THERE IS NO DEATH.
There is no death! The sturgeon dove
To rise upon some finer shore;
And bright in heaven's jeweled crown
They show themselves.

There is no death! The dust we tread
Shall show beneath the summer showers
The golden grain or ruddy fruit,
Or rainbow-tinted flowers.

There is no death! The leaves may fall,
The flowers may fade and pass away;
They only wait for wintry hours
They come again in May.

There is no death! No angel form
Walks o'er the earth with silent tread;
Nor have we any better things away,
And then we call them "dead."

He leaves our hearts all desolate,
He plucks our feet, and sweeps our
Transplanted into hills, they now
Adorn immortal bowers.

The bird like voice, whose joyous tones
Made glad this world of sin and strife,
Steps now in everlasting life
Amid the throng of life.

And where he comes a smile too brightly
Or bursts so pure for transient view,
He bears it to the world of light
To dwell in Paradise.

Behold the smiling life,
They leave us to weep again;
With joy we welcome them—the same,
Except the sin and pain.

And ever near us, though unseen,
The dear immortal spirits tread;
For all the benighted Universe
Is life—there are no dead.

An Unwelcome Passenger.
A cold winter's night, several years since, found a stage load of passengers gathered to gether around the warm fire of a tavern bar-room of a New England village. Shortly after this his horse should be stabled for the night. After we had eaten our supper we repaired to the bar room, where conversation flowed freely. Several anecdotes had been related, and finally the pedler was asked to give us a story, as men of his profession were generally full of anecdotes and adventures. He was a short, thick set man, some where about forty years of age, and gave evidence of great strength. His name was Lemuel Viney, and his home was in Dover, New Hampshire.

"Well, gentlemen," he commenced, knocking the ashes from his pipe and putting it in his pocket, "suppose I tell you the last thing of any consequence that happened me. You see I am right from the West, and on my way home for winter quarters. It was during the early part of last spring, one pleasant evening, that I pulled up at the door of a small village tavern, in Hancock county, Indiana. I went in, called for my supper, and had my horse taken care of. It began to rain about eight o'clock, and it was very dark out of doors. Now I wanted to be in Jackson the next morning, for I expected a load of goods there for me, which I intended to dispose of on my way home.

"The moon would rise about midnight, and I knew if it did not rain I could get along very well after that. So I asked the landlord if he would see that my horse was fed about midnight, as I wished to be off about two. He expressed some surprise at this, and asked me why I did not stay for breakfast. I told him that I had sold my last load about out and that a new lot of goods was waiting for me at Jackson, and I wanted to go there before the express agent left in the morning.

"There were a number of persons sitting around while I told this, but I took little notice of them; only one arrested my attention. I had seen that week a notice for the detection of a notorious robber. The bills gave a description of his person, and the man answered very well to it. He was a tall, well formed man, rather slight in frame, and had the appearance of a gentleman, save that his face bore those hard, cruel marks which an observing man cannot mistake for anything but the index of a villainous disposition.

"When I went to my chamber I asked the individual. He said he did not know him. He had come there that afternoon, and intended to leave the next day. The host asked me why I wished to know, and I simply told him that the man's countenance was familiar, and I merely wished to know if I was ever acquainted with him.

"I was resolved not to let the landlord into the secret, but to hurry on to Jackson, and there to give information to the sheriff, who perhaps might reach the inn before the villain left, for I had no doubt of his identity. I had an alarm watch, and having set to give the alarm, went to sleep. I was alarmed at the proper time, and immediately dressed myself. When I reached the yard I found all the clouds had passed away, and the moon was shining brightly. The hostler was easily aroused, and by two o'clock I was on the road. The mud was deep, and my horse could not travel very fast. However, on we went, and in the course of half an hour were clear of the village. At a short distance ahead lay a large forest, mostly of pine. The road lay through this wood, as near as I can remember the distance was twelve miles; yet the moon was in the east, and as the road ran nearly to the west, I thought I should have light enough.

"I had entered the wood and gone about a half a mile, when my wagon wheel, with a bump and a jerk, went into a deep hole. I uttered an exclamation of astonishment, but this was not all; I heard another exclamation near me! I looked quietly around but could see nothing; yet I knew that the sound was very close to me. As the hind wheels came up, I heard something tumble from one side to the other in my wagon, and I could also feel the jer occasioned by the movement. It was simply a man in my cart. I knew this on the instant; of course I felt puzzled. As first I imagined that some one had taken that method to obtain a ride. My next idea was that somebody had got in to sleep there, but this passed away as soon as it came, for no one would have broken into my cart for that purpose. And that thought gentlemen, opened my eyes. My next thought was the suspicious individual who had been in the tavern. He heard me say that my load was all sold out, and of course he supposed I had some money with me. In that he was right, for I had over two thousand dollars. I thought he meant to leave my cart when he supposed I had reached a safe place, and then creep over and shoot me or my mind before I had got a rod from the hole.

