THE SNOW.

[At the request of many of our lady readers, says the New York News, we republish this beautiful poetic waltz. Since the publication of "The Bridge of Sighs," by Hood, we have seen nothing equal to it in point of smooth versification, flowing rhythm, and touching pathos. The plaintive wail of woman's lost honor will bring tears to every sensitive breast. The author and subject of the piece are said to be from the city.]

Oh! the snow, the beautiful snow,
Filling the sky and earth below;
Scattered like dew drops over the street,
Over the heads of the people you meet.

Flirting,
Skimming along
Beautiful snow! it can do no wrong,
Flying to kiss a fair lady's cheek,
Clinging to lips in a frolicsome freak,
Beautiful snow from the heaven above,
Pure as an angel, gentle as love.

Oh! the snow, the beautiful snow,
How the fakes gather and laugh as they go,
Whirling about in the maddening fun,
It plays in its glee with every one.

Chasing,
Laughing,
Hurrying by;
It lights on the face and it sparkles the eye;
And even the dogs, with a bark and a bound,
Snug at the crystal that eddy around;
The town is alive, and its heart is a glow,
To welcome the coming of beautiful snow.

How wild the crowd goes swaying along,
Hailing each other with humor and song;
How the gay sleighs, like meteors, flash by,
Bright for a moment, then lost to the eye.

Swirling,
Doubting they go,
Over the crust of the beautiful snow,
None so pure when it falls from the sky,
To be trod in mud by the crowd rushing by,
To be trampled and trodden by the thousands of feet,
Till it blends with the filth in the horrible street.

How I was pure as the snow—but I fell!
Fell like the snow flakes from heaven to hell;
Fell to be trod as filth on the street;
Fell to be trampled, to be spit on and beat.

Feeling,
Crying,
Dreading to die,
Selling my soul to whoever would buy;
Beating in shame for a morsel of bread,
Hating the living and fearing the dead;
Merciful God! have I fallen so low?
And yet I was once like the beautiful snow.

Once I was fair as the beautiful snow,
Fell like the snow flakes from heaven to hell;
Once I was loved for my innocent grace—
Flattered and sought for the charms of my face!

Father,
Mother,
Sisters, all,
God, and myself, I have lost by my fall;
The worst wretch that ever chattered by,
Will take a wife away, but I wander too high;
For all that is on or about, I know,
There is nothing so pure as the beautiful snow.

How strange it should be that this beautiful snow
Should fall on a sinner with no where to go!
How strange it should be, when night comes again,
Of the snow and the ice that struck my desperate brain.

Fading,
Freezing,
Dying alone,
Too wretched to pray, too weak for a moan
To be heard in the streets of the crazy town,
To go mad in the joy of the snow coming down,
To lie, and so die in my terrible woe,
With a bed and a shroud of the beautiful snow.

The Next Legislature.

The following is the list of legislators elected at the last election, for the House and Council, according to returns received at the Secretary's office. The Copperheads are marked with a *.

COUNCIL.

Island, Snohomish, and Whatcom—E. C. Ferguson.
Jefferson and Clallam—J. J. Vanhookelin.
King and Kitsap—A. S. Mercer.
Pierce and Mason—Frank Clark.

GEN. GRANT AT HOME.

[CORRESPONDENCE OF THE N. Y. TRIBUNE.]

About fifteen years ago General Grant's father established a leather house here, under the firm of Collins & Co. The leather was tanned at Covington, Kentucky, and sent hither. The firm did well, and it is understood made a fortune. The firm was dissolved and a son came on to conduct the business, but in about two years he died of consumption. He was liked, and was an excellent business man.

Meanwhile, Ulysses Grant, having graduated at West Point, went into the Mexican war, where he greatly distinguished himself in every battle, but one when he was not present, that was fought; thence he went to Oregon and acted as Captain in the Quartermaster's department. Eleven years since he resigned his commission and went to St. Louis, where he had some interest in a piece of land, and I was told he engaged in hauling wood to market, himself driving his own oxen.

On the death of his mother, his father engaged him to come hither and take charge of the store. Now I come to mention things never before related. I have to tell a hard story. Statements previously made about General Grant will be blown away. Many a young man on reading what follows will be encouraged. I gather my accounts from the most trustworthy sources.

