The Growing Danger.

In a recent speech delivered at Sacramento by Hon. Henry Edgerton, that gentleman made the following pointed allusion to the manner in which the great railroad and banking corporations are quietly but surely stealing away the liberties of the people. He says:
"The events of the last eight years attest that our institutions only survived the shock of armed civil strife to encounter the more perilous, because silent, insidious and unseen, agencies that have debauched the spirits and undermined the wrecks of many an illustrious heroic people, and strewn the path of ages with the works of many noble fabrics. That profound work of the most accomplished and philoposic genius of the French race, 'the Grandeur and Decadence of the Romans,' a book that in these degenerate days should be in the hands of every thoughtful American may be epitomized in a single pregnant sentence, that the course of that people was from virtuous industry, economy, and simplicity, to wealth, from wealth to luxury, from luxury to licentiousness, from licentiousness to moral decomposition and decay, and consequent national extinction. The splendid vices contracted among the great, the corruptions first diffused throughout the high places of the State, gradually pervaded every rank in society, and produced that general defection of its citizens from probity, from duty, from their ancestral faith and virtues, which ultimately wrought the subversion of republican Rome, and prostrated its liberties at the feet of Caesar. We are repeating this history at a fearful pace. The shadows that darkened upon the great republic of Pagan antiquity after the lapse of nearly a thousand years are rapidly gathering around the great republic of the Christian era ere it has reached the first centennial year of its life. The debased standard of honor in public conduct, the scandalous impunity for great public offenses, the open contempt for law, the speculation in office, the extortion, the bribery, the profligacy in manners and morals, that reached their highest pitch in republican Rome, are conspicuous features in the moral physiognomy of our own times in republican America. The venality of the Roman forum, in its worst days, was not more flagrant than that lately revealed in the judiciary of the most populous and powerful of the American States. The iniquities sanctioned by a Roman Senate have their analogies in the recent transactions of an American Congress. The society that produced a Claudius and tolerated his crimes and debaucheries with indifference, has its counterpart in a society in which Treard and his accomplices can successfully elude the laws and enjoy in security the fruits of their unpunished felonies; in which a fish could mingle the iniquities of his list and the most audacious villainies with the gravest concerns of State, with the administration of justice, with the form and substance of legislation itself."

RAILROAD WORK SUSPENDED.—The Olympia Courier of the 30th ult. says: "Railroad Tommy insists that no stoppage of work on the line of the railroad has been made. We have the testimony of the Oregonian, and of parties directly from the road, that work has been suspended along the whole line, in compliance with orders from the East, except on the wharf at Tacoma. No freight trains are running over the road—the passenger trains convey both passengers and freight. Trade and travel, at present, does not justify but the running of one train. The steamer Idaho brought iron sufficient to lay the track for five miles. Even if operations are resumed, no more track will be laid until enough iron is brought to complete the road through to Tacoma."

Ordinance No. 47.
In relation to sidewalks.
The City of Seattle does ordain as follows:
Sec. 1. That the owners of property on north side of James street from Third to Seventh street, shall build a good and substantial sidewalk, six feet wide, with planks not less than one inch and a half thick.

Sec. 2. In case any person or persons shall fail to build such sidewalk within from which report the following is a literal extract:

"As this bay has such a decided disadvantage, from its great depth of water to being considered as an eligible harbor for a great commercial city, I don't deem it of sufficient importance to go into a more detailed description of the surrounding country, but will proceed to describe in my next report the harbor which has thus far attracted more attention than any other point on Puget Sound, viz: the harbor of SEATTLE."

THE FAIR.—The exposition the products of Western Washington has astonished everybody who has witnessed it, especially visitors from abroad, of whom there were a number in attendance. All testify that in the line of fruits, flowers and vegetables they have never seen this display ex-celled in California, or any of the Eastern States. In the stock line with very few exceptions, nothing is exhibited worth mentioning. The exceptions are, some very fine Leicester sheep, by Mr. Baxter, of Whatcom; eight Angora goats, by Gen. H. Stevens, Thurston county; a Suffolk pig weighing 830 lbs., and several Suffolk, Berkshire and Hampshire pigs, by Booth, Foss & Borst, of the Seattle Market. Finer poultry, of the most approved varieties, was never exhibited anywhere.

When the various committees have reported, we hope to give a detailed account of the articles of interest on exhibition.

RAILROAD WORK SUSPENDED.—The Olympia Courier of the 30th ult. says: "Railroad Tommy insists that no stoppage of work on the line of the railroad has been made. DIVORCES.—The Coos Bay (Oregon) News says: "Hitherto it has been the custom to try divorce cases before a Court Commissioner or referee, upon whose report the decree of the Court is based. Judge Mosher has taken a step in the right direction by ordering all cases of domestic infidelity to be tried in open court, hereafter. It will be the means of cutting off one fruitful source of perjury and will remedy an evil that has already existed too long."