"In a few minutes my resolution was formed. My horse was knee deep in the mud, and I knew that I could slip off without and noise. So I drew my pistol, and having wiped my reins about the whip stocks carefully slipped down in the mud and examined the heap. The outer door of the cart lay down and in a basket with a padlock. The padlock was gone, and the heap was secured in its place by a bit of pine, so that a slight force from within would break it. My wheel wrench stood in a leather bucket on the side of the cart, and I quietly took it out and slipped it into the staple, the iron handle just sliding down.

"Now I had him. My cart was almost as made of stout white oak, and made on purpose for rough usage. I did not believe an ordinary man could break out. I got on my cart as noiselessly as I had got off, and then urged my horse on, still keeping my pistol in hand. I knew that at a distance of half a mile further I should come to a hard road, and so allowed my horse to pick his way through the mud. About ten minutes after this I heard a motion in the cart, followed by a grinding noise, as though some heavy force was being applied to the door. I said nothing, but the idea struck me that the villain might judge where I sat, and shoot up through the cart at me, so I sat down on the foot-board. Of course I knew that my unexpected passenger was a villain, for he must have been awake since I started, and nothing in the world but absolute villainy would have caused him to have remained quiet so long, and then start up in this particular place. The thumping and grinding grew louder, and then I heard a human voice.

"Let me out of this!" he yelled, trying to lift my head so as to make him think that I was in the usual place, and then asked him what he was doing there. "Let me out, and I will tell you," he replied. "Tell me what you are in there for?" I said. "I got in here to sleep on a rug," he answered. "How did you get in?" I asked. "Let me out, or I'll shoot you through the head!" he replied.

"Just at that moment my horse's hoofs struck the hard road, and I knew that the route to Jackson would be good going. The distance was twelve miles. I slipped back to the front board, and took the whip. In fifteen minutes we cleared the woods, and away we went at a keen jump. The chap inside kept yelling to be let out. Finally he stopped, and in a few minutes came the report of a pistol—once—two—three—four—once right after the other, and I heard the balls whiz over my head. If I had been on my seat, one of these balls, if not two of them, would have gone through me. I popped up my head again, and gave a yell, and then said, "O, God save me!—I am a dead man!" "Let me out, or I'll shoot you through the head," he said. "I am a dead man," he said, as though I was falling off, and finally settled down on the front board, again. I now urged up the old mare by giving her an occasional poke with my whip stock, and she peeled it faster than ever.

"The man called out to me twice more pretty soon after this, and as he got no reply he made tremendous efforts to get the door open, and as this also failed him, he made several attempts on the top. But I had no fear for his doing anything there, for the top of the cart is framed with dove-tails, and I had bolted to the posts with iron bolts. I had made it so I could carry loads there. By and by, after all this failed, the man began to halloo "whoo!" to the horse, and kept it up until he became hoarse. All this time I kept perfectly quiet, holding the reins firmly, and kept poking the beast with the whip. We were not an hour going that dozen miles, not a bit of it. I hadn't much fear; perhaps I might tell the truth, and say I had none, for I had a good pistol, and more than that, my passenger was safe; yet I was glad when I came to Jackson village, and in ten minutes more landed up in front of the tavern, and found a couple of men in the barn cleaning down some stage horses.

"Well, old fellow," said I, as I got down and went to the back of the wagon, "you have had a good ride, haven't you?" "Why are you?" he said, as he swore as he asked the question. "I am the man you tried to shoot," was my reply. "Where am I?—let me out." "Look here, we've come to a safe stopping place, and mind you that my pistol is ready for you the moment you show yourself. Lay quiet!"

"By this time the two hostlers had come to see what was the matter, and I explained the case. After that I got one of them to run and rout out the sheriff, and tell him what I believed I had got for him. The first streaks of daylight were coming up; and in half an hour it would be broad daylight. In less than half that time the sheriff came, and I met with him. I told him the whole affair in a few words, and then made for the cart. He told the chap inside who he was, and if he made the least resistance he'd be a dead man. I then slipped the iron wrench out, and as I let the door down the fellow made a spring. I caught him by the ankle, and he came down on his face, and the moment I saw the chap I recognized him. He was marched to the lock-up, and I told the sheriff I should remain in town all day. After breakfast the sheriff came down to the tavern and told me I had caught the very bird, and that if I would remain until the next morning I should have the reward of two hundred dollars that had been offered.

"I found my goods all safe, and paid the express messenger for bringing them from Indianapolis, and then went to work to stow them away in the cart. The bullet holes were found in the top of the vehicle, just as I expected. They were in a line, about five inches apart, and had I been here usually sit, two of them must have hit me somewhere near the small of the back, and passed over, for they were set with heavy charges of powder, and his pistols were heavy ones.

"On the next morning the sheriff called upon me, and paid me two hundred dollars in and, for he had made himself sure he had the villain.

"Afterwards got a letter in the postoffice at Portsmouth for me, from the sheriff of Hancock county, and it informed me that the fellow who tried to kill and rob me is in prison for life."

