FAIR ASSOCIATION.

Something that Everybody Should be Interested In.

It has been suggested to us that an organization be formed in this city for the purpose of arranging to hold a county or district fair during the coming fall. We consider the idea a good one and feel satisfied that such an undertaking would meet with great success.

The history of this extraordinary claim is as follows: The Widow was originally located for Mrs. M. P. Lane by A. J. Prichard her attorney in fact, March 24, 1883, and was relocated and recorded June 11, 1883, on page 36, Book A, records of Coeur d'Alene Mining District.

Once more smiling Portland comes to us all wreathed in smiles, all admiration for our charms, complimenting us on our surpassing beauty, wondering at our growth, and going into raptures over our superlative loveliness and moral worth, and telling us we really must let her take it to have it, that she just couldn't live without our likeness, and she will charge us but ten cents a copy, and even less if we only take a quantity. But alas, and alack, having thus by her perfidious handshakes gained but only the more deeply to wound and incite our jealousy, and trusting her heartily, she dashed our trembling limbs, she immediately assumes another role, and turning on her heel, and thus unconsciously betraying her evil intent, goes deliberately to work spoiling good ink and paper by making up a lot of botchy caricatures and shoddy descriptive drivel and combining them into ten cent numbers of an alleged "Illustrated Journal" except the West Shore, to be sent out and for the benefit of Portland sold as a fair representative of Spokane Falls as it is! It may be fun for Portland, and much wasted money in the pockets of the publishers, but it is none the less a flagrant, gross and libelous outrage on the city of Spokane Falls.

THE WIDOW. To say that A. B. Fler is dead means little to anyone. To say that Oregon John is dead will cause a pang of sincere regret in thousands of hearts. Oregon John is the only name by which he has been known in the mining regions of the Pacific Coast for twenty years past. All who have visited mining excitements west of the Rocky mountains know him well, and knowing him, will be sorry to learn that he has in his day had plenty of money, and spent it for others. He was good to everybody but himself, was kind, generous and open-handed to a fault. The strange fever that all miners and prospectors fall victims to, the fever that causes the pulses to leap whenever a new camp is discovered, Oregon John caught a quarter of a century ago. It never left him. As a miner, as a man, and as one of the boys, he has had hundreds of warm friends. No one ever spoke ill of him, and whoever followed a mining excitement was sure to give a cordial greeting to the warm-hearted old pioneer. He always came to a camp among the first, and always stayed to the last, or until some new discovery was made somewhere. He came to the Coeur d'Alenes with whitened hair and beard, and weak, tottering steps. He was an old, broken down man, yet he could not stay away. The weird fascination of camp life and the rattle of the sluices, and the finding of gold dust was as great as when he was in his prime, and though he was sick and decrepit, in his day, he came with him, and struck him in the face with the first rash. The result was inevitable. The shattered constitution and weak lungs and diseased body could not withstand the hardships and exposure. From almost a moment of his arrival he was dependent upon the kindness and charity of friends. And Tuesday 9th last fall, he died.

new yards up the creek. The latter part of this week the boys expect to strike this rich ground again, and the largest part of the gold will consist of nuggets worth from five to twenty-five dollars. The clean-up of high, last fall, used to run from $200 to $800. Over eighteen thousand dollars was taken out by the boys, and it all came from a very small strip of ground which is supposed to be the channel of an ancient river. At present, the work performed is with a view of preparing a dump for the richer ground above. Many disadvantages are encountered now which will be overcome in a few days, yet the clean-ups of the past week would be considered quite satisfactory in most cases. Monday was representing by up the gulch, and little work was done. The Widow that day, and no clean-up was made. On Tuesday $158 was cleaned up. The yield of the Saturday previous was $150. Thursday and Friday's run was $450, and Wednesday's $270. Nine men are interested in the claim, but only eight are in the mines at present. The aggregate amount of gold taken out on Wednesday to Wednesday inclusive, was $1,100. Only six days work was really performed, which gives over $24 per day to the man.

