The Sewing Machine.

BY A CORRECTLY TAKEN.

Got one? Don't say so! Which did you get?
One of the kind to open and shut?
Own it, or hire it? How much did you pay?
Does it go with a crank or treadle? Say,
You a single man, and somewhat green,
Tell me about your sewing machine.

Listen, my boy, and hear all about it—
I don't know what I should do without it.
I've owned one now for more than a year,
And I'll tell you all I know about it.
'Tis the clearest thing that ever was seen,
This wonderful family sewing machine.

It's none of your angular Wheeler things,
With steel about neck and cast iron wings;
It's work would bother a hundred of 'em,
And it's worth a thousand! Indeed it is!
And has a way—you needn't stare,
Of coming and brading its own black hair!

Mine is not one of those stupid affairs
That stands in a corner with white and chairs,
And sports the charmed, headless man,
Which all the comfort of sewing destroy;
No rigid contrivance of lumber and steel,
But one easy, simple, spring in the loom.

Mine is one of the kind to love,
And with the wheel and a soft lid give;
Has the merriest eyes and a dainty foot,
And sports the charmed, headless man;
And a bonnet with feathers and ribbons, and loops,
With any indefinite number of hoops.

None of your patent machines for me,
Unless Dame Nature's the patentee;
I like the sort that can laugh and talk,
And take my arm for an evening walk,
That will do whatever the owner may choose,
With the lightest perceptible turn of the screw.

Oh, that can dance, and—possibly—sift,
And make a pudding as well as a skirt;
One that can sing without dropping a stitch,
And make the housewife's sewing machine;
Ready to give the exact advice,
Or do up your collar and things so nice.

What do you think of my machine?
Ah! 'tis the best that ever was seen?
But fresh and blood! Hear that, my boy!
And take the housewife's sewing machine,
Which includes, you know, the setting of tares.

Tut, tut, don't talk. I see it all—
You needn't keep winking so hard at the wall;
I know what your slightly fumbling means—
You'd like, you would, to get the sewing machine,
Well, get on, then, of the same design,
There were plenty left when I got mine.

The Deserted House.

(NOT A TALE.)

Bob and Jim have run away,
Side by side,
Leaving door and window wide;
Curtain tatters they!

All within 's in awful plight;
"Busted!" 's every window light;
And no hinges on the door,
Oh, that's tucked up two before.

Come away, for Bob and Jim
Are no longer here,
And leave a restaurant,
They wouldn't let you stay with us.

Below we give the lines of Topsy upon which the above deser parody is made.

Life and thought have gone away,
Side by side,

MYSTERIOUS MURDERS.

I had some renown as a successful rogu-catcher, and I had some experience, too. My field of operations, as a usual thing, lay within the confines of the Department of the Lower Alps; and though I served under the sub-prefect of the third Arrondissement, yet the Prefect of the Department called upon me when he chose.

One morning—it was in the latter part of May—I received a note from the Prefect, ordering me to come to Digre, and see him with all possible dispatch. The message came through the office of our Sub-Prefect, so I had nothing to do but get ready and start. I took an early dinner; assumed the dress of a peasant; browned my face and hands and set forth. I reached Digre just at nightfall, and as soon as it was dark I waited upon the Prefect. He seemed to be relieved as soon as he saw me, and at once took me to his private closet.

"Now," said I, "have you got work for me?"
"Yes," he replied, "sit down and listen."
We sat down, and having tasted a glass of wine, he proceeded:

"Within a few months past, there have been some of the most mysterious murders committed in this Department and the Department of Y, that I have ever come under my notice. They are done mostly on the road from Castelane to Asps.

The first victim was a Marcelline merchant, who had come up to Castelane to purchase preserved fruits. His body was found on the roadside, near the line between the two Departments; and at first it was supposed that he must have fallen there and died in a fit, as no mark of violence could be found upon him. His pockets had been rifled, however. The next one was found near Annot, under the same circumstances. He was a merchant also, and from Nice. Since then, five or six more have died upon the road in the same mysterious way; and no marks of ill-usage have been found upon any of them; but they have all been robbed."