Captain Grant, as he was called, found the affairs of the concern in great disorder, but he went to work, and in three weeks had everything straight. There was one clerk besides himself, and generally more or less hired men. As this was the only establishment of the kind in the place, the trade of which is large, there was much business to do. Captain Grant was not remarkable as a salesman, but he was good to observe and manage. Generally, he bought the hides as they were brought to the store in country wagons. He took them in himself. That he might not dirty his clothes, he had a short leather apron which he always wore. Those not acquainted with him took him for the porter. In this way here in the city of Galena, he toiled on for two long years. He was employed at $40 a month. The intention on the part of his father was, after a while, to establish him in the business, but he was expected to live on $480 a year. To do this and live in society is impossible. Everything must be cheap and plain. Sometimes his wife had a hired girl, but usually she did her own work.

During these two years Captain Grant made very few acquaintances. There were plenty of business men on the street who did not know him, and who never heard his name spoken. I presume it would be easy to number his associates on one's fingers. I have heard business men say they never heard of him till he was put in command at Cairo. On his arrival here to day a vast majority of the citizens of Galena are able to recognize him only by his portraits, and yet this is the only home he has.

A few knew him intimately. Among these was H. H. Houghton, editor of the Galena Gazette for over thirty years. Houghton learned most of the Captain from his father, and came to admire and respect him; in fact he had studied him. E. B. Washburn partly knew him and became one of his firmest friends.

Those two years were years of trial and discouragement. He was drawing beyond his expenses, though this was not ascertained till the end of the year. He could not live on $40 a month. Although somewhat disheartened, he would not give up, but with indomitable energy and perseverance pressed on. He seldom went abroad. A few near neighbors were all he visited; here he would sit and smoke his pipe. His conversation was varied, but he liked to talk on the Mexican war. Most of the time he was a man of silence. Washburn tells me that he seemed to be thinking on some abstract subject, and that he took him to be a thoughtful, reflective, and large minded man. Such being his condition one is reminded of the case of Frederick the Great, during the years he was harassed by his father. But in whatever makes a man, Grant, the American Hero, far excels. I will here say that he was always temperate and every way correct in his behavior.

A month or so before the Fort Sumter outrage, and afterwards, Capt. Grant was uneasy. He walked through the streets, and to and fro in the store, saying nothing, and apparently in a troubled state of mind. About those days the Douglas Guard was organized in the city to counteract the Lincoln Wide Awakes, and Capt. Grant, as a military man, was appointed Orderly Sergeant. Hereafter was that a Captain in the United States Infantry was not the one to take such a position. He did not go near them. He meddled so little with politics that it is to this day unknown whether he voted for Lincoln or Douglas.

At last war came, a war meeting was held, and Captain Grant was appointed chairman. Then he went to Washburn and said that he had been educated at West Point, at the expense of the Government; he had resigned, expecting never to serve again, but he now offered his services for what they were worth. A company was raised in the town, and under his direction it was equipped and sent to Cairo.

Galena is in the northwestern part of the State. Sometimes the wants of this corner are disregarded. At Springfield there is a ring of politicians who are anxious to provide for their set. It is difficult to do anything with them. Washburn urged Capt. Grant to go down and offer his services. He would help him all he could. The Captain went down and after some delay he was set to work drawing up and copying papers. After a while he told them that they could get somebody to do such work as well as he for a dollar a day. It was not in his line to be kept in a corner at a desk, seeing nobody and doing so little. He was met coldly; nobody knew him, nobody cared for him. Other persons then took an interest in him, among them Houghton and McClellan, President of the bank here. The latter in particular pressed the Captain's claims.

Then he was appointed an Aid to Governor Yates, and directed to hunt up the State arms. He found about fifteen hundred rusty muskets. He also mustered in men. Still, so many were his discouragements and so coldly was he looked upon that he told his friends he was not wanted and that he had better go home.

The importance of hiring a man of military knowledge was urged upon the Governor. It was proposed that he should be the Colonel of the 21st regiment, but another got it.

About this time Capt. Grant went to Ohio to see his father, when Gov. Dennison was urged to give him an appointment. The prospect here was good. Then he came back to Illinois. By this time the 21st regiment had become demoralized. The men talked of putting the Colonel in the guard house. Capt. Grant was sent to them; by the help of Logan the men were quieted, and then our Captain was appointed their Colonel. The regiment turned out to be one of the best in the State.

Then Col. Grant came back to Galena to get his clothes—yes, to get his clothes. He had to have a uniform. To get it money was borrowed, and security given for the amount. The American people can afford to read this now. Then he went back. On taking his men he had them march, saying they would learn four times as fast. He went to Missouri and was under Fremont.