They were told that they would have to purchase tickets to Portland, but that it was the same thing. They did, but on arriving at Wallula, were compelled to pay passage to Dayton and their Portland coupons went for naught. -Walla Walla Journal.

If the above is true, it is but another reason why this gigantic band of thieves should be refused further assistance from the government in the way of land grants or anything else. If the immigrants had applied for tickets to Spokane Falls, Tacoma or the Coeur d'Alene mines, they would have obtained them without trouble; but the company has no use for any point south of Snake river, except to clutch the settlers on lowlands. The means that are used to attract immigration to the company's towns to the disadvantage of other portions of the Territory, would disgrace the dirtiest swab that ever disgraced Coeur d'Alene nuggets from his body. -Dayton Chronicle.

Timber Culture. J. A. Sterner, a practical farmer near Dayton, gives his experience as follows: I have a timber culture entry. I have grown the trees and made full proof. Perhaps my experience might be of some benefit to those who have such claims or contemplate making timber culture entries, therefore I give it for publication. I would always advise the planting of boxelder in this country. It takes to hard wood, grows rapidly and is susceptible of a fine polish, making it valuable for furniture making. It is not a shrub, but grows tall and straight if it is close together. Always plant the seed; by transplanting you lose one year's growth, there is no trouble in getting the seed to grow if properly managed. Procure the seed in the fall. Never let it get dry. Do not keep it in the house; keep it in an outhouse. Better still keep it out of doors all winter. Put it on a hard packed place, such as a path or road that has been well tramped or beaten down and turn a box over it, or put it in the cellar so that it will not get dry and you will experience no trouble about its growing. Do not select the rough, steep hillsides, as they are much harder to cultivate and the ten acres of the one hundred and sixty is scarcely missed if you take the best, and surely the timber will worth more twenty years hence, than all the grain that can be grown on the ten acres. Plant in drills four feet apart. Cultivate the ground between the rows just as soon as the little trees are up. Cultivate thoroughly the first year. Do not let any weeds grow as they sap the land and retard the growth of the trees.

By following the above directions the trees will be from two to five feet high when winter comes. The next spring, cultivate again until the limbs get some length so as to shade the ground and you will have nothing more to do except protect the trees from the stock. The advantage of planting the trees close together, they will grow straight and much taller. No trimming required and only two seasons of cultivation necessary. The trees being close together thereby shade the ground, so that no weeds will grow and the leaves drop under the trees and remain there and fertilize the soil. Being not 2 1/2 ft. apart for trees.

The failure that nearly every one has met with in this country and so much complained of, that the boxelder seed will not come up, is to be wholly attributed to not planting in the spring, but putting off until all the other crops are put in. Plant your tree seed first if you wish to succeed. Nature plants all seed as soon as it is ripe enough to fall to the ground. By following nature you need not be engaged in growing a shelter tree for six years. I experience no difficulty in getting the seed to grow and no one else need to, if they will follow the above direction. -Walla Walla Union.

We acknowledge the receipt of the first number of the School Journal published at Dayton, and edited by F. M. McCully. It is a neat publication, devoted exclusively to educational matters. It is a question, however, if the $1 ad is extensive enough to support a paper of the kind.