"Have most of them stopped at Castelane?" I asked.
The Prefect told me they had.
"And I suppose they must have put up at some inn there?" I remarked.
"Yes," said the Prefect.

I then supposed that some of the landlords must be concerned. But my companion informed me that they had been narrowly watched, and that no shadow of evidence rested against them.

"But," said he, "is there not some poison in this matter? Some inkeeper may administer the poison, and then send an accomplice after the victim."

"No," returned the Prefect with a shake of his head. "Experienced physicians have examined the stomachs of several of the dead men, but no trace of poison has been found. It is a mysterious affair. The Sub-Prefect has done all he could, but without effect; and now we mean to give the whole thing into your hands. You must go to Castelane at once, and there you can get such further information as the Sub-Prefect can give you."

After conferring a while longer with the Prefect, he let me have a suit of ordinary tradesman's clothing; and this habit, I went to a hotel and put up for the night. In the morning I prepared a horse and set out, reaching Castelane before noon. During the day, I pretended to be doing business, I went to a woolen factory and examined a lot of stuff; and also visited several places where preserved fruits were put up. I learned that most of the people who came there on business, stopped at an inn kept by a man named Juan Fontaine; so I left my horse there and engaged lodgings.

After dark I called upon the Sub-Prefect. He told me that he had used all the means in his power, but had not been able to gain any clue to the guilty party. Most of the murdered victims had been from Marcelline, and the excitement in that city was intense. Gendarmes had been sent out upon all the roads, and secret police had also been upon the watch. The last victim had fallen only four days before, and the deed was done fifteen minutes after the policeman had passed the spot.

I asked the Sub-Prefect if he had any suspicions. He answered that all the suspicions he had were fastened upon Juan Fontaine, the inkeeper. Nearly all the murdered men had stopped at his house, and he must have known something about their business.

I bade the officer keep perfectly quiet and not even to let one of his men know of my presence. Then I returned to the inn, and finally entered into a conversation with my host upon the subject of the mysterious deaths. He pronounced it wonderful, and assured me that it had injured him more than he could tell.

"Parbleu!" he exclaimed, "they'll be suspecting me next, if they have not already."
I was soon satisfied that Juan Fontaine knew nothing of the guilty party. He was very fearful and at times blanched and trembled at the thought of being apprehended for the crime. Most people would have been in this, signs of guilt; but I thought differently.

I spent all of the next day in the town, ostensibly engaged in business with the factories, but in reality hunting some clue to the object of my mission. Night came again, but I had found none. I was satisfied that the murderer had laid his plans so deeply that no circumstantial clue could be found. If I would find him I must catch him with the proof upon him.

I had given an assumed name at the inn, and stated that I belonged to Toulon. On the next morning I called for my bill, and informed my host that I was off for home. Then I went to the fruit preserver's, and told him the same, stating that I must confer with my partner before I concluded my bargain. After this, I went to the woolen factory and saw the business agent. His name was Louis Cazabon, and he had come to Castelane about a year before. He seemed to be a straightforward business man, and yet he was the only one I had seen whom I really wished to suspect. In conversing upon the murders he had been a little too free and off-handed, treating the subject more coolly than a man with a heart would be apt to do. But still, I had, thus far, been able to find nothing against him. On the present occasion I told him, as I told the others, that I must return to Toulon.

"If you have not the ready money with you, we can give you credit," he said.
I told him I had plenty prepared to pay the price he had demanded. He said "Very well," and added that he should be happy to sell to me when I came back. I bade him good bye, and then departed. As soon as I was alone, I began to suspect Louis Cazabon in earnest. When I told him that I had money, but did not purchase because he charged me too much, why didn't he buy me? Simply because he wished me to leave the city with my money in my pocket. At least so it appeared to me. This was sufficient ground for me to work upon, and I resolved to watch the man a little while; so I rode to an out-of-the-way place, and left my horse, and then returned and concealed myself in a position where I could see the movements of Louis Cazabon. In a few minutes he came out of his factory and walked away. His step was hurried and eager. I felt sure that he was not the man who did the direct work of death. The plot was deeper than that, or he would have been discovered ere this. So I resolved to wait a while and see if he returned. I would have followed him if I could have done it with safety; but he might have detected me, and that would not do. However, in less than fifteen minutes he came. He walked now with a slow, sober, and innocent air. It seemed to say, "Oh! I haven't been up to any mischief, as you can plainly see."

