"Humph, no," said Yik Kee. "Yellow sick," and he closed his eyes in a drowsy sort of manner. "Go now—do late."

"Mother! I think we're gone to ride," said Ted, as we galloped over the plains. He was deathly pale, poor little fellow, but he sat erect and firm.

"Get out, John," said Jack, "you needn't be scared any more; we're at home."

"No, don't, Nell," he said turning his red as a rose, and besying himself looked at us solemnly. "Celestial looked at us solemnly; Mamee toddled up to him. He looked at her curiously but did not move."

As in other polled breeds, Red Polled is very impressive. Stock raised by a Red Polled bull, no matter of what horned breed is the dam, is almost always red in color and polled in character.

As a writer in "Sweden's Gazette" remarked a short time ago, the cow of the future must be a good milker and at the same time a good beef producer.

Mr. G. Gooderham, Suffolk, Eng.; has been a number of years a member of the Red Polled Club. He is the owner of Wild Rose, 1271, and in a letter written in July, Mr. Gooderham says: "Wild Rose, now nine years old, calved March 7, 1883, and has been giving for the last fourteen weeks 47 pints of milk per day, and 20 pints of her own milk."

Mr. J. J. Colman's prize cow Fanny, which has produced five calves, had a live weight of 1,926 pounds. Mr. Taylor's 3 years and 10 months old steer gave a dead weight of 1,596 pounds.

The live weight of a 3 year old cow of the Red Polled breed, shown at the Suffolk Club show, was 2,756 pounds. A steer of the Dutch tribe, shown at New York, weighed 1,999 at 2 years and 11 months old.

There will be a special election held in Rockford, precinct March 18th, for the purpose of electing a Justice of the Peace.

Mr. McDonald is now at the Rockford steamboat landing constructing a boat which will run up within six miles of the mines.

SATURDAY, MARCH 1, 1884.

PERHAPS the individual who occupies a space in the last issue of the Spokane Falls Review, under the signature of "R. L." desired to jump suddenly into notoriety by awakening a response from the Spokane Falls papers. But he is too small a bird for them to waste ammunition upon. The article is true in the extreme and does not even hint at the truthfulness to make it readable.

We are sorry that the Spokane Falls Review does not secure the notice that the importance of the sheet deserves from the land office at this place, but really believe that it gets its full share of the notices of publication. From our acquaintance with the gentleman in the office we are satisfied that they wish to do the fair thing by every publisher in the District. Party organs have no weight with them, as they aim to follow out the letter of the law. The fact is, Spencer, your lines are thrown into a very unprofitable pool. You cannot hope to catch fish when the fish refuse to bite. Look at home before your spite turns upon a neighbor. You are running a good local paper, deserving of hearty support. We know the extent of the mail you receive as well as you do yourself. Your citizens would see you go to the wall without a helping hand. Take our advice, given in the most friendly spirit. Shake the dust of Cheney from your feet, let Spokane Falls severally alone as it never has been done before, and as soon as possible strike a location where your efforts will be appreciated.

The Wonderful Cœur d'Alene Gold Fields Again.

Golden Sands and Shining Nuggets.

Veins of Quartz and Lodes of Silver.

What a Spectacular Follow-up of the Review Feat with his Own Eyes.

Spokane Falls, Feb. 27, 1884.

Reading to see the wonderful Cœur d'Alene mines for myself, we secured a ticket over the Spokane Falls and Cœur d'Alene Transportation Company's line, and at six in the morning boarded the stage, only one, our boots were conveyed in another for Cœur d'Alene, arriving at ten the same morning. We found this embryo city all life and bustle. From here it is "go as you please," over the old Mullan road, past Wolf Lodge and the Mission, through the famous Four's of July canyon, to Evolution. Here transportation by wagon and sleigh ends, and pack trains and "Foot and Walker's Line," begin. Fresh from the north-pole freckles of Spokane, and tender as a spring chicken, our party of nine persons, commenced the ascent of the mountain on foot over the Evolution trail to the mines, the coldest day of the season.

It is toll, toll, for nine miles to the top, one of the best tests of endurance that can be imagined. Muscles weary, bellows needed mending, and the perspiration starts. We look back to the bottom, and then up to the next knob, wondering if it will be the last. As we near the summit the difficulty is increased by the lightness of the air which makes us fairly gasp for breath. By the time we reach the summit under the perspiration and we were greatly fatigued. The party which started out together were strung apart for a mile. On the summit the cold was intense, and the wind's fierce blasts gave a shrill scream as it swept through the scrub pine, bare and dead trees which looked like telegraph poles, nearly blinding us with drifting snow. Though the perspiration streamed down our cheeks we had to fight against being frost bitten. Down the mountain nine miles more, to Beaver Creek, across a large total distance of twenty-three miles to Eagle City.

