SOME time ago the San Francisco Chronicle was rather skeptical upon the nature of the Ore of Idaho mines. The truth is the people at that city had never seen the products of the new mines, and thought them merely existing on paper.

The first reports received from the Ore of Idaho mines situated near the line of the Northern Pacific railway, were of so rose-colored a character as to naturally excite suspicion that they were highly colored reports purposely to entice men to a remote country, so that transportation companies and other interests might be benefited there. So many corroborating accounts are being received, however, that it is impossible to doubt the genuineness of the find and that it is a very rich one.

Yesterday Horace L. Cutter, cashier of the First National Bank of Spokane, W. T., called at this office and exhibited two large nuggets, each containing nearly $50 worth of gold, found in the new diggings. Mr. Cutter, who by the way is well known in this city and San Jose, where he was formerly engaged in the banking business, states that there can be no doubt about the richness of the diggings, abundant evidence thereof being presented to him at the bank in the shape of dust and nuggets of varying sizes. He says there are now something like 200 men on the ground waiting for the weather to open, and believes there will be a big rush in the spring. At present, owing to the severity of the weather, the prospecting can be done, and it would be worse than folly for any one short of money to go to the mines, as provisions are very dear and accommodations scarce and expensive. Spokane, Mr. Cutter claims, will be the best point from which to gain access to the mines when the season opens, and that town is on the line of the Northern Pacific.

NARROW ESCAPE.

A Fire in One of the New Blocks.

A few minutes past nine o'clock Tuesday evening the startling and excitement-producing cry of "fire" rang out on the streets, and in response to the dread summons there arose the sound of hurrying feet toward the location of the threatened danger.

The alarm was caused by the discovery of flames issuing from the floor of J. J. Brown's magnificent brick block at the corner of Post street and Riverside avenue.

A stranger passing the building at the time was the first to notice the presence of the fire, and without leaving the spot, he inflated his lungs and let go a succession of yells that spread the information that trouble was brewing in that quarter.

In a very few minutes a large crowd of men had collected and went to work with a will to save, if possible, the beautiful structure. The lower floor and basement was full of black, suffocating smoke, and the vapor indicating the presence of the destroying element rolled out in volumes from doors, windows and every crevice. The scene at this time "beggars description."

The red tongues of flame were shooting up from the flooring in both the west and east store rooms, fastening upon the woodwork like ravenous fiends, crackling in demonic glee at the pleasure of feeding upon such precious viands, clothed in a mantle of thick, stifling, hideous smoke; men rushing backward and forward looking spectral through the vapor.

All present worked with the single aim of saving the building and that object was fortunately accomplished. Water was carried a long distance in buckets and by the timely application of this neutralizing element the fire was at last entirely extinguished.

The entire damage can be covered by $200,000, says Mr. Brown, who congratulates himself that it is no more than the value of the building.

The brick block is one of the finest of the many bricks that have been built this summer, a full description of which appeared in the REVIEW a few weeks ago. It cost over $20,000, and is just receiving the finishing touches. Had it been destroyed the loss would have been felt and regretted by every resident of the city.

The origin of the fire is not traced to the haste of finishing the plaster work. A sheet iron stove had been set up in the west store room to aid in drying the plaster, in which a fire was left in the evening.

By some means the fire ignited the flooring and burned a hole large enough to let the stove into the cellar. The flames followed the way of least resistance, and in a few minutes had reached the division wall and there spread to the east room. Had the discovery been made ten minutes later the building would have been beyond saving.

And at this time we are again called upon to note the desperate condition of the city in case of fire. We are not at all prepared to give attention to the latent danger that is forever threatening the Falls. It is the one subject we have never allowed to be forgotten, and yet the people, notwithstanding they are cognizant of the peril that surrounds the city, are not the shadow of protection against fire. No department, no organization, no water, not even a bucket, are to be seen.