I saw Cazabon at his desk again, and then I returned to my horse. I knew that I had a risk to run now, but I was ready for it. If the factory agent was at the bottom of the crime, and meant to have me robbed, he had already set his machinery in motion, and the next development would be upon the road. I examined my pistols and then left town, taking the road along the river towards Asps.

At the end of half an hour, I came to the slope of the Barjols mountains, and soon afterwards entered the wood. I now began to be very careful and keep my eyes about me. I will not say that I was wholly without fear; for the mysterious manner in which the murders had been done, verged so closely upon the marvelous, that a sort of supernatural dread attached to it. Had the victims been shot, or run through with a sword, or had their throats cut, I should have felt no sort of dread. But this was new ground. Death had come here, nobody knew how. It might have come from an invisible hand, and in dead silence. Yet, when I reasoned upon the subject, I felt that the murderer must approach very near to his victim ere the blow was struck, since it must be some direct and powerful agent that could cause death in such a manner.

I had crossed the little cascade of Saint Esprit, and was descending a short, steep, hill-side, when I saw a boy by the roadside, at the foot of the descent, engaged in whipping a mule. He was a slightly built fellow, not more than fifteen years of age, and his coarse garments were covered with mud. I knew that there was a mill upon a branch of the Verdun, not far back, and I supposed he might be the miller's boy. As I came nearer, I saw a large sack upon the ground, close by where the mule stood.

"What's the matter, my boy?" I asked as I drew up near him.
"This ugly mule has thrown both me and my bag of corn from his back," the boy answered.
"Are you hurt?" I continued.
"My left shoulder is hurt," said he, "and I can't lift this sack. If Monsieur would assist me, I would be very grateful."

Until this moment the idea of suspecting the boy had not entered my head; but the suspicion flashed upon me now. He was altogether too keen a looking fellow for a miller's apprentice. He gave me a glance from a pair of quick, sharp eyes, that meant more than he had spoken. And then, if I had not been very much mistaken, I had seen him holding his mule firmly with that left hand.

I leaped from my saddle, and moved towards the boy, being careful to watch his every movement. Here was a dilemma. If master should return and find the hay unraked, a settlement would be the result. What was to be done?
"I tell you what, Jack; I think we can make a big rake, and hitch de sorrel to it, and make him help us. Massa has a straight stick, an' I'll bore him full of ho's, an' you saw some pins about a two feet long an' put in dese holes, an' I'll put two strong links in de middle to hold him by. Tom get de sorrel an' tie his traces to de end of de stick wid a rope, an' we'll hab de hay up yet afore night."

And, sure enough, they did get up a hay rake and scratched the hay together in a hurry. When the boss came, he noticed a singular looking contrivance in the lot, and on examining it he saw at once that they had introduced a new idea, and calling the aid of a carpenter, he constructed the first horse rake in the United States—so the story goes. Said horse rake was made in the town of Jamaica, Long Island, and the lazy negroes were the inventors.

The following good story of a negro's first meeting with a bear is told by Colonel —, who had spent most of his fortune and life in the woods of Florida:
The colonel had a black fellow, a good-natured, happy creature who, one morning, was strolling through the woods, whistling and roaring as he went, when suddenly he spied an individual as black as himself, with much more wool. Dick looked at his new friend, and the bear (on his rump) at his. Dick's eyes began to stick out a feet.

Bears began to approach. Dick called bears for the first time and the bear after him. Dick was upon the cypress, and the bear scratching close after him. Dick moved out on a limb, the bear followed—till the limb began to bend.

"Now see here, Mister, if you come any farder, dis limb broke. Dere I dere! I told you so." As Dick had said, the limb broke, and down came bear and nigger!
"Dere you black devil, I telt you so; dis is all your fault! Yer broke your neck, and I'll just take yer to Massa Colonel."