Meanwhile his friends, like Cromwell's little daughter's, were "indeed very few." Houghton, editor of the Gazette, on the 31st of May, 1861, describes Col. Grant as the soul of honor, and no man breathes who has a more patriotic heart, and "our new soldiers need the leadership of a rare man like Captain Grant." June 23d a notice is published stating that Capt. Grant has accepted the Colonelcy of the 7th District regiment. July 31st states that Colonel Grant is to be promoted to a Brigadiership, and congratulates the service on the event. December 23d is an editorial estimating the character of Gen. Grant, and in particular it mentions his modesty, frankness, sagacity, and strategy. I take these things from the files of the paper myself.

THE LESSON.

To earnest young men, this history of Gen. Grant will be a lesson for all time. It teaches that in waiting there are exceeding great rewards. If need be one must wait his whole life and expect the time of opportunity in the next world. To learn to wait is the highest wisdom. Diseases of every name, crimes of every character, and infamy and shame are the fate of those who will not learn to wait.

HOME, SWEET HOME.

All business is suspended in the city of Galena, as Gen. Grant returns to the only home he has. Flags float everywhere. Across Main street, from the corner of the De Soto Hotel, from the different windows of which float 180 flags, stretches a beautiful triumphal arch. On one side, reaching across the top, are the words:

"WELCOME TO OUR CITIZEN."

Weldon Railroad, Fair Oaks,
Wilderness, Petersburg,
Richmond, Vicksburg,
On the other side:

"Hail to the chief who in triumph advances,
Belmont, Lookout Mountain,
Donelson, Chattanooga,
Shiloh, Vicksburg,
Corinth, Appomattox C. H."

The whole decorated with flags, streamers, and evergreens in the most beautiful manner. This arch is but a few doors from the store where the General used to sell leather.

A GIFT.

On a hill, about an eighth of a mile from the town, and overlooking the river and a vast country, including most of the town, is a beautiful residence which the citizens have purchased for the General. The house is on an acre of ground, the highest and most slightly around the city. The loyal citizens did not wait for a Copperhead city government to build sidewalks, but built themselves from the depot to the house, which cost $11,500 and the furniture $4,500 purchased by a few of the friends and neighbors of the Lieutenant General.

It was conducted through the whole house. Nothing was lacking. The beds are ready and made up, the hired help is on hand; they even had the stove heated, and all things are ready. The view from the house is most beautiful, and from different windows differs. From one is a scene of woods and shrubbery; from another the river between the hills, quite similar to a Hudson river scene; from another is the town and the heights beyond, where the General used to live in a rented house, on $480 a year; from another are the heights beyond the Mississippi, in Iowa, distant seven or eight miles in a straight line. The place being new there are no shade trees, but it is thought there will be time to make shade by the time the General needs them.

THE WELCOME HOME.

This morning I went out to Rockford with the delegation which was to meet the General. On arriving we waited a short time, when the train came. There was a large gathering, and a stand tastefully built and ornamented with beautiful flowers. Washburn presented the delegation, and there was a cordial shaking of hands. I cannot help remarking that one of this body had been a business man on the street near where the General had been a clerk, and yet he did not recollect of having ever seen him. After a short pause, in which Washburn made a spirited address and the General one or two or three line speeches, when the train started. It consisted of four sumptuous passenger cars. I believe it is called a saloon car; there are no common seats; instead are sofas and easy chairs. A centre table was covered with flowers.

Refreshments, consisting of divers cold dishes, cakes, fruits and ices, were handed around in great profusion. In the forward car were choice wines and cigars. It was a rare honor the President, Vice President, and General Superintendents of most of the railroads coming into Chicago were aboard.

Everywhere on the road the people came out till near Galena. The city was reached at three o'clock p. m. The approaches to the station were thronged with people. Cannons roared, bands played, and the crowds cheered. Carriages were ready, and a procession was formed. After a short march the stand was reached, and Washburn welcomed General Grant home. On first coming to the stand, General Grant acknowledged the cheers by bowing and giving a pleasant and modest smile. At the conclusion he spoke a few words, simply thanking the people, as on other occasions. It was expected he would make a speech here, at least. The Rev. J. H. Vincent, of Chicago, spoke for him in a few eloquent words.

After this General Grant and his family were driven to the new house on the hill. As they were about to enter, the bells in the churches on the hills and in the valleys began joyfully to ring. To General Grant this ringing properly is the end of the war and a rejoicing for peace.