Judge Jacobs, of this Judicial District, has established the same rule in his Courts. Clandestine divorces are not easily attainable where this rule prevails.

We learn some items of interest regarding Stevens and Whitman counties, from Mr. Favorite. A great deal of attention has been paid to stock raising, particularly on account of a market being more readily obtained. This year, Whitman county has raised a large amount of grain, probably 75,000 bushels in excess of the home demand. Stevens county, south of the Spokane, has probably a surplus of some 40,000 bushels. All this will likely find its way to market, first in wagons to Snake river, at a cost of 30 cents per bushel, with probably 40 cents more from there to Portland. The settlers in this region feel the need of a flouring mill. Some 7,000 bushels of wheat have been offered as a gift to any one who will put up a good mill. As flour now sells there at six dollars a barrel, this would be quite a bonus. Whitman county, especially, is settling up quite rapidly. This season some forty families have moved into it from Montana and the Eastern States. From the description we have of it that part of the country will eventually become one of the richest and most valuable farming regions in the Territory. The great want now is a good wagon road as an outlet, to be succeeded of course, at no distant day by a railroad.—Courier.

A curious story is told by Oxberry of the wife of an actor named Norris. Norris died, and his widow married a person named Barry. Twelve years after the death of Norris, she was acting at the theater in North Walsham, Norfolk the character of Calista, in Rowe's "Fair Penitent." In the last act of the tragedy where Calista lays her hands upon the skull, she was suddenly seized with a shivering and faintness. She fainted outright, and was taken to her lodgings. During the night her illness increased, on the following day, recovering her senses, she anxiously inquired where the skull had been procured which was produced on the preceding night. The sexton was asked, and replied that it was the skull of Norris, an actor buried in the corner of the churchyard. It proved to be her husband. The shock killed her.

A woman applied to a magistrate for a summons against a neighbor. "She called me a thief your honor. Can't I make her prove it?" "No doubt you could," said the magistrate, "but you had better not."

REMOVED.—Dr. Weed has removed his office to rooms over the Drug store of Morrill & King.

To allow our office force a day's attendance at the Fair, no paper will be issued from this office to-morrow.

A Library Book, "The Hugenots," has been lost. Will the finder please return to the Library?

MARRIED.—At the Carlton House, in Olympia, on Tuesday evening, Sept. 30, by Rev. Geo. F. Whitworth, Dexter Horton, Esq. to Miss Carrie E. Parsons, all of this city.

At the residence of Mr. Geo. Stetson, at Port Gamble, on Monday evening, Sept. 29, 1873, by Rev. G. H. Atkinson, Mr. Ranear Hopkins to Miss Eva Andrews, both of Seattle.

PRESENTATION.—The bachelor friends of Mr. Ranear Hopkins, on the occasion of the marriage of the latter gentleman to one of the favorite daughters of Seattle, welcomed the happy pair at the Occidental Hotel, on Wednesday evening, and through Major Blake presented them with an elegant silver tea service, beautifully inscribed by W. G. Jamieson, one of the donors.

TREE OF LIFE.

Pat. filed June, 1866, to Peter Foster.
THIS VALUABLE MEDICINE, has been used for several years past in the Eastern State with marvelous success. As an experiment, I tried Mr. Foster's Egyptian Bitters. From the effects of which I have experienced the most gratifying results. I can sincerely recommend it to others similarly afflicted. The following testimony to its merits:

SEATTLE, August 19, 1873.
I have been a sufferer for several years from chronic bilious affections from which no medicine tried by me afforded any relief. As an experiment, I tried Mr. Foster's Egyptian Bitters. From the effects of which I have experienced the most gratifying results. I can sincerely recommend it to others similarly afflicted.

Puget Sound Dispatch.

SEAN BROWN, EDITOR. Seattle, W. T. Oct. 9 1873.

California Correspondence.

COLUMBUS, Cal., Sept. 20, 1873. Editor Dispatch.—Somebody said, a long time ago, and the saying has since been many times repeated, that "variety is the spice of life," and the adage seems by common consent to have been accepted as a truism.

As you will have learned through your California exchanges etc. this reaches you, an election came off down here in the "Eureka" State on the 3d inst., resulting in a glorious victory on the part of the Liberal Democratic voting fraternity.

It was a union in good faith of the good and true in common cause against the evils that have been engendered and grown into corrupt and dangerous sores on the political body in late times; and the result of their united effort has given them great satisfaction and encouragement, enabling them to breathe freer and deeper, while the unsuccessful anti-democratic goblins and grabbers and corporate monopolists, are troubled with a distressing phthisic, are "down in the mouth"—down all over—without any foundation upon which to rest a hope of restoration, either immediate or remote.