Passing the Schuykill, one day, Dr. Franklin saw a man sitting on the bridge very earnestly looking on the cork of his fishing line, as he said, "What luck? what luck?" cried the Doctor.
"O none! none!" answered our fishing hawk; "none yet; I have not been here over a couple of hours or so."

The Doctor pushed on. Near sundown he returned. The man was still sitting and staring at his cork, like a spaniel at a dead set.
"Where art thou going?" asked one. "To thy house with the fishes," answered the other.
"And whither art thou riding?" "Truly," replied the first, "I was taking the wheat to thy house." Each, pleased with his bargain, had thought the wheat justly due to his neighbor, and was going to pay it.
"Now observe change tout cela," as the French say, which may be truly translated, "Times isn't as they used to was."

upon this the tobacco rested.

A pressure of the thumb or finger upon this plate discharged the weapon. In order to cock it, the plate had to be removed. And now comes the infernal feature of the contrivance. The powder used in the little barrel was Cazabon's own manufacture, and very powerful. For a wall a piece of felt was used, and on the top of this was placed the missile which did the mischief. The boy had two of them with him, stashed up in the lining of his cap. He hid them out and showed them to me. This projectile was a tiny arrow, not larger than a cannie needle, with one end sharp, and the other bent down to a thin feather. It was of fine steel, but coated with a greenish yellow substance, which was the most virulent and speedy poison that the chemist's art could concoct. That needle once within the course of the blood, and death was already at the door. It punctured the skin not so palpably as the pick of a pin. He who sent it on its fatal errand made sure of his aim, generally striking the neck, and the victim would fall into insensibility ere he could comprehend what had hurt him.

I returned to Castelane with the boy; and having left him in charge of the Sub-Prefect, I took a gentleman along with me, and went to the factory. Monsieur Cazabon was surprised to see me back so soon; but he was more surprised when I asked him to take a walk with me; and when I called upon the gendarme, and bade him put the handcuffs upon the agent, he was ready to sink to the floor.

We had him secured before he had sense enough to resist, and he was conveyed to the office of the Sub-Prefect without any trouble. At first he denied everything; but when he found that this would not avail him, he swore he would kill the boy.

In due time Monsieur Louis Cazabon was tried and condemned to death; and the Prefect of Digre took possession of the infernal machine. Before the villain was executed he confessed his crimes—told how many years he had worked to perfect his fatal instrument, and produce the poison—and also how the boy Henry had been driven to help him through fear of his life.

So the rascal was executed. Henry Dupin spent some two years in confinement, and was then set free, and commenced an honest life. As for me, I got all the praise I deserved, and perhaps more. At all events, I had done the country some service, and the people were not slow to acknowledge it.

Origin of the Horse Rake.

"Sam, I want you to rake all the hay to-day. I am going away and will not be back before night," said farmer Kissan, near fifty years ago.

"Yes, massa, have 'em up all right, an' no mistake."

Sam and his sable companions took their rakes to the hay field, in good earnest; but the sun rose higher and shone hotter and hotter, until they essayed just to stop under the inviting shade of an apple tree. Here they beguiled the time away so pleasantly listening to Sam's marvelous stories, that before they were aware, the horn sounded for dinner—and the hay not raked. Here was a dilemma. If master should return and find the hay unraked, a settlement would be the result. What was to be done?

"I tell you what, Jack; I think we can make a big rake, and hitch de sorrel to it, and make him help us. The following good story of a negro's first meeting with a bear is told by Colonel —, who had spent most of his fortune and life in the woods of Florida:
The colonel had a black fellow, a good-natured, happy creature who, one morning, was strolling through the woods, whistling and roaring as he went, when suddenly he spied an individual as black as himself, with much more wool. Dick looked at his new friend, and the bear (on his rump) at his. Dick's eyes began to stick out a feet.

Bears began to approach. Dick called bears for the first time and the bear after him. Dick was upon the cypress, and the bear scratching close after him. Dick moved out on a limb, the bear followed—till the limb began to bend.

