wide and deep, with a swift current and heavily wooded along its shores and islands. It is navigable for a thousand miles above to Fort Benton, and quite a number of large steamers, heavily laden with merchandise for Montana, had recently passed up. It is the opinion of an experienced Missouri river steamboat man, that on the completion of the Northern Pacific road to the Missouri, the business will be done over this road not merely to all points on the river above but also to points several hundred miles below. "I TAKES IT ALL DE SAME."—An honest, thrifty, well-to-do German in a Connecticut city applied to a wealthy landlord who rents a great many houses. "The house is to let, certainly," said the owner; "and if, upon inquiry, I find you to be a responsible and a suitable man for a tenant you shall have it." "Vera goot, Mr. H—, you make just as many questions as you mind. I takes the house when you get ready." Two days afterwards the house owner called upon the German. "Well," he he said, "I've inquired pretty generally concerning your character and means, and as everybody speaks of you as an honest, respectable man, of abundant property, you can have the house." "Vell, den," said Hans, "I takes the house. And I want to tell you I've asked all about you among the peoples, and dey say you is the meanest landlord in the town; but I takes de house all de same."

JUVENILE SMOKERS.—An English physician, with a desire to be of benefit to the rising generation, has published some interesting facts regarding the effects of tobacco smoking upon boys. Of thirty-eight boys under fifteen years of age, whom he knew to be smokers, he discovered in twenty-seven injurious traces of the habit. Twenty-two had disorders of the circulation and digestion, palpitation of the heart, and more or less marked taste for strong drink. Twelve were troubled with hemorrhage of the nose, and an equal number had slight ulceration of the mucous membrane of the mouth. These symptoms were all mitigated and in some cases eradicated by a discontinuance of the habit of smoking. Although all were treated for the above named disorders, only those were cured who abandoned the habit.

"LIBERAL REDUCTIONS TO REGULAR PATRONS."—The Civil Rights Bill has gone into force in the District of Columbia. It imposes penalties for making any distinction in serving respectable guests on account of color, and requires a conspicuous display in public houses of lists of prices. While in some of the restaurants food and drink have been served to all colors alike as yet, others put up cards with enormously large prices marked on them, a heavy discount being made in case of white customers, so as to accommodate them at the usual rates. At one leading saloon on the evening, prices posted up are as follows: Whiskey, two dollars per drink; brandy, five dollars; gin two dollars; ale one dollar; all mixed drinks five dollars; all bitters one dollar. The bill of fare is as follows: Steak, two dollars; chops, two dollars; ham and eggs, three dollars; boiled eggs, fried eggs, coffee, tea, bread and butter, one dollar each; fish of all kinds two dollars; raw tomatoes, fifty cents. Down-town places, have printed scales of prices as follows: Brandy, one dollar per drink; whiskey, Holland gin, hock, sherry, and Rhine wines, malt liquors, soda and seltzer waters, and imported ales, fifty cents per drink; mixed drinks, seventy-five cents; cigars, twenty-five cents to one dollar and fifty cents each. Champagne and imported wines, ten dollars—"a liberal reduction made to our regular patrons."

Puget Sound Dispatch.

Vol. 1. No. 42. SERIAL BROWN, EDITOR. Seattle, Thursday, Sept. 12, 1872.

VICIOUS ADOLESCENCE.—The youthful prodigy who is permitted by partial friends to print his name in the Port Townsend Argus, as publisher, before he has arrived at years of discretion or put on "long togs," constantly shows an insane ambition to assail the editor of this paper, for no other apparent reason than to magnify the importance of his position by provoking notice from an old editor. This freak of childish vanity might be tolerated if he did not exhibit with it a "hoodlum" propensity for malicious lying and sympathy with public thieves manifestly at variance with the paternal injunction—"Keep your hands from picking and stealing, and your tongue from evil speaking."

Upon our exposition of an infamous robbery of the tax-payers in this county by collusion between the tax collectors and the printer of the Intelligencer, this young jackanapes in "jacket-and-trousers" impudently volunteers false witness for the thieves and a malicious assault upon us of the same character.—He says we ran a "rat" printing establishment in San Francisco; are "ratting" now in the publishing business; advertising at "Chinamen's wages," and "because a fellow publisher gets a mite of patronage for which he can charge rates—just ones too—shows such an intense jealousy as to bring upon himself the contempt of not only printers but of everybody else; and withal, denounces us as a "dangerous man in the community, stirring up strife," and an enemy of the craft.

