PILES! PILES! PILES!

A Sure Cure Found at Last!

NO ONE NEED SUFFER!

A sure cure for Blind, Bleeding, Itching and Ulcerated Piles has been discovered by Dr. Williams, (an Indian remedy) called Dr. Williams' Indian Ointment. A single box cures the most chronic cases of 25 or 30 years standing. No one need suffer five minutes after applying this wonderful soothing medicine. Lotions, instruments and electricity do more harm than good. Williams' Ointment, (bearing the name), always acts after getting warm in bed, acts as a poultice gives instant and painless relief, and is prepared only for piles, itching of the private parts, and for no other use. Read what the Hon. J. M. Colburn of Cleveland says about Dr. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment: "I have used scores of Pile cures, and it affords me pleasure to say that I have never found anything which gave such immediate and permanent relief as Dr. Williams' Indian Ointment."

The Baby's Autograph.

They gave it to me at Christmas—the pretty new autograph album—and I was very proud of it; the binding was so gay, and the white, gilt-edged sheets so spotlessly pure. I could hardly make up my mind who should have the honor of dictating that album or what verse was grand enough to be inscribed on its pages, and before I had quite decided I found it! She had toddled into the parlor and taken it down from the table before we missed her and was sitting cross-legged like a Turk with the precious book in her lap. That would not have been worth recording, and I should not value my album beyond price now if it were all! But she had a pencil—her dear little hand held a pencil—she had made her mark on the front leaf (the title page) of my beautiful book. She had made a dozen marks, cross-eras-cross-eras, and there she sat, her bright hair tossed over her face, her little demure mouth pursed up, her blue eyes full of mischief, half-sly, half-defiant and we three women looking at her.

"Oh, you naughty, naughty baby!" I cried; "you've just ruined my new album, you had little thing!"

"Bliss her dear little heart," said my mother; "doesn't she make a picture?"

"Whip her," said Aunt Harriet, in a vindictive tone. She has no children of her own and knows just how to bring up other people's.

I was angry enough to do it, and had made one step forward to wrest the book out of the clapping baby hands, and then—what! best my own child? I was saved that degradation by my own good mother, who snook her head at me over Aunt Harriet's shoulder.

How long is it since Christmas? Counting by heart-throbs, I should say years! It is only a couple of months, and to-day I would give, oh! what would I not give to have those little hands doing their sweet mischief. Peace, foolish heart! "He giveth His beloved rest."

The baby is gone, but when I look at the little short lines that dedicate my album—the sweetest, saddest lines to me that were ever written—soon ended like her little life—I am glad that I took her in my arms, kissed the rosy lips, and put the book away without one reproving word—glad that I caused no angry feeling in that baby heart, or left memories for myself that would now have power to wound!

That is why all the leaves of my new album are blank—pure, spotless, just as the fair page of her little life; but you who think these characters on the dedicating page unmeaning have never had the key to them. Mothers can tell what they are. Angels will be glad over this record without blot or stain. There is no hand writing so fine that I would exchange it for the baby's autograph. As for us—

Our lives are always written through. With good or ill, with false or true, And as the blessed angels turn, There is no hand writing so fine that I would exchange it for the baby's autograph. And blot the bad with good. — Irish Ecce Prose.

A Georgia Fish Pond.

San Subers, says the Macon, Ga., Telegraph, has fully demonstrated the fact that a small fish pond dug in the middle of a garden is a source of much genuine satisfaction and profit. Of late years Southern people have directed much attention to this branch of industry, if it may be so called, and all over Georgia can be found these manure-pools of water, in which are raised myriads of fish at a cost next to nothing.

Four years ago Mr. Subers had his little pond dug in his garden at about the cost of digging an ordinary well. He obtained a few fish from Mr. Singleton, a few from Mr. Wippler, and gave a colored man $2 to bring him a black beam from the swamp. Then he shut his eyes for a year and a half, and waited for the fish to grow. And they grew in size and quantity. The table was supplied twice a week, and he has kept up the programme at a trifling cost.

When the Fish Commissioners came along with their canisters of German carp, and the papers were full of their excellent eating qualities, he procured a few to stock his pond. They thrived in the mud, and his hitherto clean pond began to assume the appearance of a mud puddle. The carp did not prove so valuable an eating fish as the beam having much the flavor of a catfish. But the beam, of which the pond has millions, is acceptable to all palates.