"Now see here, Mister, if you come any farder, dis limb broke. Dere I dere! I told you so." As Dick had said, the limb broke, and down came bear and nigger!
"Dere you black devil, I telt you so; dis is all your fault! Yer broke your neck, and I

PUGET SOUND HERALD. STELLACOOM, W. T., FRIDAY, NOV. 11, 1859.

ATLANTIC NEWS. Dates from the Eastern States are to Oct. 10th. Below is a brief summary of the intelligence:— It may not be generally known, says an Atlantic journal, that our Government has recently confirmed a bluff of land for a military reservation, if anything, further north than San Juan, in Washington Territory.

Our Government having sent a Minister of full grade to Vienna, that of Austria has raised Mr. Hulseman to an equal rank. The latter will soon return to Washington.

The whole amount of the public land surveys, as returned to the General Land Office, for the year ending with the present month, is nearly 63,000 miles, or about 15,000,000 acres.

The disagreement between Gen. Cass and Baron Stocke, the Russian Minister, is not so serious as was first supposed. It grew mainly out of an alleged attempt on the part of the local authorities in the northern Pacific to restrain American traders and whalers within the limits imposed by Nicholas I. previous to the annexation of California.

The present Government of Russia will offer no impediment. It is confidently trusted to free trade on the part of American vessels with the growing population on the banks of the Amoor river.

Major Chapman, attached to the Quartermaster's Department, has committed suicide. His body was found Sept. 29, outside of Fort McHenry, Md., with his throat cut.

A dispatch has been received in New York, Sept. 28, from Mr. La Mountain, who ascended in his balloon on Thursday last, at Watertown, N. Y., announcing his safe arrival at Kingston, C. W.

Intelligence has been received that Mr. Head, a young gentleman seventeen years of age, only son and heir of Sir Edmund Head, Governor-General of the Canadas, was drowned while bathing in the river San Maurice.

The following named officers have been ordered to Panama by the steamer of the 20th of October to relieve those now attached to the U. S. steamer Saracen, whose term of service will shortly expire: Capt. Richie, Lieut. Walker and Mead, Master Shryock, Surgeon D. S. Green, Assistant Surgeons Bennett and Green, and Purser Ingersoll.

The New York Herald of Oct. 31 gives an account of a threatened duel between Billy Mulligan, the great expatriated, and Capt. De Riviere the bogus Zouave.

In the 6th District of Massachusetts, G. R. Loring and E. Williams, two Douglas men, have been appointed delegates to the Charleston Convention.

Russell, Majors & Co. have lost the Utah and Oregon Army transportation contract. It has been awarded to Irving & Co. Allison White, an ex-member of Congress, from Pennsylvania, is one of the latter firm. H. S. & W. M. Magraw, of Pennsylvania, are his partners. Irving & Co. a bid was 36 cents per mile less than that of the late contractors.

The Kansas election, on the 4th of October, on the question of the acceptance or rejection of the Wyandotte Constitution, passed off quickly. The adoption of the Constitution is generally conceded as certain. Leavenworth City gives 331 majority for the Constitution. Other precincts in the county to hear from will increase the majority.

Prof. La Mountain the aeronaut, is safe. The particulars will soon be telegraphed. Later, a dispatch was received from Prof. La Mountain, dated, "Ottawa, C. W., October 3d," as follows: "Lost all. Landed 300 miles north of Watertown in the Canada wilderness. We were four days without food. Were brought out by Indian guides in their canoes. Please inform my wife."

(Signed.) JOHN LA MOUNTAIN. There are some hopes of saving the U. S. steamer Fulton.

The Buffalo (N. Y.) Post, a paper favorable to Daniel S. Dickinson for the Presidency, states that the delegation lately appointed to cast the vote of New York in the Charleston Convention, stands divided as follows: Stephen A. Douglas 35 Daniel S. Dickinson 17 A majority of the delegation under the instruction of the Convention will cast the whole vote as a unit. Douglas is, therefore, certain of the thirty-five votes of New York at Charleston.

The Rochester (N. Y.) Democrat says, De Lave's attempt to carry a man across the Genesee river upon his back, was a decided failure. He lost his balance; but fortunately both the adventurers caught, one on the rope and the other on a guy. The perilous moment blanched every cheek among the spectators who had bread.