There is not a semblance of truth in any of the above charges. We never, anywhere or on any occasion employed journeymen printers at less than the standard rates; never underbid any other printer for a job—except where the law required public printing to be let to the lowest bidder—or did any act which is characterized by the craft as "ratting," but have always deprecated such practices, as we have the too common practice of setting up inexperienced and irresponsible fledglings in the newspaper business, to be a burden to their friends or else out a miserable existence by forced contributions from the public treasurer, or as the subsidized organs of unscrupulous political rings.

There is not a newspaper published in Washington Territory the advertising in which is charged at more uniform and invariable rates than those in the DISPATCH. There is not an advertisement in this paper for which we receive a less rate than one hundred and twenty dollars a year per column, with an advance for less space and time, and in no instance have we solicited an advertisement at less price, or sought business to the detriment of any other publisher. During the past six months we have rejected over three columns of advertisements sent us by agents, because they did not come up to our uniform rates, and have seen all of the same advertisements published in other papers upon the Sound—principally in the Intelligencer—at the rates which we rejected.—Until this controversy we have never alluded to this matter, because we do not propose to interfere with the business affairs of our neighbors except where that business is carried on for public theft and robbery.

The young man of the Argus very well knows that he falsifies the facts when he says or intimates that we assailed the Intelligencer for charging regular or just rates for advertising the tax sales. The charges which we denounced were two dollars and fifty cents a description, averaging from two to three lines in large type, for three publications. The highest advertised rates of the Intelligencer, or any other paper in the Territory, are two dollars per square of twelve lines for the first insertion and one dollar for each subsequent insertion, and only one-half of these rates are usually charged. At these highest rates, a square containing six descriptions would have amounted to four dollars; by the usual rates charged for legal advertising, to two dollars for the three weeks publication. Any paper upon Puget Sound would have published this advertisement at the latter rates. The charge of the Intelligencer was fifteen dollars per square of six descriptions—an overcharge of eleven dollars to four upon its highest advertised rates, and thirteen dollars to two upon its usual rates for legal advertising. This flagrant swindle upon the tax-payers, was, in the delinquent school tax, levied to collect a small special tax amounting in a majority of cases to less than thirty cents each, and of over two hundred delinquents, probably not one in ten had any knowledge of it until they were put in for this cost by manifest collusion between the collector and the printer.—The Sheriff's delinquent tax sale, charged at the same rates for advertising, amounted to nearly, or quite, twice as much; the two aggregating not far from fifteen hundred dollars—an overcharge of not less than one thousand dollars—probably more than the entire receipts of the Argus office for a year.

This is the transaction which the "small boy" of the Argus rushes into print to defend, and volunteers his testimony as to the fairness of the charges, acted only by a boyish vanity to make himself apparent as an editor. Under proper home influences he professes to advocate the cause of reform and vallaintly pitches into the corruptions of the "Federal ring" in this Territory. Does he not know that the swindle which he volunteers to defend in this county is, in addition to an appropriation made by the County Commissioners at every session for publications which no other publisher charges for, a forced contribution from the pockets of the tax-payers to subsidize the Intelligencer to the interests of a ring of corrupt officials? That in addition to this, the bumper editor of that paper has been promised the nomination for the Council from this district in the interest of Garfield and Ferry if the ring succeed in controlling the Republican nominating convention? If he does not know these things he is too ill informed to take any part in this discussion.

Under Which King?

The Courier of Sept. 5th heads with the above inquiry a leader most indicative of the spirit of the political Junta of which it is the mouth-piece, and every way worthy of the newly installed editor who wrote it.

With the voice of a dictator he arraigns the independent freemen of the Territory in language which may be epitomized thus: "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve. If Garfield be King, serve him; and if any of you dare confess allegiance to any other prince, then the Republican party of the whole country will promptly and decisively ignore your claims to recognition and fellowship as members of the party."