They have gone up the Salt River shore—to the station where many have landed before. The land is so poor along the Salt River shore, that no "grab" is raised now—nor was ever before.

It's a place hot for torment, created by God over political sinners to live his rod; and those recals will never get back alive, I will bet any money from one to five.

Dismissing the subject of the election, I will next mention that the weather here remains without change—hot and dry—but the longer the drought continues the scarcer and poorer becomes the water, the dust and uncomfortable the traveling, the shorter the feed for stock and withal the more difficult for the inhabitants to obtain a comfortable subsistence.

But when relief from our present situation comes, in the shape of the "rainy season," the weather will probably be as much in the extreme on the other hand. Then it will rain, and rain, and rain, when it has rained, and rained, and rained, it will then set in for a rainstorm; and whereas it was hot and dry and dusty, it will then be cold and wet and muddy.

We find the display of grains and seeds large and very creditable to the exhibitors and the region of the country where they were raised. The exhibit, under this class, by W. Owen Bush, of Bush Prairie, Thurston county, was particularly fine, displaying a large amount of farming skill, and excellent taste in the arrangement. We deem the thanks of the Association due to Mr. Bush for the labor and energy displayed in contributing so largely to the success of the Fair.

The best class collection was exhibited by W. O. Bush of Thurston, consisting of 16 varieties of potatoes and 16 varieties of other vegetables, 1st prem. $5. The foregoing report of the Committee on class No. 3, is most respectfully submitted, with the suggestion that the display of vegetables is a credit to the exhibitors and to the country. The potatoes were fine in quality as well as quality, and it was difficult to tell which was the best, as the poorest were well worthy of a premium.

The squashes were very fine but many of them mixed, especially the Hubbard variety, none of which in our opinion, were pure; also many of the potato squashes were mixed; hence your committee would recommend producers to be very careful not to plant too close, as the mixing spoils the fine quality of the varieties. The cabbage, beets, parsnips, carrots, turnips, cauliflowers, etc. were of a fine quality but not so large a quantity as might be wished.

C. CLYMER, Supt. C. W. LAWTON, L. G. ABBOTT, Judges. N. P. R. R.—Mr. George Crouch made the following statement relative to the Northern Pacific Railroad to a Times reporter last evening: When I was in Europe some time since, shortly after the removal of Gould from the Erie railroad, a good many bankers and extensive dealers in American securities came to me for information respecting the Northern Pacific Railroad. Desperate attempts had been made to place the bonds of this Company in the London Market also in the German markets—

At this time several prominent bankers in Berlin, Frankfurt and Amsterdam subscribed and sent out a commission to this country comprising railroad men, engineers and men conversant with financial matters. They travelled over the entire route of the Northern Pacific Railroad, and on their return to Europe drew up two reports, one on financial matters and the other on railroad enterprise. These reports were sent to the bankers who organized the commission, and they have never been published. Large sums of money were expended to prevent their publication, but I succeeded in obtaining copies in German and translated them into English, and they were without exception the most able railroad documents I ever saw. Every word in the reports carried weight with it, and the substance of both reports was that the railroad was organized on a wrong basis; that the financial organization was entirely inadequate; that the scheme could never be carried out as projected, and nothing but disaster could result to those who had anything to do with the matter. At the same time they acknowledged that a great deal could be done by the railroads to develop that region of the country. All efforts to get copies of these reports were unavailing. This was about twelve months ago. The English people whom I represent are people of large capital, anxious to invest money in legitimate American enterprises, but with the example of the Erie before them they are desirous of removing all these "lead cats" out of the American market, and in my giving them a synopsis of this report they saw at once that it was not desirable to invest in the Northern Pacific, and through their influence English capitalists were prevented from being drawn into this matter. The reports had a similar effect on the German market, and consequently Jay Cooke and McCulloch were unable, in spite their great influence, growing out of their connection with the Government and their high standing in Europe, to get these bonds taken up to any large extent. Here in America they scarcely tried it. They relied entirely on the English and German markets, and owing to this careful report of the German Commission the thing failed. That information has been in the market for some time, and a pretty vigilant eye has been kept on the Northern Pacific. Although the failure of Jay Cooke & Co. may create a temporary feeling of insecurity in Europe as to American securities, in the end it will do great good, as it would have been a great deal worse had more of these bonds been taken in Europe.—New York Times, Sept. 20, 1873.

The prisoners are spoken of as in good health, but seem to be somewhat independent at the evidences of the fate which awaits them. Riddle of Yreka it is supposed, will act as interpreter on the occasion, as it will be necessary to translate the order of the execution to them.
