The Angel of Youth.

There is an Angel whose name is Youth,
Whose home is a glorious shrine,
Where Virtue and Learning and Science and Truth
Are worshipped as things divine.

She comes, and her beautiful feet dip
Which sing in the heavenly throng,
And kindle the colors of morn to dwell
Perennial through the day.

She sings, and the voice of the fairest star
Which sang in the heavenly throng,
It wafts to earth from the Throns afar
In the sweetest of her song.

She smiles, and the scholar's hallowing page,
And throbs in his buoyant heart,
And her kiss is a spell from the sense of age,
And a shield from the treacher's art.

She leads an army of tripping feet,
And childhood's glow and grace,
Henceforth like a spirit to hold her seat,
And reign in this beautiful place.

The Rose-Bush.

A child sleeps under a rose-bush fair,
The buds swell out in the soft May air;
Sweetly it rests, and on dream-wings flies
To play with the angels in Paradise.

A maiden stands by the rose-bush fair,
The dewy blossoms perfume the air;
With love's first wonderful rapture blest—
And the years glide by.

A mother kneels by the rose-bush fair,
The dewy blossoms perfume the air;
And tears of anguish bedew her eyes—
And the years glide by.

Naked and lone stands the rose-bush fair,
Wild are the leaves in the autumn air,
Withered and dried they fall to the ground,
And stentery creaks a new-made sound—
And the years glide by.

Autumn.

There is a fearful spirit busy now;
Already have the elements unfurled;
The cloud comes, the fierce winds begin to blow
About, and blinding on their errands go;

And lo! that evening music which I hear
From their airy haunts, and all the forest world,
Stripped of its pride, like a desert show,
And only with the sad and lowly murmur

In the bleak gusts of Autumn, for the soul
Seems gathering tidings from another sphere,
And in sublime, mysterious sympathy,
Man's bounding spirit ebb and swell more high,
According to the billow's letter roll.

There was formerly a law in Venice by which
All the goods in the chamber of the deceased
Were the property of the priest who attended him
In his last moments. It so happened, on one occasion,
A man died possessed of a considerable fortune
In bills, bonds, notes, etc., which he kept in a portfolio under his pillow, and which, on his decease, Mons. Cure proceeded, while the body was yet warm, to appropriate to himself. Thus the heir naturally resisted, and kicked the priest down the stairs. The priest preferred a complaint to the inquisition. The holy fathers ordered the offender to pay a fine of ten francs!
and declared that, in future, if any one dare to push his irreverence so far as to kill the priest, he should be fined twenty! After this decision, few ecclesiastics attempted to enforce so ticklish
a law.

"Honest industry has brought that man to the scaffold," said a wag as he observed a carpenter upon the staging.

Speaking of wags—what is more raggy than a dog's tail when he is pleased?

Speaking of tales—we always like those that end well. Hogg's, for instance.

Speaking of hogs—we saw one of these animals lying in the gutter the other day, and in the open position of a well-dressed man!—The first had a ring in his nose—the latter had a ring on his finger. The man was drunk—the hog was sober.
A hog is known by the company he keeps,
thought we—so thought Porker—and off he went.

The Duke of Grammont was the most ardent and witty courtier of his day. He entered one day the court of Cardinal Mazarin without being announced. His Eminence was amusing himself by jumping close-legged against the wall.

To surprise a Prime Minister in so boyish an occupation, was dangerous; a less skillful courtier might have stammered excuses and retired. The Duke entered briskly, and cried, "I'll bet one hundred crowns that I jump higher than your Eminence!" and the Duke and Cardinal began to jump for their lives. Grammont took care to jump a few inches lower than the Cardinal, and was six months afterwards Marshal of France.

A man who had climbed up a tree by carelessness missed his hold of one of the branches, and fell to the ground with such force as to break his ribs. A neighbor, going to his assistance, remarked to him that, "had he followed his rule in these cases, he would have avoided the accident."

"What rule do you mean?" said the other, indignantly.

"This," said the philosopher: "never come down a place faster than you go up."