Here we have the test, the orly test of loyalty to the principles of the Republican party. "As a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats," so this ring-appointed censor of the people arraigns at the bar of his Junta the electors of the Territory, saying to all who do not bow the knee to the author of the Nesmith letter: "Depart ye cursed into everlasting banishment from the fellowship of the Republican party; under pains and penalties we command you to hoodwink your eyes to all the flagrant inconsistencies, political hypocrisy, corruption and fraud, official unfaithfulness and personal wickedness of this most detestable of all demagogues. Stultify your consciences; banish all self-respect, and in blind obedience to the dictum of an unscrupulous faction consent to be led with a ring in your nose to the shrine of the brazen image that we have set up." This is the spirit and intent of the editor's language, and it is a proper index to the spirit of political rule in this Territory. Garfield is King, and loyalty to him settles the question of every man's political desert. All questions relating to personal honesty, to capability in any branch of the public service, or title to respect on account of sacrifices for the public welfare are ignored and spurned; while from Governor down to the smallest post office and humblest employe on an Indian Reservation, every place is filled by some supple tool of this political mountebank, irrespective of all questions touching his personal character. Nobody denies this state of facts in Washington Territory; the ring itself, through its official organ, boldly proclaims this as the principle of its action. Come under Garfield and own him as your king or else be counted an alien from the covenants of promise.

If the spirit thus exhibited were limited to Washington Territory; if we were the only people ruled by a profligate, unscrupulous faction, the evil complained of were comparatively a small matter, but it is the spirit of the times on which we have fallen. What Garfield and his pernicious faction are to Washington Territory, U. S. Grant and the military dynasty about him are to the whole nation.

Under which king? is the rallying question of the so-called, but much degenerated Republican party of to-day. Loyalty, not to conscience, to the Constitution or to the interests of the whole people; but loyalty to Grant, determines every man's eligibility to service in public affairs and to respect in private life. Whoso declares against Grant becomes a target of every poisoned missile that the tongue of hate can wield. Men of purest personal and political record; men whose patriotism was never before called in question; whose labor and learning for a lifetime have been devoted to the best interests of every class and section of the country are now held up to scorn and contempt for the only crime of preferring the man of their own choice to the man whom a factious party have nominated.

Here lies the secret of that great uprising of the people of all parties, who, ignoring all the political landmarks of past organizations, are uniting as one man to put down this intolerable spirit of misrule and restore to the country the rights and privileges of ancient time when freemen knew no king but law and conscience and when place and power were attainable only upon the ground of personal desert.

A LIFE-LONG REPUBLICAN.

"We Told You So."—We told you Struve was just the man to run the organ of the spoils gatherers at Olympia. He has the moral courage to testify to any thing that may be required of him, or invent any story that will serve the cause of the ring. He has made a decided change in the editorial tone of the Courier, has laid "old line Democrats" under contribution to write anonymous communications for the paper, and exposed on his own unsupported assertion several falsehoods and forgeries of his contemporaries against the evidence of the records. The following are some specimens of the manner in which he does the thing: We published from the index to the Congressional Globe a full list of all the bills introduced by Mr. Garfield during the winter session of 1870-71, which Struve pronounces a false statement, and adds seven other bills which he says were introduced by Garfield in 1871. We have looked through the Index to the Congressional Globe for three sessions and do not find one of the bills mentioned by Struve, as credited to Garfield.

Again, under the head of a "Manufactured Dispatch," he garbles a dispatch copied by us from the regular press dispatches, and by including an editorial comment on the same in the same quotation, he pronounces the whole as manufactured, and goes off into a tirade of virtuous indignation at a forgery committed by himself and ascribed to us. What we added to the dispatch, in a separate paragraph, was that the Bayard spoken of uniformly by the Grant papers as Senator, was not and never had been a Senator. Struve entirely approved the forgery which represented the vagabond as senator, while he denounced the exposition of the fraud as a forgery.

Again he says: "The editor of the DISPATCH has got into a msnx with the school clerk at Seattle, all about two dollars and a half." This is a very small lie, considering that the amount stated is less than the two-hundredth part of the truth. But he could not help but show his sympathy with the bumper's convention and a public theft.

The foregoing are but specimen bricks of what the public may expect from the ring editor.

The Courier demands the names of the high Federal official through whom we derived our information in regard to the Garfield letters in the hands of Cherokee Smith. We do not propose to expose the gentleman to the vengeance of the King at present, but will promise to give the name whenever Ferry will give the names of the "thirty Democrats, before mentioned."

