

TEMPERANCE WORK

In a recent letter to the New York Evangelist, Rev. Dr. Caylor writes as follows in regard to the temperance movement in Great Britain: In the medical profession the total abstinence cause is making quite as rapid progress as among the clergy and churches. Sir Henry Thompson, whose practice is worth $100,000 a year, has taken strong ground against alcoholic beverages. He would even use wine and brandy sparingly as a medicine. When such men of science as Thompson, Sir Wm. Gull and Dr. Richardson take such a position it is deplorable that so many physicians in Britain and in our country too, are constantly endangering the lives and the souls of their patients by the reckless prescription of port wine, also and Bourbon. Some of the worst cases of intemperance I have ever encountered have grown from a medical prescription. An exemplary member of my own church was led into shocking drunkenness by using an alcohol tonic prescribed by his family physician. The poor brother was saved "as by fire," and became a total abstainer, but he could not blot out the record of three years of loathsome drunkenness.

Washington had accepted an invitation from Arnold to breakfast with him on the day the plot was discovered, but was prevented from keeping his engagement by what men call chance—by an earnest request, namely, of an old officer, near whose station they passed, to spend the night there and inspect some works in the neighborhood. Next day, while Washington and his staff, including Lafayette, were seated at table at his headquarters, a dispatch was brought to the American general, which he immediately opened and read, and then laid it down without comment. No alteration was visible in his countenance, but he remained perfectly silent. Conversation dropped among his suite and after some minutes the general, beckoning Lafayette to follow him, passed to an inner apartment, turned to his young friend without uttering a syllable, placed the fatal dispatch in his hands and then, giving way to an ungovernable burst of feeling, fell on his neck and sobbed aloud. The effect produced on the young French marquis, accustomed to regard his general (and dignified in his usual manner) as devoid of the usual weaknesses of humanity may be imagined. "I believe," said Lafayette in relating this anecdote, "that this was the only occasion, throughout the long and sometimes hopeless struggle, that Washington ever gave way, even for a moment, under a reverse fortune; and perhaps I was the only human being who ever witnessed in him an exhibition of feeling so foreign to his temperament. As it was, he recovered himself before I had passed the communication that had given rise to his emotion; and when we returned to his staff, not a trace remained on his countenance, not a sign of grief or despondency."—Pippin's Magazine.

The following article, is from the pen of our esteemed correspondent, Peter F. Alba, Esq., a prominent veterinary surgeon of Mobile, Ala.: "When the chevron is drawn, so as to decrease the natural incline of the head, and a pressure of the cervical and dorsal vertebrae, changes the natural position of the windpipe, and interferes with free respiration. The neck being raised curves the vertebrae of the back, making it hollow, which has a tendency to draw the logs forward under the body, or to thrust the body backward upon them. This deprives him of the power of extending himself. Because, by changing the natural carriage of the horse, you cause a greater demand upon his strength for the resistance against natural motion, and the action will be dwelling and slow. The shoulders being inclined out of position throws the support of each leg, and impairs the freedom and suppleness of his front action; and the front legs are kept stiff so is the spring diminished, which is the essence of free action, and in proportion as the weight on the front legs is interfered with by over extension in the front, so does over contraction of the suspensory and lateral ligaments, the flexor muscles and back tendons take place. This is the prolific cause of the knocking over the pasterus and springing of the knees. Besides, undue bearing is being brought on the lumbar vertebrae, serious strain is produced on the loins and rear parts, and a disordered state of these members is the consequence. Hence come lumbago, vertigo, spinal meningitis, and other diseases of the spine, to say nothing of the contracted heels, navicular-point disease and leg disorders. Moreover, the head being drawn up in a constrained position not only the neck is stiffened, but the muscles of the eyes likewise retract, alter the focus of the sight, strain the optic nerve, and, as it were, force the eyes from their sockets, and sometimes so distort them as to prevent the closing of the lids. In this manner the poor creature is sometimes left for hours exposed to the dazzling rays of the hot sun, the least consequence of which must be inflammation of the cornea and the lens itself. Do you wonder then at the number of weak-eyed, moon-eyed and blind horses? Only read, good Christians, for one moment what an instrument of torture we have invented, and what a sin we daily commit by our heart-rending punishment of our most submissive, faithful and most of servants."—Turf, Field and Farm.

In a certain lake region in Lapland there is a very curious joint company, consisting of men and birds. They have organized, for fishing purposes. Every morning early, the hungry birds come out and sing, so to speak, though a more correct term might perhaps be come out and serenade at the fishermen, telling them plainly enough that it is time to get up. The sleepy fishermen leave their beds at the summons of these faithful servants, and they need no other alarm clocks. The boats are unmoored, and then the swallows "strike out." The men guide their movements entirely by the course of the swallows, who very likely have been out scouting early that morning. When they pause and hover over a spot, redoubting their cries, then the fishermen know that this is the place for them. They hasten forward and cast their nets, and are well rewarded by finding them well filled.

When the game begins to get thin, the birds hasten on to a new fishing spot. It would be a churl who did not reward such faithful service. Many a fish is tossed up in the air which the birds swoop down upon and catch with an easy grace. After they are so tante, they do not stand on such little ceremony, but just step aboard and help themselves.

As evening comes, men and birds make for the shore, and after the best fish are taken out, they have only to leave the inferior ones in the boat and they will be cleaned out for them in short order.—Ex.