To this stage of the hero's life history do not furnish an example of any other man who has been so successful in a righteous cause. Ring on, bells! you open the dawn of a new day for the laboring man!

General Grant is still a thoughtful man. When he speaks he holds down his head and thinks. Some say he has not forgotten Mexico. It is too soon to estimate his character; indeed, very little is known. In a wide brimmed cavalry hat, and in clothes a little too large, and with a silent tongue, one knows not what to say. My impression is that he will prove to be as much beloved as Washington.

The Colfax Party—From Portland to the Dalles.

[Editorial Correspondence of the Chicago Tribune.]

PORTLAND, Oreg., Saturday July 22d, 1865.
Mr. Colfax and his party have just returned from a most instructive and delightful trip up the Columbia River. Fully aware that the magnificent scenery of the Cascade Mountains must be seen to be appreciated, yet the extent of the improvements and magnitude of the commerce to accommodate which they were made may be understood by the facts we propose to give. Nothing in all our long journey has surprised us more than what we have seen for the past few days.

THE SCENERY, &c.

The ride down the Willamette from Portland twelve miles, and for the first twenty miles up, the Columbia presents nothing striking beyond densely wooded shores. The Columbia is a river deep, broad, and magnificent, gathering its waters from thousands of miles along the western slopes of the Rocky Mountains—one of the three great Rivers of the continent. It cuts its way directly through the Sierra Nevada Mountains, and one of the first noticeable things as we get among the foot hills is the fact that wherever the trees grow out upon their sides, the limbs are all upon one side, and the trees themselves are bent in the same direction. The reason of this is, that during the winter the cold winds from the vast plains on the upper Columbia sweep through the gorge made by the river, with tremendous power. Boats whose engines are not very powerful, are often forced to lay by several days, at the foot of the mountains, by these winds. The direction of these winds varies with the season.

The first object of interest, ascending the river, bears the rather poetic name of "Rooster Rock," probably from its supposed resemblance to the spur of that bird. It is a perpendicular cliff, said to be four hundred feet high, and rises directly out of the water, on the South side of the river. Three miles above, on the north bank, is "Cape Horn," a perpendicular wall of basalt, several hundred feet high, along the base of which the river sweeps in solemn grandeur, while looking east, up the immense gorge, the mountains on either side lie piled one upon the other, till the eye wearies and the head becomes dizzy and bewildered with gazing. On the south side, leaping from the battling cliffs, are several beautiful mountain streams, one of which has a perpendicular fall of nearly four hundred feet. Before it reaches the basin below it is scattered in thick mist, soon to be gathered up to make another fearful plunge before it quietly mingles its waters with the Columbia. From Cape Horn to the Cascades the mountains are more weird and wall-like, higher and more sublime than the highlands of the Hudson; and, as we have now looked upon what may be regarded as the most wonderful scenery upon the American continent, east and west, we say frankly to the tourist, that here can be found the grandest scenes it has been our good fortune to behold.

Just before reaching the Cascades, Castle Rock, covering at the base only a few acres, towers up seven hundred feet high, upon the North shore, and standing out some distance from the mountains, forms a marked object of interest. And here we are at the Cascades, where the river falls forty-two feet in a distance of five miles. In fact, the whole fall is made within a mile or two, but the railway to the smooth water above is five miles long. Yes, reader, we found right here on the north bank of the Columbia, in Washington Territory, five miles of good railway—thanks to the Oregon S. Nav. Company, as there are anywhere in the country, and a locomotive all the way from Patterson, New Jersey, to take us onward at railroad speed. Both tradition and some show of facts go to prove that in bygone ages the Cascades were located probably half way up to the Dalles. The Indians say that formerly the river here ran under a natural bridge, and in a terrible battle of the mountains, probably an eruption of Mount Hood, this bridge fell down, dammed the water back, and thus submerged the immense trees, the stumps of which are standing perpendicularly in great numbers in the river above the Cascades far out from the shore, where the water is thirty to forty feet deep. This submerged forest, described by Fremont and all the early explorers of the Columbia, certainly grew where it now stands, and whether the Indian tradition be true or not, it must have found its present position by some great convulsion of nature. J. W. Brzee, Esq., the engineer of the railway, from whom we received this story, assures us that many indications, on both sides of the river, give it a very considerable degree of credibility. At the head of the cascades we found another fine steamer in waiting to convey us fifty miles up to the Dalles.