When we look abroad over the great potato patch of the world, we see innumerable little hills filled to overflowing with the very smallest kind of "leeky taters," and a feeling of sadness comes over us at the thought, that they'll never be any larger.

Every one must see daily instances of people who complain from a mere habit of complaining;
and make their friends uneasy, and strangers
merry, by murmuring at evils that do not exist, and repining at grievances which they do not really feel.

It is a most interesting "sight for a sight" to see a young lady with eyes like a gazelle, lips like roses, teeth of pearly whiteness, cheeks that have stolen the deep carnation of the loveliest rose,
and her mouth stuffed full of ginger-bread.
Isn't it?

There are two things which ought to teach us to think but meanly of human glory: the very best have had their calculators, the worst their panegyrists.

A pretty girl and a wild horse are liable to do much mischief; for the one runs away with a fellow's body, and the other runs away with his heart.

A young woman ought, like an angel, to pardon
the faults she cannot comprehend; and an elderly woman like a mist, because she has endured trials.

It is as hard for the good to suspect evil, as it is for the bad to suspect good. Preachers are of course an exception to the rule.

Paradoxical as it may seem, he who reels and staggers most in the journey of life takes the straightest cut to the devil.

A DUEL ON HORSEBACK.

By CHARLES FUMBERFIELD.

Col. Bill Borland was the generalissimo of the Texan Lynchers. He well deserved the title he had won by many a desperate deed. He possessed such incredible skill in the use of all sorts of murderous weapons, that it might be pronounced virtually suicide to even think of encountering him,
so rapid was his motion, so unerring his martial aim.

"Death in the eye!" truly told the mark at which he always fired—a mark he had never once missed—while such was his astonishing quickness, his antagonist usually fell without pulling the trigger.
An enemy stood no better chance by resorting to the sword or bow-knife, against one in whose hands the flash of steel was like lightning—as swift, as mighty to slay—a man who lightened to surpass all other men as much in strength as in activity—
a giant in stature, a gladiator in practice, a fiend in courage.

His biography in itself was more thrilling than a novel, wilder than the wildest romance; and the very first of dreadful daring revealed, in all their force and fullness, the two essential elements of his character—the ferocious ardor of his appetite for revenge, and the iron pertinacity of his indomitable will.

At the age of twenty, he pursued the assassin of his brother all the way from Carolina to Canada, and shot him dead at the dinner-table of a tavern in Quebec; yet such had been the cunning of his previous arrangements for the event, that aided by numerous riders of swift horses, he effected his escape safely to the south.

The achievement cost him ten thousand dollars.
From this time forward his life was one long war.
Almost every month in the year saw him engaged in some fatal duel—fatal to others only; never hurtful to him—while each week witnessed the victory of his pistol, often as bloody as his sword, in the course of casual affairs, often as bloody as his knife and pistol. But the truth of impartial history compels me to record that this man so fearful in his deeds, whose right arm was reeking with gore to the elbow, was not commonly the aggressor in his countless quarrels. Often the friends of those he had vanquished in fair fight assailed him from motives of revenge. The fame of his prowess provoked the jealous jealousy of others. He acquired the reputation of a matchless hero—the ardent, the desperate, the ambitious would win,
to kill the lion, so as to clothe himself in his skin,
and thus was Borland forced to maintain an interminable war. It is so in all professions. There can be no peace in high places—stern, hail and thunder must break around the mountain's brow.

The duelist was one of the earliest settlers in eastern Texas, where he became the chief of the lynching party. In his own county of Harrison, he possessed boundless influence; indeed he would kill the lion, so as to clothe himself in his skin,

minable war. It is so in all professions. There

"It is murder!" said Evans, and the smile on his lips, before pale sunshine, was now a wreath of his fire.

"You shall pay dearly for that word within a week!" fairly shouted the duelist, grinding his teeth
like a raging wild beast.

"There is no time like the present," was the calm reply.

"None?" interrogated Borland, as if doubting the evidence of his ears.

"Yes, now! If you have the courage to challenge me," said Evans.

"I do challenge you!" thundered Borland.

"And I accept," answered Evans.

"Name your seconds."

"We will fight without any."