The expense of feeding these fish is really less than feeding half a dozen chickens, to say nothing of having the chickens starve. Mr. Subers gave about twenty-five cents for a box of old warm-corn crackers, and they furnish excellent feeding. A few walruses, with an occasional trout in the way of corn bread crumbs, is all that is necessary, and his fish go on growing and multiplying without end.

The fish pond is an institution to be encouraged. Every man who owns a garden can easily dig one, and as it keeps the surrounding ground always moist, it will be found a most valuable means of making garden-tracks grow.

Think of broom-fried briam every morning for breakfast at a cost of only the salt that seasons them. Really, it is something worth speaking about.

A correspondent of the Union County Record, writing from Wood River, says: "The Oregon Short Line is pushing matters as fast as possible. The road across the desert is to be graded this winter and in early spring to avoid the necessity of hauling water. The iron bridge across Snake river at American falls will be completed early in March; the track will be laid across immediately. Grading will be pushed to Wood river, to which point they propose to have cars running before July. The line will then be extended towards Oregon as fast as possible."

His enemies probably expected to see the dirt upon Blaine's presidential posture as entirely to destroy its bloom and promise. They have succeeded, as the case now stands, in enriching it sufficiently with their Peruvian guano to give it perennial freshness. As the Peruvian claim business is unraveled, the perfect straightforwardness of Mr. Blaine in treating it becomes apparent.

The Legal Catechism.

CLIENT—Now, counsellor what is law anyway?

LAWYER—Law? Well, law from one legal point of view may be a lucrative means of defeating justice.

C.—How many kinds of law are there?

L.—Sometimes two kinds. One for the poor and another for the rich.

C.—What do you think the best way of dealing with a witness who is unfavorable to your case?

L.—My tactics are to confuse, bewilder, scare and mystify him; or else make him angry. If a woman, make her angry by all means. Women are especially good subjects to operate on in this way. Many women don't know exactly what they're saying when they talk, anyhow, and they're pretty certain not to remember what they have said two minutes after, anyway. I don't know of more astonishing beings in the world than women when confronted with their own words three minutes after the court stenographer takes them down.

C.—If the witness endangers your case, what do you (legally) consider him?

L.—As a target for abuse, innuendo and satire. An object of suspicion. A person to be proved a bad character. A being whose minor faults must be magnified into crimes. A person without probity, honesty or honor. A Pariah among men.

C.—But if the witness testify in your favor?

L.—A perfect being. An epitome of honesty, honor, goodness and veracity. A persecuted one on whom most foul aspersions are cast by opposing counsel.

C.—And if in the next case this very same witness should testify in favor of opposing counsel, how would you consider him or her?

L.—My friend, circumstances alter cases. Especially legal "cases." Human nature is essentially weak and defective. Further than this we are non-committal. Law is rigid. Law is merciless. Law goes straight ahead for justice, looking neither to right nor left.

C.—What is the best method of impeaching the character of a witness when nothing tangible can be ranked up against him—or her?

L.—The tactics of "insinuating" crime or bad character. The inferential assertion of lies out of whole cloth. Thus: Ask the witness about his setting his brother's barn on fire out of revenge. Of

To Be or Not to Be?
No sooner has the world got well over the fear which oppressed it last year when, as was currently reported, man and all his works were to be swept away in a whirl of fire and flame, that there arises a prophet much more trustworthy than Mother Shipton who says that, though we did not all die in 1881, we must all do so at any rate fifteen years from now. The new prophet of ill is Professor Richard A. Proctor, the well-known astronomer, and his grounds for his monstrous assertion that in 1897 the world must be destroyed are about as follows, and he gives them in his essay on "A Menacing Comet." In the year 1866 a star, which for ages had quietly flamed in the constellation of the Northern Crown without ever showing any signs of internal trouble, suddenly burst out in a great blaze which continued for two days, during which the light which it gave out was many hundred times greater than it had ever been before. After shining thus for forty-eight hours its fires went down again to their old intensity, and the theory by which astronomers accounted for the phenomena named was that a comet had fallen into that far-off sun, and increased its heat in such proportion that, had the star in the Northern Crown been our own central luminary, all vegetation and life in the system of planets wheeling about it must have been quenched instantly and forever. Professor Proctor points out that there is great probability that in 1897 a great comet will fall into our sun and produce the disastrous consequences indicated above. It is generally believed by such astronomers as Winnecke and Marth and others of great proficiency that the comet of 1843 and that of 1868, the velocity having decreased in its successive return to perihelion when it passes through the corona of the sun. This comet is due again in 1897, and when it returns it will come with its speed so greatly reduced that it may be unable to escape the sun's influence, and may then, with all the meteors that form its train, throw itself into the central fire which will blaze up in the manner of the star in the Northern Crown, and necessarily destroy all life throughout our solar system. And still United States bonds due in 1897 are considered to be a good investment.