AN IRISHMAN'S WILL.—In the name of God Amen! I, Timothy Doolan, of Ballydoonerry, in the County of Clare, farmer, being sick and weak in the legs, but of sound mind and warm heart—glory be to God!—do make this, my first and last will, and God witness; and first, I give my soul to God, in His merciful hands, and I give my body to be buried in the ground in Ballydoonerry Chapel, where all me kith and kin that have gone before me and those that live after me, belonging to me, are buried. Piece to their ashes, and may the sod rest lightly on their bones. Bury me near me godfather, Felix O'Flaherty, brother and betune him and me father and mother who lie separated all together, at the other side of the chapel-yard.

"I leave the six shillings in the name of my father, to the poor of the chapel-yard, to be used for the relief of the poor, and I leave to my daughter Mary and her husband, Paddy O'Regan, to get the white cow that's going to have 12 black bonifs. Tady, my second boy, that was killed in the war in America, might have got his pick of the poultry, but as he is gone, I'll have him to his wife, who did a wake afore him. I bequeath to all mankind the fresh air of Heaven, all the fishes of the sea they can take, and I leave to them all the Sun and Moon and Stars. I leave to Peter Bafferty a pint of whiskey, I can't finish, and may God be merciful to him."

PROPER REBUKE.—correspondent of the Cincinnati Columbian tells the following story:—
"At Lafayette a well dressed man, accompanied by an interesting looking lady, evidently his wife, and two small children, entered the cars. He was short of stature, with a short turned-up nose, a short, thick lip, small eyes, and imperceptible eye-brows. The lady had a pleasing expression in her pale countenance, that bore the impress of suffering patience. Her younger child appeared sad, and looked fretfully at her worried knees. The other son got tired of the irksomeness of the car, and became froward and impatient. The man, for I cannot call him gentleman, lay lazily reading a paper, looking on a whole seat he monopolized to himself, though other passengers were standing. At length the lady, perfectly unable to attend to the two children, in a tone of gentleness that had something of fear in it, besought him to attend to the wants of the children. He answered in a loud and abrupt tone that attracted everybody's attention:

"Don't bother me!"
"Her eyes dropped; a look of mingled sorrow and shame came over her face, and she said not a word. A few moments afterwards the conductor, Mr. Paul, came along, and the man inquired of him the distance to Michigan City. With a tone modelled to the life after that previously used by his interrogator Mr. Paul hissed out—
"Don't bother me!"
"The man's eyes glared furey, as he demanded the reason of such an insult, and threatened to resent it unless a proper apology was immediately offered.

"I shall offer no apology for my language, said the noble conductor, 'neither will you resent it; for a word passed by himself injured by having applied to him the same language he has disgraced himself by applying to a lady, in too little of a gentleman to be apologized to, and too much of a coward to even dare to resent it.'"

A LATE FATAL DUEL.—The New Orleans Times of February 24, gives the details of the duel lately fought near that city, between Edmond Lefebvre and Charles Janin which resulted in the almost instant death of one of the principals, and the death of the other in about twelve hours after being shot. The difficulty had its origin at a ball where Lefebvre had taken his wife. It is stated that Janin, whilst waiting with Madam Lefebvre, thrust his hand into that lady's bosom, and that the lady tearing herself away, rushed to her husband and complained of the outrageous act. Angry words passed between Lefebvre and Janin at the time; there was a scuffle, knockdown, and then a challenge. Each party seemed determined to have the life of the other. They fought with double barreled shot guns and both were killed. Lefebvre leaves a wife and two children, and Janin a mother and sister.—Each family is deprived of its natural supporter and protector. Such is a brief recital of the most recent duel in the United States, and one that ought to be the last to disgrace this country. No number of sermons or moral essays could more impressively enforce the danger that surrounded women and families when they allow themselves to attend public assemblies for dancing purposes, where the waltz is one of the principal amusements.—Here we have a married lady whirling about a room with a man's arm around her waist, and that arm not her husband's, or her brother's; he giving way to temptation, in snatching the lady, and then, when called to account for it, murderously seeking the husband's life. This affair, beginning with a waltz, ends with two murders and the abject distress of two innocent families.

We would exhort all parents, if you regard the welfare and happiness of your children in this world merely, to teach them benevolence, and train them in habits of benevolence. If you desire that they may be kind to you when you are old, strive to enlarge their hearts. If they are taught to love their neighbors as themselves, they never can be unkind to their own flesh.

It has been beautifully said, that "the veil which covers the face of fatality was woven by the hand of mercy."

story of a Young Girl.

I have heard a story of a young girl, the daughter of a once eminent physician, who upon the death of her father, was obliged to support her mother and herself. She under took the management of a Kindergarten school, and established her mother in a neat comfortable home. She herself took apartments in another section of the city. An intimate friend of hers grew anxious to know how she was living. On a card she had her address, a good street, a house, in a respectable locality, but five miles away.