The admirers of mountain scenery will be constantly on the deck, admiring that ever varying battlements of basalt which shoot up several thousand feet high on either side. To gaze on them was really a perpetual feast to all eyes. At the foot of the rapids there is a smart, enterprising little city called Dalles—all towns are called cities here—named doubtless from the falls above. There are some forty stores with the usual number of mechanics and machine shops, in a town of two thousand inhabitants. Here we found several Chicago men, and of course, Mr. Colfax and "his party," were treated with the greatest courtesy and kindness. The usual speeches were exacted and made, and then away we went over fifteen miles of capital railway along the south bank of the river to Celilo, at the head of the rapids. The river at the Dalles has cut its narrow channel, at the ordinary stage of water, deep down into the hard basaltic rocks through which it rumbles and boils with fearful power, falling nearly the whole of the eighty-five feet it makes in fifteen miles at the head of a small stream near the shore, formed by nature or made by the hand of man, filling the gorge in some places a hundred feet above low water mark. That must be a sight fearfully sublime, and one well worth crossing the continent to see. At present there are along the shore, at various points, clumps of butts, where for the time the Indians burrow while catching their yearly supply of salmon, as their fathers doubtless have done for thousands of years before them. The numbers caught must have been immense, as the nauseous effluvia from perhaps an acre of heads and other offal abundantly testified. Most of the Indians have gone back to their summer haunts, but enough linger behind to show us how the salmon are caught, and as well to make their oily presence conspicuously visible. The lumber stands at the head of a small stream near the shore, formed by nature or made by the hand of man, filling the gorge in some places a hundred feet above low water mark. Most of the Indians have gone back to their summer haunts, but enough linger behind to show us how the salmon are caught, and as well to make their oily presence conspicuously visible.

The inferior of Shasta in height, more severely regular in form, no wonder the people of Oregon are proud of Mount Hood. Statements differ considerably as to how high it really is, but between seventeen and eighteen thousand feet is a substantial within the mark. It can be seen from an east of Oregon; but the smoky atmosphere had previously hid this magnificent mountain from our view.

COMMERCE OF THE COLUMBIA.

Most of the readers of the Tribune have probably heretofore supposed that the Columbia, especially above the Dalles, was navigable by Indian canoes and possibly flat boats. This letter has already corrected that error; and now to the cases which within the last five years have placed a daily line of large steamers on the river between Portland and the Dalles, with a break of five miles by railway around the rapids at the Cascades, and a tri-weekly line to Lewiston on Snake river at the mouth of the Clear Water, 375 miles above the Dalles, making a continuous line 500 miles above the mouth of the river, and nearly 400 above Portland. The large discoveries of gold at the Boise, and other districts, and silver at the Oryhee, explain why this long line of transit for trade and travel by rail and steamer has been so rapidly perfected. Yesterday we saw ninety thousand dollars in gold dust, a single day's shipment, and we there that about a million per month is received by this route. A large amount of mining machinery has been taken up during the past few months to the Oryhee silver mining district, and when, a few months hence, it is fully in operation, it is believed that silver bullion will be received literally by the ton, as is now the case at San Francisco from the Washoe mines. We tried our strength yesterday, in lifting one of the packages of the shining dust above mentioned, and though equal to the task, found it by no means an easy one. And yet there were several others of the same size, enough, we should suppose, to load down a wheelbarrow, if not an express wagon. Think of that, ye lovers of the specie basis, and take courage.

The Snake river is not navigable for a considerable distance above Lewiston and for the purposes of portage it is better to leave the Oryhee at Wallula, not far from where it enters the Columbia, and thence to the mouth of Powder river is about one hundred and fifty miles, which must be passed by stage or team. A very good road is about completed over a new and very low pass through the Blue Mountains, over which the stage will run by the time this letter is published. At the mouth of Powder river the Oregon Steam Navigation Company are building a new steamer which will be ready in a few months to run up the Snake river navigable above for a long distance, in a point within thirty miles of the Boise and Oryhee rivers. These three hundred miles to the head of Great Salt Lake; so that if a steamer were put on that magnificent island on there would be only some four hundred miles of staging between Great Salt Lake City and the ocean. The whole line—with the exception, perhaps, of the steamer on Great Salt Lake, about which we heard nothing while there—will be in full operation early next spring. All the rest of the distance to the Pacific Ocean will be made by steamer on and along the Columbia. When the Pacific Railway reaches Salt Lake, only four hundred miles more will be necessary to connect it with the navigable waters of the great western artery of the continent. That this connection will be made by the time or soon after the railway reaches Salt Lake, there cannot be a particle of doubt. Let us admonish the capitalists of New York, Chicago, and other Eastern cities, that if they want to change the direction of the tons of solid silver and the millions of gold that now go to the Pacific side, eastward, and thus obtain the commerce of whose extent and value they can form a very poor estimate, they ought to place the Pacific Railway as fast as men and money can do it.