Good By to John Kelly.
A New York letter says: Mr. John Kelly is regarded by country Democrats as the bully of New York politics, who has wrecked habitually State and national tickets to save certain spoils to a knot of local traders as reckless and disloyal as himself. But even this would not be such a serious matter if Mr. Kelly had not mounted upon the shoulders of his apolitical brigade and bullied the Cincinnati Convention out of its senses, and thereby brought down irreparable disaster upon the country. There is also a strong feeling that after besting Tilden in the Convention he treacherously slaughtered Hancock at the election. Add to this the conviction in the Democratic mind, which no argument can shake, that Tammany, with some of its Southern adjutors, conspired at the fraud of 1877, and the New York reader will not wonder that the country Democracy is more than willing to part with John Kelly and his faithless tribe for good and all.

When the Democratic State Convention last year refused to admit the Tammany delegates, who came up not as Democrats, but as Kellyites, the action was universally endorsed as wise and just, and as the beginning of the end of the troubles which had so long covered the Democracy with shame and defeat. And now the refusal of the Democrats to bargain with Mr. Kelly's stool pigeon in the Legislature appears to complete the surgical severance of the body of that death from the body of our life.

Let the Republicans shoulder it openly; let them carry it for a while in broad day as they have long done in secret darkness.

Nothing has of late years given more pure satisfaction to the country Democracy, nothing appears to have conveyed a better promise of future harmony and success, than this final ridance of John Kelly and his gang. You cannot pick up a country newspaper which does not present this view in stronger terms than I have employed.

A well-known Canadian lumberman, in making his way from Midland Harbor, Lake Huron, to the mouth of the Muskoka river, preceded his teamsters to sound the sea. Getting beyond the islands along the east coast of the Georgian bay, he found himself exposed to the full force of a northeasterly gale. He was thrown down and blown toward Collingwood. Nothing would stop him; sometimes on his knees, sometimes on his back, sometimes on his side, he was driven along with fearful speed toward the open water, as he supposed. For twelve miles he tumbled, and slid helplessly, until he was driven against a small island and his life was saved. He has scarcely smiled since.—Toronto Globe.

The Reporter's Revenge.
How great a power the reporter really is in journalism was manifested in New York city some years ago—it was a long time since; and James Gordon Bennett was still alive; and so was Horace Greeley, but both were old men, if silvered heads and beards make age. It was when A. A. Low, the then President of the New York Chamber of Commerce, had returned from a European tour. A great complimentary banquet was given Mr. Low at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. His Honor, the Mayor, was there; and so was Judge Brady; in fact, all of the big guns of the bar, and all the famous editors, except the elder Bennett, who never went to dinner. After all the magnates were seated, the reporters were admitted—there were fourteen of them—and were taken to a long table which was not set off for a dinner, though elegantly adapted to writing. The waiters trooped in with vials, but ignored the reporters, who bore the slight until the course had been served; then, by mutual agreement, they arose and tramped silently out of the banquet hall in Indian file. Horace Greeley, Manton Marble, Jones, Hudson, Brady and Brooks saw the departure, and were taken to a dinner, though elegantly adapted to writing. The waiters trooped in with vials, but ignored the reporters, who bore the slight until the course had been served; then, by mutual agreement, they arose and tramped silently out of the banquet hall in Indian file. Horace Greeley, Manton Marble, Jones, Hudson, Brady and Brooks saw the departure, and were taken to a dinner, though elegantly adapted to writing. The waiters trooped in with vials, but ignored the reporters, who bore the slight until the course had been served; then, by mutual agreement, they arose and tramped silently out of the banquet hall in Indian file.

After an absence of two hours the reporters returned from the bar-room of the hotel, where they had whiled away the time in sampling ice-water and perhaps something stronger. No sooner had they got back to their table than waiters were sent to them with wine and cigars. Both were rejected. "We are here to work, not to drink and smoke," said the fourteen in chorus. The chairman of the committee of arrangements came to apologize; he was heard in grim silence. He said a special dinner should be provided. "We are here to work, not eat dinner," answered the fourteen. To work apparently they went; pencils flew over the paper; the speakers glanced at the writers; they seemed to suspect their digresses, perhaps they thought it not deserved at all.