"Caroline tells me she got along nicely," her old mother said to this friend, "and she must, for you know that is a very fine part of London where she is."
So Caroline was sought out.
"I found the house," said the friend who related the story, "it was a very imposing mansion, five stories high, and in good repair. A servant came to the door, well dressed, but smiled when I asked for Caroline."
"She was not in; would be in soon."
"I told her I was an old friend, and would wait. She smiled again."
"Would I care about going up so high? It was over the children's nursery."
"I said I should not mind; but I confess I was weary long before I arrived at the fifth floor. There I was welcomed into a cozy little room, how to call it a room, it was more like a closet. Only in the centre could one stand upright. It was the garret. No carpet covered the floor, which was awfully clean. A little trundle-bed stood in one corner, covered with a coarse white linen sheet, instead of a counterpane. Under a calico curtain hung a row of wardrobes,—two black dresses. One chair, a little pine table, a bit of a cupboard in one corner,—these were all that were visible, with the exception of a small bathing-tub in one end of the poor little garret."

"Trembling at my own impertinence, I opened the door. One step and another, a spoon, a knife and fork, and a loaf of bread. The tears rushed to my eyes. She, who had lived in comparative luxury, to be reduced to this!
"No sooner had I made my observations than Caroline came in. I shall never forget her look as she saw me, not of pride, but astonishment.
"I thought I had so completely buried my self that nobody would find me!" she cried, "How kind you are!"
"My dear girl you could surely live better than this?" I exclaimed.
"Not cheaper," was her reply. "My expenses are next to nothing, you must know, and mamma could not live so close as I; I allowed myself laziness. She is very old and must not want the comforts she has been accustomed to. Besides, I have everything I really need. My bread and water are sure, and I am healthy. If you look out you will see the swallows' nest just under my window. I feed the pretty birdies every day, and I believe they know me. My books and my papers are pleasant companions; I am surrounded by a purer atmosphere; I have no neighbors opposite to watch me, and I want you to believe that I am very happy; and if you see mamma tell her up, also, that Carrie is as comfortable as possible."

"But, my child, do you never regret the past?"
"What good would that do me? Regrets are useless as dreams. Of course, if I could have papa back again,—her lip trembled a little. She ran to the chest, lifted her hair, and laughingly asked me if I was hungry.
"Pray don't imagine that I want for anything," she added merrily. "I have a little store of figs, and nuts, and raisins that I eat for a dessert; one or two of the servants are willing to cook me a little meat when I want it, and I really do live like a princess; so don't waste any regrets on me."

"I came away from there," said my friend, "feeling that I had learned a new lesson in human experience, and that there could be, what I had never even imagined possible, happiness in lodgings; even in a garret, whose occupants was a young girl of nineteen, who had been reared in a home of affluence, and with no other viands than a crust of bread and a cup of cold water."

FRIGHTENING A GREENHORN.—While traveling up the Ohio, some years since, our boat stopped at one of the landings to take in wood. On the shore amongst the crowd, was a remarkable stupid looking fellow, with his hands in his pockets, and his under lip hanging down. A dandy, ripe for a scrape tipped nose and winks all about, saying: "Now I'll have some fun; I'll frighten the greenhorn." He jumped ashore drawing a bowie knife, and brandishing it in the face of the "green up" exclaiming: "Now I'll punish you. I have been looking for you a week." The fellow started stupidly at the assailant. He evidently had not seen enough to be scared; but as the bowie knife came near to his face one of his huge fists suddenly vacated his pocket, and fell hard and heavy between the dandy's eyes, and the poor fellow was floundering in the Ohio. "Greeny" then jumped aboard our boat, put his hands in his pockets, and looking around said, "maybe there's a somebody here that's been looking for me a week."

SLEEP.—There is one place where sleep is uncommonly in church. But dear reader, there are some somniferous men of God, whose words fall upon you like so many poppies. Their languid sentences come from the "ancient ones, all spectacle bedstrid," with such a drowsy twang, that they are irresistible stupefiers. I listened of late to such a one. He never finished a sentence. "My friends," he would say, "I wish to address you upon the importance of it. It is a subject of great importance—and one which, when I say that it is a subject of great importance, I mean to infer that it is important to the individual who. And when that individual declines observing this subject, he has reached that state of moral turpitude, when, hence we view, he becomes associated with those that, on account of the foolishness of the world, are corrupted by it!"

MISCELLANY.

DEPARTURE OF THREE MAST ACROSS THE OCEAN ON A RAFT.—The India-rubber-saving raft Nouparel yesterday started on her perilous voyage to Europe. The raft is constructed of three parallel air cylinders, twenty-five feet long and twenty-six inches in diameter, made of India-rubber, and pointed at the ends, these being covered with duck canvas. The water casks, twelve in number, are also of rubber, strapped on the side of the raft. These can also be used as life preservers. Her stores consist of biscuit, preserved meats and fruits, and Lemon's concentrated egg, all of which are placed in tin cases. A boat, six feet long, four feet wide and twelve inches deep, contains all the stores, on the top of which is a mattress covered by a tent, and everything is exposed, there being no hold in the raft, it seems impossible to keep anything in it in place, but the parties who have undertaken the voyage think that the raft will ride every sea. "At half past five o'clock the anchor was hoisted, and accompanied by a number of small boats, the Nouparel proceeded down the bay, and after rounding Governor's Island, disappearing from sight. The party on board consisted of Messrs. Miles, Miller and Lawson.—E.