Beside the trade of the Snake river, the Oregon Steam Navigation Company will put a boat on the Lewis or upper Columbia river proper early in the spring, to run on that river from a hundred and fifty to two hundred miles above the forty-ninth parallel in British Columbia. The country in that region is said to be rich in the precious metals, and withal fine for agricultural purposes.

Our readers may rest assured that the vast country drained by the Columbia is being settled and improved with a rapidity that is amazing. The mineral resources of Idaho are just beginning to be developed, and though people should not rush there in an avalanche, a large, healthy, and rapid development of her mines will surely be made, and add largely to the permanent wealth and prosperity of the Republic.

Gold is also found in paying quantities on both sides of the Cascades in Oregon, and it only needs the capital and labor to develop it in almost illimitable quantities. A new district has just been discovered directly east of Salem, which promises as well as almost any mineral region on its first discovery. The fact is, it is well that our party are hurrying rapidly from place to place and are constantly seeing new sights and new wonders, or they might get that disease very common on "this coast" called "mineral on the brain." But, soberly, we venture the opinion that vast as have been the amounts of the precious metals yearly added to the wealth of the nation from the States west of the eastern range of the Rocky Mountains, immensely greater results will be realized in the next quarter of a century, with improved machinery and new processes of separating all the gold and silver from the base metals, and when an abundant supply of cheap labor can be obtained. No one can see what our party have seen without being perfectly satisfied that the mineral resources of the Republic are absolutely exhausted. Adopting the sentiment of the lamented Lincoln, "It is conceded that America is the granary of the world, and it will soon be proved that she holds the treasury as well."

But here we are nicely encased in the Lincoln House, at Portland, under the kind care of Gen. C. M. and after a "Sabbath day's rest," are off for a trip through Washington Territory and Puget's Sound.

ADVISE TO YOUNG PEOPLE.—Keep good company or none. Never be idle. If your hands cannot be employed, attend to the cultivation of your mind. Always speak the truth. Make few promises. Live up to your engagements. Keep your own secrets, if you have any. When you speak to a person, look him in the face. Good company and good conversation are the very signs of virtue. Good character is above anything else. Your character cannot be essentially injured except by your own acts. If any one speaks evil of you, let your life be so that no one will believe them.

SHEEP AND WOOL RAISING.

One of the main objects of the weekly journal should be to assist in developing the industrial interests of the country. Indeed, a great part of politics and legislation ought to have the same design.

Such were our thoughts and such our object when we took up the editorial pen. In pursuance of it we desire to call the attention of the farmers of this county and territory to a very important, and, withal, very profitable branch of industry, viz: the raising of sheep and wool.

These are general facts relating to the whole United States, but they have a stronger application to the people of this coast than to any other part of the country. With a milder average climate, our clothing is more exclusively woven here than in the Atlantic States.

At the present time the greater part of all we use is imported by us, and what makes it yet more exhaustive to our financial prosperity is the fact that we import it almost entirely in the shape of ready-made clothing.

At the present time the greater part of all we use is imported by us, and what makes it yet more exhaustive to our financial prosperity is the fact that we import it almost entirely in the shape of ready-made clothing.

Another reason for the farmers of our country entering more largely into the sheep husbandry is the fact that they thus keep the wealth of the land on the land, instead of taking it off and setting it in the market.

But a great question with our readers will be that of a market. Can we sell our wool? We answer, yes, certainly. There are two things necessary to ensure a remunerative market for any of the great staples.

The second necessity is quality. We can most undoubtedly grow as good wool here as in any part of the United States. It is true the reputation of that produced here has suffered somewhat in the Eastern markets by the dishonesty of the California dealers.

Another important matter, connected with this whole question, is the erection and running of factories. We want enough to work up all our wool. If they were multiplied greatly within the State of Oregon and Territory of Washington to-day, it would be all the better for the wool market.

On Monday of the present week our biennial election for city officers occurred. Several things united to make that election an eventful one in our history.

An effort was made to keep all political questions and influences out of the canvass, and in pursuance of that effort a "slate" was made up by some ten or eleven men in a caucus, which, if not private, certainly was not public.