"The terms?" asked Borland, with signs of astonishment.

On horseback, in a little prairie west of the village, one half hour from this, each armed with many pistols and knives as he can produce, or seen fit to carry," said Evans, apparently as pas-sionless, as if defending a motion in court.

No one but the chief actors in this extraordinary scene uttered a syllable, or offered to interfere, for all saw that such an attempt would be unavailing, perhaps dangerous to the mediator. One half hour afterwards, the parties met in the little prairie, which was circular in form, and about three hundred yards in diameter. By tacit consent, both actuated by the same purpose, they assumed their stations in the edge of the timber on opposite sides.
Both wore strong belts literally stiff with knives and pistols. Both were mounted on powerful steeds, but of opposite colors, that of the Judge being white as a cloud, while the Colonel's was black and glossy as the wing of a raven.

The features of the riders in that race of death presented very different types of expression. The Colonel's brow looked dark as the plum of a turkey—stern, lowering, awful; but the handsome face of the Judge was gay, smiling, joyous—brilliant as the sunbeam that kissed it. The multi-

TRADE WITH JAPAN.

Among the paragraphs going the rounds of the Atlantic papers received by the last mail, is one headed "First cargo from Japan," stating that a vessel had arrived at Boston with a cargo from Japan...

Our purpose, however, is not to dispute the claim of Boston, but to chronicle the fact of the arrival in Puget Sound of a vessel freighted with goods direct from Japan...

The attention of our New England capitalists is directed to this matter. A better field, if one so good, does not exist anywhere. The favorable time is now.

MILES OF VARIOUS COUNTRIES. There is scarcely a greater variety in anything than in this kind of measure. Not only those of separate countries differ, as the French from the English, but those of the same country vary in different provinces...

VALUABLE PRESENT.—The London Chronicle says: "We can state, on the authority of a private letter from India, that the Maharajah of Cashmere is forwarding as a present to Her Majesty a most costly shawl tent, which will contain, moreover, a bedstead of solid gold."

THE MASSACRE AT SUBLETTE'S CUT-OFF.—Major Dodge has left Carson Valley for California, having in charge the widows and orphans of the emigrants massacred by the Indians at Sublette's Cut-Off.

TOWN IMPROVEMENTS.—Our town is growing rapidly, and building is the order of the day. We do not complete one building before half a dozen others are started.

WRECKED.—The barque Mary F. Stude, Capt. Crowell, from Steilacoom for San Francisco, was wrecked near Mendocino on the 6th ult.

WOOLLEN FACTORIES.

Our attention has been repeatedly called to the superior advantages which this country possesses for the establishment of woollen factories. There is perhaps no equal extent of country on the globe so liberally gifted with mill streams as Washington Territory.

Already have we two excellent tanneries, one at Tumwater and the other at Seattle, both of which owe their existence to the advantages above mentioned, rather than to extraneous causes.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

By the arrival of the steamer Foreland at Victoria, we have later advices from California. The papers contain the announcement of a challenge having been sent by ex-Gov. McDougal to Senator Gwin.

Gen. Denver is actively engaged in canvassing for the vacant senatorship, made by the death of Broderick. Objections are urged against him on account of having killed Gilbert in a duel in 1852.

Gen. Weller will appoint W. C. Anderson, of Nevada, to fill the vacant senatorship. Campo Seco, Calaveras county, was destroyed by fire on the 30th ult.

The election returns, so far as received, give Latham 48,299; Curvey, 25,180; Stanford, 7,099. For Congressmen—Scott, 35,550; Burch, 35,836; Baker, 31,715; McKibbin, 31,980. State Printer—Boits, 31,893; O'Meara, 29,748.

The British ship Forest Monarch bound from San Francisco to Puget Sound, sprung a leak at sea. Finding it impossible to free her she was set on fire and the crew took to the boats, about 190 miles south of San Francisco.

Senator Broderick was buried on Sunday the 18th ult. The funeral was more numerous attended than any that has ever taken place in the state. It was fifty-four minutes passing the corner of Montgomery and Jackson streets.