The present metropolis of this mining district. The town stands on a beautiful plateau, at the junction of Eagle and Pritchard Creeks. To the southward a steep and lofty mountain, clothed with swaying pines of perennial green, in most shuts out the sun. Its location and surroundings are the very ideal of a city of mines, and if the district proves rich, it bids fair to rival Deadwood and Leadville in growth and prosperity, as it now surpasses them in beauty of location. It is built of log cabins and tents, and probably contains 500 people. Although the cold was intense, men were working like beavers. The mountain sides resounded with the crash of falling timber, and sliding of logs. Stores, shops, restaurants, saloons and farm banks with big game, are numerous. Even the "woman in scarlet," who, as the good book tells us, whose footsteps take hold on hell, are there.

Resting a day we started up Pritchard Creek, determined to see at least one placer and one quartz claim. About five miles above Eagle City is the noted "Widow's Claim," now held by "Ten Orphans," as they are styled. A narrow strip along the rim rock, not more than a quarter of an acre, has been worked with sluices. I went to the claim, where the courteous and accommodating foreman, William Keeler, informed me that $18,000 had been taken out of the ground worked. A pot of gold stood among pots of beans, bacon and buseuit, from which he gave me a nugget, that weighs $3.00. The claim contains twenty acres, and of the same proportion as that worked would yield $1,500,000 in gold dust. Other claims in the same vicinity have yielded and promise equally as well. Men are everywhere at work digging drain ditches, making sluice boxes, and preparing for active mining as soon as the weather moderates.

I next visited the "Mother Lead" of quartz, some two miles further up Pritchard Creek. This claim was located by J. E. Harris, William King and Charles Clark, in October 1883, another claim adjoining this on the same lead, being located by other parties at the same time. The old gentleman Harris was in the claim alone. He kindly showed me the mine. We are told that the streets of the New Jerusalem are paved with gold. When Satan and his followers were discomfited by the hosts of the Lord, they repaired to the infernal regions and bulked high a mountain of gold. But here, as in a silvery stream which gurgles and bubbles across a bed of gold. A vein of gold bearing quartz about four feet wide cuts obliquely across the creek, and dips into the mountain. I cannot say whether this is a "lead," "lode," "ledge," or a "true fissure vein," whether it is a "speck," "float," or a "slide," but the eye of a green horn can detect gold in this quartz. These men have spent the lovely winter in their little cabin, as have many others, guarding their treasure, doubtless dreaming of the gold of an ancient Ophir, of a new bonanza which shall rival the famous Comstock lode.

Other discoveries in this vicinity and elsewhere in the district are said to be equally as promising, but your space will not admit of their mention.

Towns.

On Pritchard Creek, above Eagle City, several new towns are springing up.

MURRAYVILLE, At the mouth of Alder Gulch, is the centre of the principal active mining operations now.

RAVEN, Is further up at the mouth of Bear and Granite Gulches, and SULLIVAN CITY, Further up, at the foot of the summit. Both towns are surrounded by what is believed to be rich placer and quartz.

Speaking of these mines generally, I will say, as to LOCATION, They are in the Bitter Root range of the Rocky Mountains, not in the Cœur d'Alene, as is generally supposed. They appear to me to be located in Kootenai county Idaho, but in the district they are generally assumed to be in Shoshone county.

ACCESSIBILITY, Never before has a mining camp been found so accessible. A great continental railroad—the Northern Pacific, winds around three sides of it within fifty miles distance. Yet now they are the most inaccessible, owing to nothing having been done to build roads before winter set in.

ROUTES, There is but one route by which freight or passengers can reach the mines by the aid of horse, mule, or mule power. This is the route via Cœur d'Alene, the Mission and Evolution. Steamboats will run on the lake as soon as spring opens. The Jackass Prairie route for a wagon road, connecting the steamers with the mines is practicable, and is now being opened by the Spokane Falls and Cœur d'Alene Transportation Company. The Trout Creek trail is out over the mountain, and is the best of the Thompson's Falls route, and found it entirely practicable for a wagon road from the Montana side.

The rock formation of the Cœur d'Alene district are of igneous origin—slates, granites, porphyry and quartz, and all indications are those of a rich mineral belt. But the mines are not sufficiently developed to judge of their permanence and value. The question in placer mining is, Will the deep bed rock pay less or more than the rim rock? and will the quartz prove what prospectors have been led to expect. The district will be thoroughly prospected in the spring, and the problem solved.

The miners are coming—from Europe, Australia and every State and Territory of our Union; and anything but the REVIEW or I could say would not stop them.

A Fire at Davenport.