FROM EUROPE. By the last mail our dates from Europe are to Sept. 24th.

It was stated in London that Spain had returned an evasive reply to the question from England touching the concentration of troops in the neighborhood of Gibraltar.

The Governments of France and England were to take immediate measures for inflicting chastisement on the Chinese.

The London Times, of Thursday, says that the Government has decided on dispatching immediately to China several additional steam and sailing frigates, together with large reinforcements of troops.

Orders have already been dispatched to the naval rendezvous for enlisting men, and in order to expedite the order, the coast guard was to be placed to volunteer. Dover Castle was to be called in an efficient state of defense.

The London Times Paris correspondent says it is rumored that 12,000 French troops are ordered to be held in readiness for China. Gen. Wimpfen was spoken of as commander.

Some of the Madrid Journals publish articles on the necessity of Gibraltar for the English, no matter by what means.

Cambard K. Brown, the designer of the Great Eastern, who was prevented by sickness from going on her trial trip, has since died of paralysis.

Orders have been dispatched to India for the troops there to proceed immediately to China, in order to prosecute the war.

The sailing of the Great Eastern has been delayed to the 30th of October, in consequence of repairs required.

The King of Belgium's propositions to settle the Italian question was reported to have been accepted by Napoleon. They include a European Congress to assemble at Biarritz. The statements regarding the other propositions were conflicting.

The London Herald says it has reason to believe a treaty of peace will soon be concluded at Zurich, bearing, however, only the signature of France and Austria. The preliminaries of Villafranca will be strictly maintained.

A telegram from Bern says a courier from Vienna had reached Zurich with instructions to draw up a treaty of peace and a document for the cession of Lombardy to Sardinia. No allusion to the Duchies.

It is asserted that the result of the visit of the King of Belgium to Napoleon at Biarritz was fully successful, and various rumors are afloat with regard to the arrangements entered into.

The London Times Paris correspondent says that one report says, that the question of the Duchies had been settled and that Tuscany was to be resigned over by the King of Belgium to Sardinia, and report says that the Count of Flanders had to the three Italian Duchies and the Arch Duke Maximilian Venetia, with separate Constitutions. These reports are not authenticated, and must be taken for what they are worth.

The Paris correspondent of the London Herald regards the scheme of placing a Belgian Prince on the Tuscan throne as a ridiculous canard.

The Paris correspondent of the London Spectator, who has on several occasions communicated early and authentic news, asserts that Napoleon accepts the plan of the King of Belgium, which is to move the fortresses of Peschiera and Mantua and the seats of Parma and Modena to Sardinia, to reinstate the house of Lorraine in Tuscany and restore the Legations of the Pope. After the introduction of a variety of reforms, Venetia is to have governmental institutions and an army of its own under the Arch Duke Ferdinand and Maximilian, with the title of Grand Duke of Venetia. This stipulation has the concurrence of Austria. A conference is also to be held at Brussels, presided over by the King. This letter is dated evening of the 29th.

The Sardinian government has addressed a circular to the various powers denying the cession of Savoy to France, and declaring such rumors entirely void of foundation.

The Sardinian government has also been said to have protested to the great powers against the secret aid afforded by Austria in recruiting soldiers for the Pope. Evidence was being published to prove that Parma, under the government of the Duchess, did not maintain a neutral attitude during the late war.

The King of Sardinia was most enthusiastically received on his visit to Pavia and Lodi. The Pope remained in a very alarming state. Cardinal Antonelli had declared his unit to attend to public affairs.

A Paris rumor was that there was to be no Chinese expedition, that the head of the Mandarin offering at Peking had been proffered, in a letter-coupled, it promises to make all the satisfaction that can be required, and that the Ambassador will be reinstated when he arrived at Peking.

The Times Paris correspondent again draws attention to the great activity in the French dock-yard, and states that he has been assured that there is now building, or under orders to be built, twenty ships of the line, ten of the largest size, and the others to be of inferior calibre, but strictly the previous style, steel plated, and provided with iron beaks or bows.