The officers elected, are A. G. Tripp, Mayor; J. F. Smith, Recorder; Wm. Goldbeck, Marshal; W. C. Hazard, Treasurer; J. E. C. Durgan, Assessor; G. W. Durgan, J. Brant, John Eddings, Wm. Ranck, J. M. Fletcher, B. F. Preston and S. R. Whipple, Councilmen.

Many of the volunteers from this coast have recently been discharged from the service of the United States, and it is probable that the remainder soon will be. The most of these men were from the sober, industrious portion of our population, and entered the service from a conviction of duty.

While speaking of such lucky accidents, we are reminded of an unlucky one. A gentleman of this city three years ago, took up claims near Canyon City, at a place where, at the time, no water could be had.

Three honest miners, near Ruby City, recently discovered a hole of gold and silver bearing quartz, and in three weeks took out $200,000 worth of rock.

Another reason for the farmers of our country entering more largely into the sheep husbandry is the fact that they thus keep the wealth of the land on the land, instead of taking it off and setting it in the market.

NOTES AND GATHERINGS.

An effort is being made in Portland and elsewhere to raise the means to open a good road to the mines of Montana. Several liberal subscriptions have been made, but there is yet wanting a considerable amount to complete the object.

The Colfax party, having completed one of the most extended tours ever undertaken by any of our public men on our own soil, left San Francisco September 2d, and arrived at home late in the month.

The friends of Lieut. Gov. Cross will be glad to learn of his safe return from his extended trip in California's party through the great interior of the continent, and on the Pacific coast.

The people of Scio have a new way of advancing temperance principles in that place. For many years a set of irresponsible vagabonds have kept a "dendfall" there, but the people got largely disgusted, bought the stock of liquors on hand, and poured them into the street.

Gov. Pickering, who has been absent from the territory since January, arrived on the last steamer, and immediately left for Olympia via Victoria on the steamer Activa.

The Daily Oregonian of the 7th says that a man has moved to Portland "to settle and become a permanent resident." What renders that a fit subject to chronicle is that the man is "soil."

The bold robbery of the Idaho stage a few weeks ago will be remembered by our readers. On the 31st of October, one, and it was supposed the leader, of the gang who perpetrated the outrage, met a terrible death at Walla Walla.

Mr. Thomas Boggs, one of the oldest residents of Lin county, Oregon, came to his death one day last week by taking from 40 to 60 grains of opium.

EASTERN NEWS.

New Orleans, Oct. 24.—In reply to a communication from Gov. Wells, in regard to a threatened negro insurrection in North Louisiana, Gen. Canby says he will order an additional force to Shreveport, and that arrangements have already been made to disabuse the negroes of any wrong impressions imposed upon them.

New York, Oct. 26.—The steamship New York from Aspinwall has arrived.

This morning in the United States Circuit Court, before Judge Nelson, Daniel S. Dickenson, United States District Attorney, moved that Henry S. Foote, ex-member of the defendant Confederate Congress be admitted to the bar as a counselor of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Washington, Oct. 26.—The Secretary of the Treasury to-day published the following to the Assistant-Treasurer in New York: The subscription for fifty millions of five-twentyies being fully the Assistant Treasurers and National Banks will receive no further subscription after this telegram comes to their notice.

New York, Oct. 27.—The Herald's Washington special says it is now positively known here that the trial of Jefferson Davis is decided upon. The trial will be for treason, and will take place either in this city or Richmond.

Milledgeville, Oct. 26.—In the convention to-day a resolution was introduced to appoint a committee of five to memorialize the President for the release of Jeff. Davis. An amendment was offered to include all Confederate prisoners. It was adopted by a heavy majority.

The Central Bank Note Company of this city, have finished the engraving of the bonds of the Irish Republic authorized to be issued by the Fenian Congress recently in session in Philadelphia. Specimen copies have been shown.

Columbia, S. C. Oct. 26.—Governor Perry's Message was read before the Legislature to-day. He says that though his appointment was made several months after the other provisional Governors, South Carolina is now as far advanced in reconstruction as any other State.

PERSONAL.—REV. J. H. WILBUR, U. S. Indian Agent at Ft. Simcoe W. T., called on us a few days ago. He was on his way to Suavie's Island and other points in this vicinity, gathering up for the purpose of taking with him to the Reservation, such of the wandering children of the wilderness as are entitled to and need his care.