SAN DIEGO HAPPY.—Colonel Scott, of the Texas Pacific Railroad was not in San Diego over twenty-four hours before he had effected satisfactory terminal arrangements with the people and authorities. The terminal grant made to the old Gila Rail Company, is to be transferred to him, with a certain space for right of way, etc., and that is all he wanted. No subsidies were demanded, and no talk indulged about San Diego being on the wrong side of the Bay—although San Diego Ray, like ours has two sides to it, in one sense, and has an "Old Town" and "New Town," which are rivals. Had Stanford, instead of Scott, gone there, he would have sat down five miles outside of San Diego, shaken the red flag of danger in the face of the people, and demanded subsidies of money as the price of his favor. We congratulate San Diego on having so fair and moderate a "railway king" to deal with.—S. F. Bulletin.

Puget Sound Dispatch.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

Seattle, Thursday, Sept. 12, 1872.

Authorized Agents for this Paper. DEAN & CO., 410 Montgomery street, San Francisco.

GEOGRAPHICAL SITUATION OF SEATTLE. Latitude 47° 36' m. North. Longitude west from Greenwich 122° 19' m. 40 s.—5.

Financial and Commercial.

SEATTLE, Sept. 11, 1872. The Puget Sound Banking Company report Gold in New York 113. Currency buying, 88; sight exchange on Portland and San Francisco, 1/2 per cent. premium; on New York, 1 per cent. premium for currency, 1 1/2 per cent. premium for gold.

During the week there has been the following arrivals at this port: Steamship California from Portland, Bark Osmyrn from San Francisco, and Bark Gem of the Ocean from San Francisco, all with a fair amount of freight for Sound ports.

We are informed that the bark Jenny Pitts left San Francisco with one of the largest loads of merchandise ever brought to the Sound; she is now due.

A FAITHFUL DOG.—An old mastiff who has formed an attachment for a juvenile member of our family, has taken upon himself to guard our premises at night.

It is reported that the Directors and party connected with the Northern Pacific Railroad will arrive in Portland on the 18th inst., and will soon after visit the Sound, when we may expect that some definite action may be taken in the location of a terminus of the branch line at the head of the Sound as well as the selection of a point for the grand terminus nearer the Straits.

It is within easy sailing distance of the Straits and has one of the finest harbors besides its large fresh-water lakes. Bellingham Bay with its large harbor has been long talked of as the point and it has much in its favor; but the place most to be feared by Seattle is Whidbey Island where parties connected with the Railroad Company have purchased some 25,000 acres of land.

Roll called. Present—C. P. Stone, Mayor; L. V. Wyckoff, Marshal; F. Matthias, M. R. Maddocks, S. F. Coombs, J. M. Lyon, B. Gatzert, J. T. Jordan and L. B. Andrews, Councilmen.

Motion made and carried that the proposition of H. L. Yesler, in reference to opening Commercial street, be received and placed on file. The proposition was that he (Yesler) would take $8,000 for the ground, the buildings to be removed at the expense of the City—said Yesler's property to be exempt from special tax in making assessments to defray the expenses of opening the street.

FORT TOWNSEND TO BE OCCUPIED.—Colonel James, U. S. A., and wife, with C. H. Armstrong, Chief Clerk, have arrived at Port Townsend. A FAITHFUL DOG.—An old mastiff who has formed an attachment for a juvenile member of our family, has taken upon himself to guard our premises at night. On last Monday night we heard him in a tussle with something in the yard, but on looking out discovered nothing. The next morning some clothes which had been left out to dry were found upon the ground with blood-stains upon them, and a pool of blood was found in an outhouse, all of which indicated that some sneak thief had been roughly dealt by, but the old dog makes no disclosures. We are afraid that dog will be killed by some of the "ring" before the fall campaign is over.

Gambling for a Life.

BY COLONEL PRENTISS INGRAHAM.

All was a scene of gaiety in the pretty village of F—, situated in one of the most fertile districts in the rich State of Kentucky.

In F— a gallant company of soldiers had been raised, and upon the morrow were to leave their pleasant homes for the scenes of war.