Before the late rebellion there were about seven hundred thousand more insane than females in the United States. Now in many of the States it is estimated that the proportion is on the other side, owing to the hundreds of thousands of men who fell in battle and by disease.

A forlorn specimen of the male persuasion, got off the following, which he fondly imagines is rather touching: "When Willie's arms her dog imprison, I always wish my neck were stiff, how often would I stop and stare, to get a pat from a hand like hers; and when she kisses Tommy's nose, O, God! I wish that I were those I guess you."

The name of the association was changed to Dallas Agricultural Society, and the constitution altered so as to allow citizens of Oklahoma and Stanislaus counties, Washington Territory, to become members.
Contentment, with a small home, is perhaps the nearest approach to happiness. Desires that cannot be filled by this are misdirected; for what a man has beyond what he can enjoy, is evidently pride.
The pit that is deepest, the pit that is most unexplored and most unsearchable, is that which is the glory of God's thought and hand—our own soul.
Men's lives should be like the day, more beautiful in the evening; or like the summer, aglow with noon, and the autumn, rich with golden harvest, where good works and deeds have ripened on the soil.
Cardinal Richieu said to a friend, "there is a great deal here that I do not understand."
"That is not my fault," said the poet.
Man's inhumanity to man, makes countless millions mourn.

Law Titles Again.

On last Tuesday evening a meeting of citizens was held and a committee appointed and instructed to raise funds sufficient to enable the proper authorities to enter the townsite in the Land Office in accordance with the act of Congress.

Why not then take time by the forelock? Let some citizen claim title under Mrs. Short's bill in the District court, alleging his title and that the Mission of St. James claims to have some right or interest to the same piece of land and praying that the Mission may come in and show the facts constituting its title.

We have but briefly alluded to this question, which is of the greatest importance to our people. We do certainly hope, that it will meet with proper consideration by those interested.

UP COUNTY ITEMS.—The joyful countenance of our returned friend J. C. Creighton illuminated our banquet the other day.

Capt. Wilsey lately stationed at Fort Dalles left that place with his company on Tuesday morning en route for Baker City, Baker Co., Oregon, where the military authorities contemplate the establishment of a post.

Mr. Creighton also informs us, that a party of three men a few weeks ago made a discovery of rich placer diggings on St. Josephs river not far from O'Leary d'Alone. They succeeded in obtaining $94 00 in coarse gold in six days by washing in a pan, having only a pan, pick and shovel with them.

CITY FINANCES.—There was in the city Treasury on the 15th inst. the sum of $794 in currency. It is estimated that before the end of the current fiscal year, ending on March 1st, 1868, an additional sum of $1,050 will be paid in for licenses.

MONEY ORDERS.—Postmaster Cochran, requests us to state, that he is now prepared to issue money orders and also to pay all money orders made payable at his office.

Washington Territory Items.

The farmers about this place have commenced cutting hay. They report unusually light crops.—P. T. Manning.

Messrs. Bishop and Eldridge, of Chinaman, last week, shot two large panthers, which had been killing their sheep. One weighed 90 and the other 110 pounds.

NEW DISCOVERY.—We hear that paying mines have been discovered on the Columbia river near White Bluffs. They prospect all the way from three to eight cents to the pan, but are so situated that it is difficult to get water on the claims.

LEWIS.—Parties lately returned from Lemhi, report the country an unmitigated humbug. Notwithstanding these adverse reports it is still believed that Lemhi will yet prove a good mining camp.—Id.

HARVEST.—The farmers in this Valley are busily engaged in harvesting their crop. We learn that harvest hands are very scarce, and that as a consequence high wages are offered. Good hands command from $2 50 to $3 50 per diem.—Id.

RECOVERING.—Elihu Ward, the Gentleman who was shot and severely injured, at the foot of the mountains, a few weeks since, is out of danger, and will have the use of his arm.—Id.

We learn that another effort is to be made to obtain for Yakima and Kittitas counties, the mail facilities to which they are justly entitled. These counties have not a post office or post route, and they have a population of nearly three hundred persons and return an assessment roll of nearly $300,000.—Standard.

We learn from a gentleman just from the eastern part of the Territory, that the valleys of the Kittitas and Yakima are fast settling, up with a permanent and thrifty population, who turn their attention almost exclusively to stock raising.

THUNDER STORM.—On Monday last we had for this country, a severe thunder storm. We question it ever having rained so hard in a given time as it did then.

OLYMPIA LODGE No. 1, I. O. O. F.—On Tuesday evening 21 July the officers of the Odd Fellows Lodge of this place—elect and appointed—were installed for the quarter commencing on July 1st.

LAUNCH.—A steamboat being built at Tam Water, by Messrs. Boise & Goff, to run on the Chehalis river, was launched on last Saturday evening.—Id.

UP COUNTY ITEMS.—The joyful countenance of our returned friend J. C. Creighton illuminated our banquet the other day.

UP COUNTY ITEMS.—The joyful countenance of our returned friend J. C. Creighton illuminated our banquet the other day.

The examination of classes and other exercises were interesting and exhibited a degree of improvement in the scholars generally, which entitles the teacher to the confidence of the public and argues well for the future of the school.