By the steamer Julia we have Victoria papers to the 29th ult., for which we are indebted to Porter Lowell. The British Colonist, under the head of "Another outrage," says "the steamer Catalonia, Capt. Broderick, left Victoria with a considerable number of our citizens on an excursion to San Juan."

A notice is posted up on the wharf that the revenue laws of the United States are in force in all the islands east of Canal de Haro; and that property or vessels landing will be seized and confiscated, if the law is not complied with.

PUGET SOUND HERALD.

STELLACOOM, W. T., FRIDAY, OCT. 7, 1859.

ATLANTIC NEWS.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Herald says serious charges against Collector Shoemaker, of Detroit, are under consideration at the Treasury Department.

The court martial on Maj. Osborn Cross finally arrived at a decision, the nature of which is, for the present, kept a profound secret.

Senator Douglas writes to the Democratic State Committee of Maine, that he cannot accept their invitation to visit the State during the present month, on account of sickness in his family.

Signor Corelli, well known as a popular teacher of Italian vocal music, committed suicide in a place called Newton a short distance from New York by taking prussic acid procured for the purpose. He was insane.

The New Bedford Mercury learns by a private letter that Capt. Robert D. Eldridge, of the bark Anzon, of Fairhaven, has discovered an island in the Pacific ocean, several hundred miles from any land laid down on the charts.

Railroad cars are now run from St. Louis to New York in the short time of forty-eight hours.

Judge Hogan, of the State Department, has been appointed translator in Professor Dimitry's place. Mr. Jefferson, of the same office, has been promoted to a third class clerkship.

It is said that Mr. Ould, of the Richmond Examiner, is at Kirkwood House, and that he has come here to fight a duel with Mr. O. Dennis Wis, of the Richmond Enquirer.

Accounts from Georgia indicate the probable loss of a Democratic member of Congress in Seaward's district, and perhaps a gain in Tripp's.

A Maine newspaper in announcing the death of Henry Johnson, Mayor of Newburyport, says: "He was an uncle of the Hon. Calhoun Cutting, but otherwise a respectable and worthy man."

Senator Mata, the Representative of the Juarez Government, has negotiated in New York a contract for the materials of war to be forwarded to Mexico.

The first choice of the Georgia delegation at Charleston, it is said, will be for Alexander H. Stephens.

The last feat of Blondin was to sling a cook-stove on his back, and cross the river on the rope. On his return he stopped in the middle, lowered his stove, made a fire, cooked some eggs, and then lowered all to the Maid of the Mist, 500 feet below.

FROM EUROPE.

L'Ami de la Religion gives as the ultimatum of France to the Pope the following conditions: "A complete execution of the reforms proposed by Napoleon III. two years ago; a complete civil code; the military conscription and abolition of foreign troops; equal admission of laymen with clerical persons to all offices of State; a Council of State organized on the French basis; and a consultative body of forty members.

Rumors of a projected meeting between the Czar Alexander and the Prussian Regent at Bims were current, as well as of an Anglo-Prussian alliance.

The attitude of Austria towards Prussia, Russia and England was decidedly hostile; and an Austrian agitation for a remodeling of the German Confederal system was provoking a great deal of ill feeling in Prussia and among the Protestant Germans generally.

From British India come details of the extending revolt of the European troops. At Beharum the Fifth Regiment had fortified itself in its barracks, elected its own officers, and was defying all authority. The Madras Caribineers had followed this example.

The disarming of the French army was progressing rapidly. It was reported that the Emperor Napoleon III. had resolved to employ the French Government had definitely resolved to employ the works of public utility the 150,000,000 of the late loan which remains unexpended.

Plus IX thanks the Emperor of the French for the interest which he unceasingly displays for the Holy See and the person of the Pope.

"The Pope has condemned to death seven of the inhabitants of the town of Perugia, for participation in the disorders which took place in that city on the 14th of June. The accused, however, have been judged by default, and it is most unlikely they will be found when wanted."

Garibaldi, who is spoken of as the commander of the Army of Central Italy, was ill, rumor states, from the effects of poison. The King of Naples had been declared free for the introduction of breastworks.