It was the night before their departure, and one of the wealthy citizens of the town had given a grand farewell entertainment in their honor, and thus all was a pleased confusion in preparing for the gay scene at Judge Bonner's large and handsome mansion.

The generous old Judge had spared neither pains nor expense to make their entertainment one of great magnificence and when the evening arrived he received his numerous guests, aided by his only child, a daughter of seventeen years of age.

Lida Bonner was the acknowledged belle of F—, and she was beloved for her beauty and lovely character not only by the young gallants of the village, but also by her school companions, for at the opening of this story she was yet a school girl.

The company from F— was commanded by Captain Roy Worthington, a planter of means, and as handsome as he was popular. His first lieutenant was one of his most intimate friends, and yet between the two there came a slight cloud, for both Roy Worthington and Dart Bradford loved Lida Bonner.

To both of the young men the beautiful girl listened, for she was a sad coquette, but toward the brilliant captain her heart had awakened with feelings of love, and yet neither knew his fate at her hands up to that day, the eve of their departure for far off Mexico.

"Lida, are you totally indifferent to me? Can I not hope, even if I may hope to return to dear old F—, that you will not have forgotten me?" said Roy.

"Indeed, you are dear to me, Roy, and I promise that you shall not be forgotten."

"Do you love me, Lida? Will you promise me this little hand upon my return?"

"I promise, Roy," and thus the two pledged their love, and once more entered the brilliantly illuminated parlors of the mansion, for they had strayed away into the garden.

"Miss Lida, this is my dance, I believe?" and Dart Bradford stood before the lovers.

"Yes, I'll see you again, Roy." And the young girl was whirled away in the waltz.

"Will you promenade once round the garden, Lida?"

"Yes, Dart, for how can I refuse you brave soldiers anything?"

The blue eyes were turned with full force upon her companion.

For some moments they walked in silence, then Dart Bradford stopped suddenly and said:

"Lida, I asked you to come here that I might tell you I loved you; that—"

"Oh, Dart, do not pain me. Let me be frank with you, for I would not raise a hope in your heart that I cannot fulfil. I am engaged to another—"

"The other is—"

"Roy Worthington, your best friend."

"Be it so, Miss Bonner. Shall we return to the mansion?" And, offering his arm, they were soon again mingling mid the gay dancers.

From the village in old Kentucky the scene has changed to sunny Mexico. Seated in a tent within the Mexican lines are two young officers unarmed, and their surroundings prove they are prisoners. Though pale and of saddened faces, easily to be recognized are Roy Worthington and Dart Bradford.

The former wears his left arm in a sling and appears to be suffering, although his face looks brave and determined.

"Well, Dart, thus will end the ambitious and bright dreams of one of us; which, it is hard to say."

"Yes, Roy. Our poor company sacrificed in the last desperate charge and one of us condemned to die in retaliation for that officer spy whom Gen. Taylor had shot some days since. It is really too bad."

"Three, five, and six—fourteen!—Throw again, sir," said the Mexican commander. "You throw well, sir—Once more. Two sixes and a three—fifteen! Twice fifteen and fourteen are forty-four. Now it is your turn, sir."

And the box was handed to Dart Bradford, who took it with a hand that slightly trembled and threw the dice upon the table.

"One, two, and—." But before the last number could be counted Dart's hat fell from his head upon the table and one of them was knocked upon the ground.

"How unlucky! You'll have to commence over again, sir. Now."

Again taking the box Dart made another throw, but the Mexican called out: "Two, three, four—nine!" A decided pallor spread over the young officer's face, as he again threw the dice upon the table.

"Three sixes! You are in luck, sir. That throw may save your life. Now, try again."

The hand holding the dice box visibly shook as the last throw was made; but ere the dice could be counted by the Mexican the table gave way with the weight upon it, and again the little regular blocks upon whose numbers a life hung, were scattered.

A frown darkened the Commander's brow and several of the staff conversed together in low tones as the table was being set up again and the last chance was given. The throw was made.

"Three sixes! Eighteen and twenty-seven are forty-five. You have won, sir. A close game of chance," said the Mexican as Dart sprang to his feet unable to conceal his great joy at his escape.