The examinations were conducted with a fairness truly refreshing, and to say the least unusual on such occasions. There was no attempt to hide defects, or to pass off superficial, for substantial scholarship. It is evidently a part of Mr. N's. system of instruction, to teach his pupils self reliance, and that they cannot appear to be good scholars, without actually being such.

So far the school has been a success; but much effort is needed on the part of its friends to ensure for it permanency and increasing usefulness. The next term will commence as may be seen by advertisement in the REGISTER, on the 14th of August, with increased educational facilities.

S. W. BROWN, One of the visiting Committee.

SALMON.—Mr. A. S. Abernethy informs us that a party of Californians, engaged in salmon fishing near his establishment at Oak Point, have put up this season over 100,000 cans of salmon in one pound cans.

Mr. A. also informs us that the bark Samuel Merritt sailed last Tuesday for San Francisco with a full cargo of assorted lumber from his mill intended for the San Francisco market.

DIVORCE CASE.—The petition of Mrs. Wilson for a divorce from her husband Fred A. Wilson, will be heard to-day before Judge Hewitt at chambers in Olympia. Messrs. Dennison and Garfield in behalf of def't., resist the petition. This is the case in which Judge Darwin of the Supreme Court of this Territory has figured so extensively.

OREGON NEWS.

EXER.—The much talked of debate between Rev. I. D. Driver, Methodist, and Mr. Benjamin Todd, Spiritualist, was ended last (Friday). Mr. Driver refused to discuss on account of some ruling by the judges.

The Sentinel of Jacksonville, Oregon, gives the following military intelligence: Company A, 1st U. S. Cavalry, under command of Lieut. Small, arrived at Fort Klammath on the 7th inst. The command at present numbers 63 men, but will soon be joined by 2d Lieut. Henderson, with 28 men who are now on the way from San Francisco, via Camp Bidwell.

The Salem Record makes the following contribution to the general mass of items interest in the Base Ball world: The great contest between the Willamette and Pacific took place on Saturday at the field on Wilson Avenue.

The following bit of romance appears in the Jacksonville Sentinel: Last Monday evening a young man named C. L. Willard, accompanied by a young girl fifteen or sixteen years old—the daughter of a rich old Hebrew in Sixtyn county—arrived here and put up at the City House.

A Southern Oregon paper gives a rumor that a band of twelve or fifteen Indians, from the Siskiyou Reservation, "went through" the Chinese miners on Galice creek a few days since, and also made an attempt to rob Witt's store, at Slate creek.

Capt. Sprague's company, the last of the First Oregon Infantry, arrived at Jacksonville on Saturday from Fort Klammath, and will be mustered out of service at once.

Washington, July 4.—The U. S. Consul at Havana reports that the yellow fever has assumed a malignant form. Indian Commissioner Taylor reports at length on Indian affairs. He contends that the difficulties arise mainly from unfair treatment of the Indians by the Government.

ALL SORTS OF PARAGRAPHS.

THE MORAL MARKET.—The following report of matters in the moral market has been made. We hope to be not entirely correct.

Honor.—Search. Old stock exhausted and the new will be a complete failure. Virtue.—Old growth nearly unobtainable. Young growth—prospects very unpromising.

Patriotism.—First quality scarce; none to be disposed of. Second quality easily bought on speculation at 100 per cent. discount. Prudence.—All in the hands of old stockholders.

Vice.—Market overstocked. Pride.—Market glutted. Politeness.—Cheap. Holders unwilling to dispose of stock at present rates.

Scandal.—None at wholesale. Dealt in chiefly by hawkers and peddlars at retail. Religion.—None genuine on hand.—Stocks generally adulterated. Very few investments.

Love.—None offered—except for greenbacks. Talent.—Scarce article. Sold exclusively for cash. Consistency.—Out of fashion.

FACTS IN PERSPECTIVE.—Ten days per annum is the average sickness of human life. The pulse of children is 180 in a minute, at puberty it is 83, at sixty it is 60.

About the age of thirty-six the lean man generally becomes fatter, and the fat man leaner. The human brain is the twenty-eighth part of the human body; in the horse it is the four hundredth part.

The flea, grasshopper and locust, jump 200 times their own length, equal to a quarter of a mile for a man. A man is taller in the morning than at night, to the extent of half an inch, owing to the relaxation of the cartilages.

There is a man in Marshalltown, named J. K. Witherspoon, who is a great grandson of the Hon. John Witherspoon, of N. J., who signed the Declaration of Independence, and who has in his possession the gold watch used by John Hancock, President of the Congress during the deliberations of that body over the Declaration, and for which he has received $5,000, because each possessor thereof received the time-piece only on condition that it should never pass from the family.—Joc's Herald.

Henry Ward Beecher writes for the Ledger. In the opening of his novel he says: "Perhaps nowhere in the world can be found a more unlovely wickedness—a malignant bitter, tenacious hatred of god than in New England." Mr. Beecher has too little imagination for a novelist. There's not a particle of fancy in the above. It is just a bare truth—more like a sermon, and none at all like a novel.