RETURNED.—We forgot to say in a former issue, that we were glad to recognize again our streets, the familiar face of our former townsman Capt. Kelly. Capt. K. has lately returned to Vancouver after an absence of three years at Fort Klammath, where he has been stationed in command of the Post.

THE STATE RIGHTS DEMOCRAT, in a long leader on "party matters," after assigning many reasons why the Democracy should not accept President Johnson as a leader, says:

WE think enough has been presented to convince Democrats that Mr. Johnson's "policy," since his elevation to the Presidency, is repugnant to the Democratic faith and usage, so antagonistic to and destructive of the Constitution, as to preclude them from greeting him as a returned prodigal, or accepting of him as a standard bearer to whose support they are justified in rallying.

ABOUT here the Democracy are determined to capture the President anyhow, and make him a leader whether he will or not. Now we have a slight suspicion that Mr. Johnson has no desire to lead that party, at least not where they wish to go.

Washington, Nov. 3.—The following dispatch from the President to the Governor of Georgia, has been published:

In answer to the article headed "Secret Canvasses," I would state the meeting was held in the cradle of the so called Union party, where a Lewis River man stood god-father, and gave names. That alone should give it publicity.

Now in what manner has the Lewis River man offended one of the people? The facts are these: Some two years ago, I was on a visit to this place, and in the evening I was asked into a room in an "out of the way place," among piles of lumber, to assist in carrying out a city election, and so prevent the city Charter from being broken, as they could not arouse sufficient citizens to perform their duty.

Witness the case of Lord Morpith, versus a shoemaker, in Yorkshire, about 1844, where probably 50,000 assembled and heard the noble by birth, and the other by worth, the people decided for the shoemaker. Lord Morpith skedaddled to America.

As regards the people of England being opposed to the institutions of America, that is not so, as a nation, they approve of them, and more come here and adopt them, 'tis true there are some exceptions there, and here, for instance, some say in this quarter that they were formed in hell and leagued with the devil.

As regards the author of that charge, if he did not know of the truth of that statement, he ought not to have written it if he did know, although he gives no name, the people sometime gives names, as when a murder has been committed in the dark we call the perpetrator a midnight assassin, so with the slanderer as with the snail, we know by the slime that he has been here.

I would suggest as there has been five or six "canvasses" that the numbers and proceedings be published. I believe they met and parted without regret, unless it was, they are sorry they ever met.

Large Apples. Editors Register: The Oregonian of Nov. 1st acknowledges the receipt of three apples, the aggregate weight of which was 4 1/2 pounds—the largest weighing 1 1/2 pounds. That's all well enough, but the Oregonian challenges competition and intimates that that is the best that can be shown in the apple line.

Mr. J. Wilson, 127 Front Street, Portland, is still able to accommodate all who may give him a call. See advertisement, and then stop and satisfy yourselves, the first time you visit the metropolis of the "webfeet," that at his store is the best place to buy dry goods and clothing in Portland.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.—We are indebted to Dr. Tenbroeck for files of Pennsylvania papers. Also to W. B. Royal, of Portland, for sending us several numbers of the Chicago Tribune.

MARRIED: At Salem, October 31st, by Rev. N. Downe, H. W. Scott, editor of the Oregonian, and Miss E. A. Nicklin.

Nov. 10th, 1865.—26.

NOTICE.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that, in pursuance of an order of the Probate Court of Clark County, made on the 8th day of November, 1865, upon the final account of Wm. S. Hattan, Administrator of the estate of J. H. Hattan, deceased, said account having been approved and settled, and it appearing from the report of said Administrator that there is certain real estate in common, and undivided, belonging to said estate, and that there are heirs entitled thereto—it is ordered that Wm. H. Dillon, George Touley, and Mathias Spurgin—three disinterested persons—be and are hereby appointed Commissioners to divide said real estate among the persons who are by law entitled thereto; and that said Commissioners make due report of their action herein at the next regular term of said Probate Court, at which time the Court will proceed to distribute the same; and all persons interested may then appear and make objections thereto.

Dated Vancouver, Nov. 8th, 1865.
By order of said Court,

THE GERMS OF THE BEAUTIFUL.

center the germs of the beautiful. By the waste of them fall. That the rose may spring by the garden gate.

Scatter the germs of the beautiful In the holy shrine of home; Let the pure, and the fair, and the graceful there.

Scatter the germs of the beautiful In the temple of our God— The God who star'd in the uplifted sky.

Scatter the germs of the beautiful In the depths of the human soul; They shall bloom, and blossom, and bear the fruit.