"Well, Dart, I have lost. Here, old fellow, are my papers, watch and pocket book. This ring belongs now to Lida. I made my will in her favor before I left F—. Good bye, old-fellow, and tell them at home that I died bravely. Gentlemen, I am ready." And with a firm bearing the American turned to his captors and was led away to execution, while Dart Bradford was forwarded to the lines to be exchanged with a Mexican officer of equal rank with himself.

Three years went by. Peace once more reigned in the land, and the shattered remnants of the F— guards returned to their homes crowned with victory.

Dart Bradford returned with them, but with the rank of Colonel, for he had been promoted to that grade.

Upon reaching the American lines after the game of life he had played with poor Roy Worthington, he had forwarded the things to Lida Bonner intrusted to his care, and told her what had happened, and that he had begged Roy to let him die in his stead, as no ties of requited love bound him to the world with anticipations of future happiness.

Lida deeply mourned for him, and wrote Dart a beautiful letter thanking him for the noble part he had acted towards his rival and friend, for she believed all he said, and upon the return of the gallant colonel it was not many weeks before he gained the promise of Lida to become his wife.

The joy of her bridal eve was dimmed to Roy Lida Bonner by the thought of poor Roy, lying far away in a foreign land; for although she loved Dart with a true affection, she could not feel for him the same deep love she had given his friend.

All was in readiness for the ceremony; the minister stood, book in hand, ready to join Dart Bradford and Lida Bonner together as man and wife, when the maiden uttered a shriek just as she entered the parlor leaning upon the arm of her father, and swooned away.

All present were transfixed with amazement, for there, before them, standing beside the open balcony window, stood Roy Worthington, emaciated and pale, as if by long suffering, and dressed in his uniform. He stood before them and gazed sternly upon his former friend Dart Bradford.

"Why, Roy, we all thought you dead. What does this mean?" said Dart, stepping forward.

"It means, sir, that by false representations you are now standing where I should be, the promised husband of Lida Bonner."

"Sir, you presume. I—"

"Pardon me—not that I anticipate that I may ever again win the affections of Miss Bonner but to open her eyes to the character of the man she is going to marry, I now say what I do," and as Roy Worthington spoke, he stepped forward and faced the assembled guests, while Lida, having returned to consciousness, was an attentive listener.

"When a prisoner in Mexico with Col. Bradford, one of us was doomed to die; a game of chance was to decide between us. I lost fairly I believed, for I trusted my friend was honorable; he won life and was exchanged the same day. The commander of the Mexicans spared my life; long years I was a prisoner, and now that the war is over I have returned home, and with me is my friend General Valdo de Riva, who will now explain the conduct of Col. Bradford when we gambled for our lives."

Roy Worthington ceased speaking; as he did so, a gorgeously uniformed officer stepped from the balcony and stood beside him. The dark skin and quick black eye denoted his nation, as well as his uniform, as in a broken accent he said:

"This gentleman and that one were my prisoners; my government demanded one shot in retaliation for a Mexican officer shot by General Taylor. I wished not to make a choice, so I left it to a game of chance who should die. Capt. Worthington acted most honorably; that man dishonorably and cowardly, for he cheated, as myself and staff will verify, while his friend nobly offered to take his place. Then I saved Capt. Worthington's life, and confined him as a prisoner for the war. Now we stand here to face that coward," and the Mexican's eye fell upon Dart Bradford.

"Go! never come near me again," and Lida Bonner pointed to the door while her angry eyes turned upon the man who in a few moments more would have been her husband.

"Captain Worthington, you have my warmest welcome home; Colonel Bradford, leave my house" and as Judge Bonner spoke he grasped Roy's hand.

"Curse you all for this!" exclaimed Dart Bradford, and he left the house. Nay, more, he left the State and has never since been heard from; while the brave man he had deceived soon after married Lida Bonner, the only woman he had ever loved, and General De Riva was the groomsman, for between the American and the Mexican a warm friendship had sprung into existence.

TAKING IT COOLLY.—An Englishman and a German were traveling together in a diligence and both smoking. The German did all in his power to draw his companion into conversation, but to no purpose; at one moment he would, with a superabundance of politeness, apologize for drawing his attention to the fact that the ash of his cigar had fallen on his waistcoat, or a spark was endangering his necktie. At length the Englishman exclaimed: "Why the dickens can't you leave me alone? You coat tail has been burning for the last ten minutes, but I didn't bother you about it."