General Magruder has gone into business at St. Louis. The Times of that city referring to the General, says: "Gen. Magruder, after eighteen months residence in Mexico, has come to the conclusion that Mexico is not the place in which to make an effort to establish what has been understood in this country as free government."

An exchange having stated the Emperor of Brazil visits the United States to study our institutions, the Louisville Democrat says: There are only fragments left. He was studying the pieces as Agassiz does fossils, to see what kind of a creature it was, not is. The Mechanics Institute of San Francisco has offered a premium of $2,000 for the best essay on the resources of the State, and the best means of developing them.

The French journals, more imaginative than those of England, see all sorts of phantoms in the transfer of Russian America to the United States. They imagine when Russia again engages in war against France and England for the Bosphorus, the United States are to furnish Russia with privates, and that if Russia succeeds, she is to present the United States with the Island of Cyprus, near the Coast of Syria.

POINTS OF A COWARD.—You are a coward if afraid to tell the truth when you should do so. You are a coward when you insult the weak. You are a coward if afraid to do right, if you shrink from defending your opinion, from maintaining that which you know to be just and good; and you are especially a coward if you know certain things of yourself and dare not own them to yourself.

Garden and Household.

THE EFFECTS OF TEA ON THE SKIN.—If you drop a few drops of strong tea upon a piece of iron—a knife blade for instance, the tannic acid of iron is formed, which is black. If you mix it with iron filings or pulverized iron, you can make a fair article of ink. If you mix it with fresh human blood, it forms with the iron of the blood the tannate of iron. Now when we remember that the liquids that enter the stomach are rapidly absorbed, and the veins and absorbents of the stomach, and enter the circulation, and are thrown out of the system by the skin, respiration and the kidneys, it is probable that a drink so common as tea, and so abundantly used, will have some effect. Can it be possible that tannin introduced with so much warm liquor, producing perspiration, will have no more effect upon the skin? Look at the tea drinkers of Russia, the Chinese, and the old women of America, who have so long continued the habit of drinking strong tea. Are they not dark colored and leather-skinned? When young they were fair complexioned.

SWEET CORN.—The following article has been handed us, with a special request to publish, and a guarantee to the soundness of the views advanced in it: It is a surprising fact that sweet corn is not abundantly grown in America. Every farmer thinks he can raise his five or ten acres of Indian corn every year, in order to have something to furnish his pork, and to furnish fodder for his stock, &c. Now, if every farmer would grow three or five acres of sweet corn, his crop would prove of much more value in proportion to the number of acres than Indian corn for feeding purposes. Last spring I planted six acres of sweet corn for the purpose of taking it into the market green. But after the market became "glutted," I concluded to save the balance of my corn and cure it to feed. I cut and fed to my boys corn (in the stalks) every day; and they would eat stalks and all as clean as the world green clover. Through the month of October and until the last of November, I fed husked corn. I can say I never killed so fat pork before. They seemed to be completely filled up withlard. I prefer the sweet corn stalks to anything else in the shape of fodder for stock, and especially for pigs giving milk there is nothing equal to it. The stalks, husks and leaves, are much more juicy and sweeter than any other corn-fodder. I would recommend those that sow corn for fodder, to sow the sweet corn in preference to any other. Be careful to trace up the seed in the fall, and then you will not fail to have good seed when you come to plant or sow. Geo. W. Carter, Mercer County, N. F.

GARDENERS OF THE CASE.—M. Conrad, of West Grove, Chester county, a practical agriculturist, who has devoted much attention to the growing of corn, and the manufacture of sorghum syrup, gives his plan of planting and cultivating as follows: Select, if you have it, a sandy soil with southern exposure. In general, good corn land makes good cane land—and is preferred. Plow deep as early as the ground is in order. At middle of May pulverize thoroughly, plant in drills north and south, four feet apart. Time may be gained by scalding and soaking the seeds until sprouts appear; cover lightly; thin out until to twelve inches in a row; when eighteen to twenty-four inches high cut out the suckers; cultivate as corn, allowing no weeds to grow. Two quarts of primo seed will plant an acre, which on good ground will yield 200 gallons of syrup and thirty-five bushels of seed. Cut when heads are cleverly turned brown.

THE PASSION FLOWER.—The annexed interpretation of this justly celebrated and much admired flower will be found interesting. The leaves resemble the spear that pierced our Saviour's side, the tendrils—coils that bound his hands, or the whips that scourged him; then petals—the Apostles, Judas having betrayed, and Peter deserted; the pillar in the centre—the cross or tree; the stamina—the hammer; the style—the nails; the inner circles around the centre pillar—the crown of thorns; the radiance—the glory; the white in the flower—the emblem of purity—and the blue the type of heaven. On one good ground, the passion-flower, even drops of blood are seen upon the crown of the tree. This flower continues three days open, and then disappears, denoting the resurrection.

A mixture of three parts fine charcoal, two parts in bone meal, and one part plaster (gypsum) applied in quantity of about two to four quarts to the roots of a tree or vine when planting, have been found to fully repay the cost in increased vigor and growth during the season.