The English continue to discuss the San Juan question, generally in conciliatory language.

Large reinforcements for China were to leave England by the overland route. Part of the squadron for the China service had already sailed.

The Spanish expedition against Morocco has been fitted at 12,000 troops, the transports for which are all ready.

The Arctic steamer Fox had returned with interesting records and relics of the Franklin expedition, from which it appears that Franklin died in 1847, and the ship was abandoned in 1848. The expedition found, at Point William, a record dated April 20th, 1848, signed by Capt. Crener and Fitzjames, saying the Erebus and Terror were abandoned three days previous in the ice, and that 103 survivors were proceeding to reach Fife river. Sir John Franklin had died June 11th, of the previous year, and the total deaths to date were nine officers and fifteen men. Many interesting relics were found on the western shore of King William's Island, others were obtained from the Esquimaux, who stated that after the abandonment of the ships, one was crushed by ice and the other forced ashore. Several skeletons of Franklin's men, quantities of clothing and a duplicate record up to the time of the abandonment of the ship, were discovered. Numerous cables had arrived at Marseilles.

The report that Levino had been appointed Captain General of Cuba was fully confirmed. It is rumored that England had offered to mediate in the case of Morocco.

Amicable relations had been established between Turkey and Persia. Schamyl was betrayed for a bribe of six million rubles.

WASHINGTON HOTEL, Corner of Main and Second streets, OLYMPIA, W. T. MILAS GALLIHER, Proprietor.

THE PROPRIETOR HAS RECENTLY ERRECTED, IN CONNECTION with and as a part of the "Washington Hotel," a large two story building, 20 by 60 feet, by which he is enabled to provide the travelling public with a larger number of apartments, comfortable and excellently ventilated apartments than can be afforded by any other public house in Washington Territory. An idea of his ability to accommodate the public may be judged from the fact that the hotel contains twenty-five private rooms, (exclusive of family apartments) six of which are large drawing rooms or parlors.

Thankful to the public for the liberal patronage heretofore extended to the proprietor, and having thus enlarged the enjoyment of strangers with him comfortable and pleasant accommodations, he trusts he will be able to do as well as any in his business. Beds and bedrooms furnished with such as may desire them. Board by the day or week. A good stable is attached to this establishment, which will be promptly attended to for the accommodation of animals of the travelling public. Public patronage is respectfully solicited. OLYMPIA, Dec. 4th, 1857. G. A. HEIGER.

TOWN LOTS! BILLS'S ADDITION TO STELLACOOM. GOOD CHANCE FOR INVESTMENT! THE SUBSCRIBER, HAVING LAID OUT his land claim, adjoining Capt. Balch's claim, into Town Lots of one acre each, is now prepared to sell Lots to suit parties desiring either to locate and improve or speculate in investment. This claim, for advantageous location, is not excelled by any in Puget Sound. The site has been laid out with a view to beauty and convenience; the streets being four rods wide, and the whole lot well watered by springs. Situated in three churches have already been donated and set apart. The prices of Lots range from $50 to $150 each, according to locality. The proprietor contemplates building a wharf from the claim to the city, and the completion of this work will greatly enhance the value of the entire property. Parties wishing to purchase can do so by applying to FRANK CLARK, Esq., of Stellacoom, who, by power of attorney, is authorized to sell and convey the same. LEMUEL BILLS, 50th.

MARINE HOSPITAL, Port Townsend, June 22, 1858. DR. P. M. O'BRIEN, LATE RESIDENT PHYSICIAN and Surgeon of the County Hospital, San Francisco, and of the hospital of the Sisters of Mercy, is now in charge of the Marine Hospital at Port Townsend. DR. O'BRIEN is also prepared to receive private patients. He flatters himself, too, with the hope that an experience of sixteen years in the practice of his profession, both private and hospital, together with a thorough medical-chemical education, as evidenced by the proper granting of a diploma to that effect, will obtain for him the confidence of the citizens on Puget Sound. Letters addressed P. M. O'BRIEN, M.D., Port Townsend, will be duly acknowledged.