The night was kindly furnished by the store and single individuals. Since so many new and valuable bricks have been laid, the want of a fire apparatus is more keenly felt. Had the fire Tuesday evening been extinguished by the use of every available fire engine, the loss would not have been reached with buckets, the crowd would have been compelled to stand idle and see the structure consumed without a hope of saving it. This may be a timely warning. We hope it may so result.

Fire that is easily controlled with an engine would, in our present defenseless condition, create a loss of thousands of dollars to the city escape any further visitations until some measures are taken to meet and do battle against the flames with some hope of success.

Organized. The new county of Lincoln was organized according to law this week, and now runs on a regular system of county government, with a full list of officers.

H. L. Cutter has in his possession two magnificent specimens of the gold products of the Cour d'Alene mines that would turn the heads of old prospectors, to say nothing of novices in search of the metal. One is a solid chunk, of irregular formation, that looks as though it had been turned into water in the melted state, and thus suddenly hardened into the peculiar shape. It is valued at between $10 and $50. The other is a huge mass of stone and gold, the latter predominating. On one side of the rock the gold is spread over in a thick mass, while the metal crops out in many places on the opposite side, showing that the metal runs entirely through the specimen. It is worth $100. These are by no means the finest specimens that have come out of the mines, yet they are fair samples of what the diggings are producing. Mr. Cutter showed these pieces to many of the business men of San Francisco, and the result produced interest, a stampede up this way among the visionary Alchemists, who have lived in an atmosphere of mining excitement for years.

At last it is pretty definitely settled that the Spokane Falls is to have that eminent house so long talked of, a slow assuming shape, and so greatly needed. Paul Schulze has informed our people by wire that the railroad has set aside two lots as a donation toward the scheme, and Col. G. H. Morgan, who handles the finances, states that the money will at once be forthcoming and the building begun immediately. Subscriptions were taken for this purpose upward of a year ago, but for various reasons the work was put off to this late date. However it is better late than never, and the establishment will yet prove an important factor in the progress of the city. We are not prepared to state the size and shape of the new edifice, but we say that in every particular it will be constructed with a view to the comfort and convenience of those who may occupy it. Spokane Falls. In the first number of The Pacific Coast we are greatly surprised to find the following article on Spokane Falls, that shows the handiwork of that talented scribe, C. B. Carlisle, who never misses an opportunity to say a good word for our city.

"Said a gentleman to a representative of this paper: 'The more I see of Eastern Washington and especially the Spokane country, the more I like it. To say that I like it does not half express my feelings.'

"He only repeats the opinion of all who have visited this really wonderful country. Especially is this true of those who visit this region during the summer, for the purpose of recreation. If the traveler can afford it, and wishes to revel in a season of delight, there is no other place on the continent more to the purpose. Indeed, to the tourist, the Spokane region is one of the finest remaining grounds imaginable.

"This region so rich in scenic treasures, possesses a most agreeable climate. During the hottest days of July and August—and they are nothing to the torrid climate of the Atlantic States—cooling breezes from the snow-shrouded mountains fan it to a most delicious temperature, that leaves the traveler nothing to ask for in this direction. In the long twilight of the summer and autumn, or the hours between four in the afternoon to nine o'clock in the evening, the atmosphere is perfectly delightful. Upon retiring, the warmth-giving blanket will be found necessary, while all the summer long, woolen under and outer clothing will be found comfortable, except perhaps an hour or two in the middle of the day.

"There are, of course, a few chief or standard places in this region. The principal point where the tourist should make his first halt is Spokane Falls. 'Here he will find a thriving, bustling little city of 1,500 or 2,000 inhabitants, the commercial metropolis of an inland empire. Spokane Falls never secondarily class generally in the ascendancy in Western settlements, and has a society of intelligent, moral, law-loving, Christian people, predominating. And the visitor will find that the days of newness and isolation have passed, and with these the inconveniences of the pioneer life. He will find the people in the possession of tasty, even luxurious homes, with embellished grounds, and, within a procession of those modern needs, music, books, pictures, and the like. The city is an educational center, the location of a college under Methodist auspices, and a number of excellent schools. Naturally, the traveler will ask about hotel accommodations. At Spokane Falls these are adequate. When Mr. Villard visited Spokane Falls, in October 1881, he said to a fellow traveler: 'This is the handsomest town-site I have met with since leaving the East.' He stated what every stranger repeats after a visit.