BEST SUGAR.—Some 20,000 pounds of best sugar, manufactured at Channahon, in Livingston county, arrived in Springfield, Illinois lately, and will be sold in competition with southern sugars of the same grade. It is a superior article of coffee or "O" sugar. Almost 100,000 pounds have been manufactured at this point during the past season. There is every reason to expect that at a price fixed by no means distant the manufacture of this staple will become one of the leading branches of industry in Illinois.

THE BEST QUINCE.—The Country Gentleman says that the best variety of the quince is the Orange. The Angers quince affords good fruit, a little later than the Orange, the distance asunder may be about ten or twelve feet, which will be found near enough for full grown trees, on a deep, rich, and well treated soil. The quince needs judicious pruning by thinning out crooked, needless or crowded shoots, and leave a well distributed and symmetrical head, on a short single stem.

SORGO—HOW TO PLANT IT.—I notice, says a correspondent in the Rural America, that there is considerable said about sorghum, how to plant it, &c. I will give you my plan for preparing the seed for planting, which you may publish if you see fit. Putting what seed I wish to plant in a vessel, I pour on it boiling water enough to cover it, and let it remain twelve hours, or until the water becomes of the temperature of the atmosphere. I then fill half full of dirt an old pan, (no matter how many holes in the bottom,) and spreading a cloth over the dirt to keep the seed from mixing with it, I pour the seed, water and all, on the cloth. After spreading another cloth over the seed, I place over the top of the pan, and set the pan at the south side of the house. If it gets too dry, moisten by wetting the soil in three or four days the seed begins to sprout. Then I have my ground ready, and by the time some of it has grown an inch long I plant, covering with moist soil and pressing hard with the hoe, and in a few days the sorghum is up.

FLORENCE AND LOPEZ SEWING MACHINE COMPANY,
Florence, - Massachusetts,

CELEBRATED REVERSIBLE FEED SEWING MACHINES
Making Four Distinct Stitches.
I HILL a large number of Machines have been offered to the Public, some of which possess points of excellence and good workmanship, we have long felt that there have been experienced, the necessity of a Machine more perfect in its mechanical structure, combining in the highest degree, simplicity, neatness, and while requiring of doing a greater range of work, one that could be easily understood and comprehended by all.
To supply a Sewing Machine free from the objections attaching to others, has been no easy task. For we had not only to give it the simplicity of a Sewing Machine, but also to improve from time to time, by more recent experience. This we claim has been accomplished by the liberal expenditure of capital, and the patient, untiring labor of our inventors, and in presenting our Machine to the public, we are prepared to substantiate in every particular.
Regarding the Chain and Loop, or Knit stitch, we adopt the Lock Stitch, (falls on both sides of the fabric) which is regarded by the masses as best suited to all kinds of work. But to meet objections sometimes urged against this favorite stitch, we have added the Knit, Double Lock and Double Knit, either of which is stronger and more durable than the Lock; thus enabling the operator to select a stitch perfectly suited to every grade of fabric, and where necessary save some much stronger than it is possible to do so by any other Sewing Machine.
The FLORENCE makes four different stitches with as much ease as ordinary Machines make one, and with as little machinery.
The reverse repeated tests have been all we could desire, and from its first introduction the FLORENCE has gained a host of friends, and been regarded a household necessity; moving the public mind, and the machinery, simple, and durably combined in the FLORENCE Machine.
We claim for the FLORENCE the following advantages:
1. It makes four different stitches, Lock, Knit, Double Lock, and Double Knit, on one and the same Machine.
2. Every Machine has the reversible feed motion, which enables the operator, by simply turning a thumb screw, to stitch perfectly suited to the right or left, to stay any part of the seam, or to stay the ends of seams, without turning the fabric.
3. Changing the length of stitch, and from one kind of stitch to another, can readily be done while the Machine is in motion.
4. The needle is easily adjusted.
5. It is almost noiseless, and can be used where quiet is necessary.
6. Its motions are all positive; there are no springs to get out of order, and its simplicity enables the most inexperienced to operate it.
7. It does not require the user thread on the under than the upper side, and will sew across the heaviest canvas, without one to more thicknesses of cloth, without change of needle, or breaking thread.
8. The hammer is easily adjusted and will turn any width of hem desired.
9. Its motions will do so great a range of work as the FLORENCE.
10. It will sew, gather, felt, blind, braid, quilt, and gather and sew on a ruff at the same time.
11. The taking up of the slack thread is not performed by the irregular contraction of a wire coil or uncertain operation of a lever. The periodical and accurate winding will which the FLORENCE draws the thread into the cloth, is supported in any Sewing Machine hitherto offered in the market.
12. It will sew with "Burrans's Self Sewer," which guides the work itself, and is of inimitable value, especially to inexperienced operators.
13. It is fully protected and licensed by Elias Howe, Jr., and his associates, and our own Letters Patent.
14. While possessing the above and many other advantages, we have the public mind, and a careful examination will fully substantiate all that we have claimed for it, and justify the statement we now make, that it is the best Sewing Machine in the world.
15. A warrant upon Machines to be all that we claim for it, and will give a written warranty.