Caverns were supposed by the Romans to be secure places of refuge during thunder storms, and they believed that lightning never penetrated more than two yards into the earth. Acting on this superstition, the Emperor Augustus used to withdraw into some deep vault of the palace whenever a tempest was feared, and it is recorded by Suetonius that he always wore a skin of seal as a precaution against lightning. That both precautions were equally unwelcome needs scarcely be mentioned. Lightning has been known to strike ten feet into the earth; but not even the marvelous accuracy of modern science can determine at what distance from the surface a safe retreat may be found from the descending fluid; and even were this ascertained, the dangers from ascending electric currents remain the same. With regard to seal skins, we find that the Romans attached so much faith to them as non-conductors that tents were made of them, beneath which the timid used to take refuge. It is a somewhat curious fact that in the neighborhood of Mount Cevennes, in the Languedoc, where anciently some Roman colonies were known to have existed, the shepherds cherish a similar superstition respecting the skins of serpents. These they collect, and having covered their hats withal, believe themselves secure against the dangers of the storm. M. Labrousse is disposed to see a link of interesting analogy between the legend yet lingering in the mind of the peasant of Cevennes and the most costly superstition of his Latin ancestors. The emperors of Japan retire into a deep Grotto during the tempests which rage with such severity in their latitude; but not satisfied with the profundity of the excavation, or the strength of the stones of which it is built, they complete their precautions by having a reservoir of water sunk in their retreat. The water is intended to extinguish the lightning—a measure equally futile, since many instances have been preserved in which the fluid has fallen upon the water with the same destructive effect as upon land.—Ex.

How to Reach this Country.

Inquiring letters are so frequently received, as to the best mode of reaching this new country, the rates of fare, the shortest routes, &c., that we have compiled the following facts for the express benefit of those who would come among us. These persons who have friends contemplating a visit to this country, either for pleasure or profit, ought secure some extra copies of this week's edition of THE TRAMP.

There are three routes which Eastern people may take in coming hither. If a person wants to save time, and desires to bring stock, wagons, &c., the quickest and most direct route would be to come from Omaha to Ogden; thence by wagon road to this new country; traversing the distance from Ogden in two or three weeks, when roads are good—say in the month of June, July or August. The route by rail to Ketchikan, at a cost of about $50 in emigrant car; thence by stage to Walla Walla, at an expense of $75, exclusive of passage, and on to Colfax or Spokan Falls, at an additional expense of 1 and 2 dollars, respectively. The route by sea to Portland, Oregon, by ocean steamer; thence to Astoria, by "Cat" fare to Portland, $2 to $30, according to cabin occupied, and thence by rail to Colfax, or to Astoria, $18, exclusive of meals and berth. The overland railroad company makes but little difference in price of through tickets to San Francisco or Ketchikan. At the present time, the route by sea to Ketchikan, at a cost of about $50, is the easiest and cheapest, provided you are not accompanied by your own team.

Immigrants from Oregon and California, in the earlier part of the season, when they have the money to spare, often come by water to The Dalles or Astoria, thence overland by teams. Those who travel without teams should come by boat to Penawawa or Astoria, and there take the stage for this upper country via Colfax. Many families make the entire trip overland. Parcel senders come by way of Portland and Astoria, unless they want a delightful knowledge ride over the Cascade mountains in mid summer. The stage route is the best for horsemen, leading the traveler by way of the Kittitas Valley, Yakima City and Anaworth. Be sure that your saddle horn is genuine, sure-footed, strong, and in splendid condition. Accommodations on the Columbia river boats are excellent, and every attention is paid to the comfort and convenience of passengers. No one who has an opportunity to do so should fail to take a trip up or down the Columbia river, where the scenery is magnificent and beautiful in the extreme.

ACCIDENT.—Quite a serious accident happened to Mr. Chas. Warner while up the river boating, during the first of the week. He was attempting to scare some ducks by firing a twenty-two caliber revolver, which he had with him. By some means, perhaps carelessness, he placed the muzzle over the muzzle of the revolver, when it accidentally went off, killing him.

THE COURT OF ALIENS.—The court of aliens, which was held at the court house on Monday evening last, was attended by a number of new faces, and the proceedings were of an interesting character.

ROCK CREEK (TNS).

Record, Feb. 18, '80. Editor Spokan Times: St. Valentine's day has come, and you need not get your annual love letter which we have been expecting so anxiously.

Mr. J. W. Hamilton has come to a close with a list recaptured by the addition of 25 names to the club roll.

Gun boys and hoodlums are beginning to trouble in this vicinity as a protracted meeting will begin here Feb. 22, to be continued until the 28th.

That promised "chink" has not arrived. A dance is to be given soon at the residence of Mr. Cornington, on Retter's Range, in Spring valley.

They of the corner between Hamilton and Retter's Range have a very pleasant way of spending the Sabbath. They met at the residence of some neighbor and sing.

Some of the young men in this vicinity intend to go on the general round up at three o'clock on Snake river, April 1.

Mr. Justice has gone out on his rounds preparing a residence to live in where he is going to stay with his family.

It is a mistake to suppose that a man is never employed as a contractor on a house or unless he is applying the credit of a responsible party in analyzing to his total chances.

It is a mistake to think your interest is listening to what you say. He is thinking of what he has said and is going to say just as you were and will be.

It is a mistake to expect a direct answer from a politician. His life is given to discharging questions before election and giving evasive answers after election.

It is a mistake to suppose that the demerol poison has had a change of heart. The change is in his liver, if anywhere.

It is a mistake to suppose that people go to a concert to hear the music. They go simply to exchange recipes for doughnuts and doughnuts.

It is a mistake to suppose that your friend is communally interested in your elegant description of your live rat hole. On the contrary, he is anxiously anxious to tell you of his rat hole.

It is a mistake to wish the butcher would remove the bone before weighing your mutton. How would you like to be weighed if that was your lot?