"In locating town-sites, Nature as engineer and architect performed perfect work here: a labor of love. The site is a gravelly plateau a mile long, up and down the river, and half or three-quarters of a mile wide with an easy ascent from the river. In the back ground she reared a wooded hill, and in the rock formations left many fantastic illustrations of the most grotesque art. To the east she spread a magnificent valley, and fringed it with the famous Ceur d'Alene range of mountains, with Mount Carlton and Mount Mea as the higher peaks, and rich in all the novel and imposing forms of architecture she has left to mark her history. To the west she built the hillsides of the Hangman, and so close are they, that in summer, one can distinguish the towering, tapering pines with their garb of green, here and there a dingle of white-blossomed cornel, picturesquely spotted, and clear running streams. At the north margin and boundary of the city runs the Spokane river, as fine a stream of water as man ever laid eyes upon; a deep, clear, swift-running stream, fully 250 yards wide at any point within a mile of the city, at the town, broken into five streams with a succession of falls, the last a clear leap of 65 feet. Breaking against basaltic promontories, the water leaps and roars, leap and dance and surge on through the narrow defiles until in a vast volume they thunder over the last massive shelving rock into a huge basin below. Being hemmed in by islands covered with dense shrubbery, and enveloped at the base by huge crags of augitic basalt, dark as the shadows of night, they possess all the elements of the best scenes produced by falling water. They are more than picturesque; they are grand.

"At Spokane Falls there is every element of agreeable and inspiring scenery. Down and out towards the north where the Colville valley spreads nearly a hundred miles, you catch a fine view of the Selkirk Peaks, snow-capped and cloud-wrapped. No region can possibly exceed this in variety and grandeur; the islands, the forest, the ribbon-like fall, the seething cascade, the broad, on-rolling river, the sloping, motion-giving hill and the mountain peaks all combining to make a scene grand and imposing.

"To those who love the sport of rod and gun, this region is a paradise. The Spokane River, below the falls, at the town itself or in the long stretches in the 28 miles to Lake Ceur d'Alene swarms with large gamey trout, big and little fellows, to fully test the strength of the best made line, and the patience and ingenuity of the fisherman. In the season, the river and lakes nearby afford rare sport for the duck hunter, and if it is larger game, deer, bear, or the prairie chicken, pheasant and grouse, the woodlands furnish all these."

How to Succeed.—Hayard Taylor made the following remarks respecting the rules of success, that are worth their weight in gold to any and every young man, as the experience of one whom all delight to honor: "I have always reverentially accepted them. First, labor. Nothing can be had for nothing; whatever a man achieves he must pay for it; and no favor of fortune can absolve him from duty. Secondly, patience and forbearance, which are simply dependent upon the slow justice of time. Thirdly, and most important, faith. Unless a man believes in something far higher than himself—something infinitely purer and grander than he can ever become—unless he has an instinct of an order beyond his dreams, of laws beyond his comprehension, of beauty and good justice, besides which his own ideas are dark, he falls in every loftier form of ambition, and ought to fail."

POPULATION OF CHINA.—European estimates of the population to China are being reduced. Behm and Wagner reduce their estimate of China and Corea from 434,500,000 to 379,500,000. Peterson reduces his estimate by 75,000,000, making the present total 304,500,000. Dr. Happer, missionary, believes this can safely be reduced another 50,000,000. Mr. Hippisley, acting commissioner of customs, thinks 250,000,000 more nearly correct than 350,000,000. The losses by the Trepung and Mohammedan rebellions, and by the famine and pestilence which swept the provinces of Chih, Shantung, Shan-shi, Szechuan and Honan, are variously estimated at from 61,000,000 to 81,000,000.—Chicago Tribune.