quiere was cheerfully given, and when at last he became bed-ridden, the boys got him a tent and an outfit costing $25, and gave him food, fire, a nurse and physicians. Doctors Firth and Farrow gave him every possible attention, but he was too far gone for human aid. He fell asleep one night, and awoke in eternity. Even the nurse did not know he was dead until next morning. As he lay in the neatly painted coffin the boys propped, he seemed to be in a peaceful, happy sleep. The calmness expressed in the dead face was so remarkable as to excite much comment. The old pioneer seemed to have found perfect rest at last. His funeral was one that will long be remembered. The coffin was tenderly borne to the central portion of the town, and hundreds of men gathered around. The games all closed, the stores and saloons ceased their business, and even the busy Trumbo shut up his auctioneer stand, and forgot to say "Don't mention it. Shake 'em up!" Doc Samba brought out a table and placed it in front of his saloon. From this table Rev. W. C. Shippen delivered the first sermon ever preached in the new mines. It was a sermon full of touching pathos and tender christianity, a sermon suited to the rough wild camp, yet full of religious fervor. The boys stood in the hot sun with uncovered heads, and listened patiently and attentively to the close. A more orderly assemblage never was seen. When the services were ended, the pall bearers carried the coffin up the snowy trail to the graveyard in the hill side. The clergyman sang a hymn and performed the concluding rites. The coffin was lowered, and the boys returned to their usual avocations. But the day was sad, and voices were less boisterous. A spirit of solemnity had crept over the camp, and its influence outlived the day. Mr. Pierce was a native of Pennsylvania, aged about 52 years. He has no living relatives, so far as can be ascertained. -Coeur d'Alene Nugget.

Smiling and Minister. Once more smiling Portland comes to us all wreathed in smiles, all admiration for our charms, complimenting us on our surpassing beauty, wondering at our growth, and going into raptures over our superlative loveliness and moral worth, and telling us we really must let her take it to have it, that she just couldn't live without our likeness, and she will charge us but ten cents a copy, and even less if we only take a quantity. Imposing on Immigrants. Between two and three hundred immigrants arrived at Wallula Sunday night in a thoroughly disguised state of mind. They stated that they had been packed across the continent in two cars, and in consequence, they were weak in the knees, and their heads were aching. They were taken care of by the men of the Northern Pacific company. A colony of nearly a hundred of these immigrants, men, women and children, were at the depot, yesterday, and the Journal reporter was informed by several of the men of the party that in purchasing tickets, at St. Paul they stated to the agent that their destination was Dayton, W. T. Instead of obtaining tickets to that point they were told that they would have to purchase tickets to Portland, but that it was the same thing. They did, but on arriving at Wallula, were compelled to pay passage to Dayton and their Portland coupons went for naught. -Walla Walla Journal.

TO THE LADIES.—Mr. A. Pincus, proprietor of the Ladies' Suit Parlor will open Tuesday, April 22nd, in Union Block one of the finest stocks of Ladies Dresses and Belmans ever offered in this city and will sell them at Eastern prices. Give him a call.

Alex. Shannon opened out his wholesale and retail liquor establishment this week without fine or obstruction, and is catching on to a heavy share of the fluid trade. Complaint reaches us that unscrupulous white men are selling liquor to the Indians.

The small stream that crosses Riverside avenue at Dr. Hare's place, is an annoying impediment to pedestrians. It should be confined to a channel and bridged. A large share of the population took in Cheney this week in the city of plainclothes, defendants, witnesses or some of those things that savors of law and big game.

pal church had their place of worship prettily decorated. The choral music was excellent, the services impressive, and Dr. Burnett delivered a sermon of unusual interest. The hand boys are not discouraged. They are made of tougher stuff. Seventy-two storms might turn up and knock their calculations in the head, yet they have never given up.

A fire will come along some day and wipe out two or three million dollars worth of property in this city and then people will jump in and form a fire department. Don't do it before the fire comes. One night this week Herbert Percival, living on the north side of the river, was rudely aroused from his peaceful slumbers by the concussion produced by stones coming in contact with the side of his house. He was making the house a target. Herbert turned down a few shots that the savage took shelter in obscurity but unfortunately without injury. The next time Herbert has occasion to do any shooting he will use a shot gun instead of a better chance of securing the game.

Joe Hersner, our live furniture man, had an idea a month or two ago that he would get along in life with more property if he had a partner. He took one. He is satisfied. Joe and the partner have agreed to quit, as partners. Now Joe is established in his old place on Riverside avenue, and his calm, cheerful voice echoes through the furniture emporium with its former candor and cheerfulness.