Last Monday evening the village of Davenport was visited by a disastrous fire that consumed two one-story buildings owned by Alex Patterson both of which were 25x50. The store has been occupied by J. L. Hollins, who had charge of the assignment stock of Mr. Patterson. About 7 o'clock Monday evening the store was closed, and fire extinguishers, between 9 and 10 o'clock the building was discovered to be on fire underneath the floor. The front doors were broken open and the moment the air entered the entire room burst into flames. Nothing could be done to save the property and the two structures were entirely consumed within twenty minutes after the first alarm. Only about $200 worth of goods were saved. The loss on buildings and stock amounts to about $5,000 with some $4,000 insurance. The origin of the fire is in doubt, but it is supposed that it ignited either from a cigar stub carelessly thrown on the floor, or a coal from the stove. The loss of the establishment will be sorely felt by the real estate of that neighborhood that has a depend largely upon it as a source from which to draw supplies.

Old Timer.

There was a case of final proving up on land before the United States Land Office of this city this week of peculiar interest, and one, we believe, that has no parallel in the history of the land department. The settler in this case is an Indian named Quin-ne-mo-se, and the quarter section that he has taken up and now owns is situated near the Spokane bridge. It seems that Quin-ne-mo-se was born on this piece of land, in a log house he still occupies, 70 years ago, and according to his statement his father built the cabin fifty 100 years ago. He has lived constantly on the land, a sufficient length of time to justify his claim as an actual resident. He has raised crops for 28 years, and looks physically capable of continuing on keeping up his licks for as many more. When the Catholic missionaries arrived here 30 years ago they found Quin-ne-mo-se living in a log house, cultivating the ground and to all appearances a civilized being. What a picture of reflection is awakened when one meditates upon the changes that this untutored son of the forest has witnessed during his constant sojourn at the Falls of three score years and ten. He has seen the solitude of the wilderness invaded by the whites, slowly at first until almost all of the land marks of his childhood have disappeared. The railroad has pierced the solemn sanctuary of nature, and with it has come hundreds of restless spirits that have changed the face of the earth, and where once the voice of the tumbling waters echoed through a labyrinth of trees, it is now stifled and lost amidst the roar of a large city. The white man's genius and the white man's power has usurped the reign of the aboriginal, and the aged Indian will live to see the time when nothing will remain to him of the surroundings of his early days but the memory of the woods and wilds, and the tales of his youth will be received by his listeners as traditions of a misty past.

Next week the contractors will break ground for a new building at the southwest corner of Riverside avenue and Mill street, and the work will be crowded ahead until the edifice is ready for occupancy. E. H. Jamieson, Esq., who contributed his share to the building prosperity of '83 is the gentleman who is among the first to set the ball rolling at the opening of the new season. The building about to be constructed while of frame will be most substantially finished throughout. Mr. J. does not believe in putting up poor improvements, and in this instance will have a store room that will be equal in strength and appearance to any frame in the city. The building will be 30 feet front by 81 feet in depth with entrances on both streets. The front will be 26 feet in height handsomely finished. A basement eight feet in the clear will be under the entire structure. The work will probably be done by A. J. Stewart who has had a hand in putting together a great number of houses, both private and public, in this city during the past two years, and will have much more to do the coming summer. This addition will materially enhance the appearance of Riverside avenue, and will be the beginning of a building epidemic that will surpass in extent that of last year, when material could not be procured fast enough to fill orders. People were surprised to see the rapid strides made by our city last year, and was wonderful when we consider that the heavy expenditure did not break out until May, but with three months start this year it will be hard to estimate the growth that the Falls will make during 1884.

In The Neck.

The reprehensible habit of thrusting stove pipes through the roofs of houses with a perfect disregard to the safety of the city has been carried so far that the town is now full of fire traps that have only been spared through a merciful interpretation of providence. The Marshal has been instructed to look into the subject of the construction of flues and chimneys with the object of throwing a slight safeguard against a place destined of any defense against fire, and that official has been pretty vigilant of late. One Joseph Deesky put up two frames in this place and insisted upon having the smoke conductors crop out of the roof with a careless disregard for surrounding property criminal in its recklessness. He was warned to desist and ordered to correct the abuses as existing. Not heeding the mandate and going still further as if scoring the majesty of the law Joseph constructed for himself a third domicile, with the same indignity protruding from the shingles. The thin tube pointed its black mouth toward heaven as if calling down vengeance upon the head of the persistent and indiscriminate mode of procedure. The fresh violation of the law caught the eye of Marshal Hyde and Mr. Deesky was handed up before the bar of justice and compelled to pledge $5 and costs for his failure to comply with the request of the official. Jos., or any one who repeats this work let the firing business go merrily on. The city cannot be jeopardized merely to suit the pleasure of a few individuals who are too economical to construct substantial chimneys.

Full House.

The Board of Trade held a regular meeting at the new rooms on Main street Monday evening and a right lively assembly it proved to be. The attendance was large, quite a number had something to say and it was said in a cheerful spirit. Several new members were admitted, and other minor business was disposed of. The large attendance showed that the members are interested in the organization and are desirous of making it a power in the advancement of the interests of the place. We believe that considerable good has already emanated from this institution, and that it will continue to be an active auxiliary in furthering the progress of Spokane Falls.