Next morning confirmed their suspicions; the poor, snubbed reporters had got even with the millionaires, judges and lawyers. The Tribune had no reference whatever to the dinner; the Herald had twenty lines; the World apologized that the Low dinner was crowded out; in the Times there was a sticckled dictated by the editor, who snelt a mouse and hurried to the office from the dinner to find not a line of it, just as he expected.

All the reporters were severely reprimanded by their chiefs. One of them, of the Herald, lost his place, for the elder Bennett was a merciless master. He dismissed men for the veriest trifles, but his sharp managing editor re-engaged all the valuable ones as fast as they were discharged by the inexorable proprietor, who, in the last decade of his active life, did not know his employes, with perhaps few exceptions, by sight.

However, the poor-purse reporters discounted the millionaires, and from that distant day to this the reporters have not been snubbed at any of the grand public dinners given in New York.

Judge Black on the Silly Craze for Political Sensation.
In an interview published in a Washington paper with Judge Jeremiah S. Black, of Pennsylvania, his attention was called to the declaration in some quarters being made that the winning ticket of 1884 would be Blaine for President and Joe Brown, of Georgia, for Vice President.

"What do you think about it?" queried the reporter.
"Can it be possible that the democratic party of this country is not yet done relying on phantoms to win a battle? Is there no wisdom in experience? Has it forgotten that time has always its own vindication in truth? Does the past furnish no lessons whereby its footsteps may be guided aright to the sepulchre of dead Presidential struggles and ambitions? There was the Seymour and Blair ticket of 1868, which was redolent to annihilation by Blair's celebrated letter declaring the amendment un-constitutional and void. In 1872 the party abandoned every profession it had ever made, held in abeyance every principle it had ever promulgated, and nominated its life-long enemy—Federalist, Whig and Abolitionist—poor old Horace Greeley. In 1876 it nominated and elected Tilden and Hendricks, and then, affrighted at a few of Zach Chandler's threats, cowardly abandoned and betrayed them. In 1880, commanded by every motive of naanhood, policy and decency to put again to lead in the successful and indomitable standard-bearer of 1872, it forsok him basely at malicious threats of another boss, and suffered for the fourth time ignominious disaster. And now there is talk of a combination upon Blaine and Joe Brown—Maine and Georgia—New England and the South—the Puritan and the slave dealer—the stalwart Unionist and the zealous Confederate—the brilliant, dashing, gladiatorial Radical and the shrewd, practical, successful Democrat. This is folly, folly, folly. Such a ticket could not win in this day and generation than Leander could have swam the Helios with a six-pound cannon lashed to his back."

"Who can you win with?" further queried the reporter.
"With a man who has been always a Democrat, true and consistent—one in whom the business interests of the country have confidence. Justice Field, who is now one of the Associate Justices of the United States Supreme Court, or any other man with a like record, can win."

ASSASSIN GUILTY is deeply disgruntled. He has ceased to be an object of curiosity. On Sunday last he shaved and dressed with care, expecting a large number of visitors. Not one appeared. This was so grievous a disappointment to the egotist that he charged the warden with conspiracy to prevent his enjoying the satisfaction of an array of callers. Until the hangman lays hands upon him, Guitau will not again be a conspicuous creature. His day has passed.

After Many Years.
President Arthur has added another to the bold and righteous acts of his administration by deciding that tardy justice shall be done to Fitz John Porter. The matter has apparently been under consideration for the Cabinet for some time. It is now announced with certainty that the President has decided upon the restoration of Gen. Porter to the rank from which he was deposed twenty years ago by the grossest perversion of justice in the history of the war. The restoration is to be accomplished by nomination to the Senate for the first vacancy in the rank of colonel in the regular army, which Gen. Porter held at the time of his court martial and dismissal. The nomination, it is considered by the Cabinet, will carry a pardon and removal of the disabilities imposed by the court martial with it, and, upon confirmation, Gen. Porter will stand as nearly where he did before his dismissal as it is possible to place him after twenty years of delay and unmerited disgrace. The only question not settled in the Cabinet discussion is the amount of back pay due Gen. Porter upon his restoration to the army. When cashiered he held the rank of colonel in the regular army and major general of volunteers. The volunteer force ceased to exist in 1866, four years after. The question to be decided is whether he can claim pay as a major general to the date of his restoration, or for four years only, and pay as a colonel for the rest of the time. As soon as the attorney general shall render his decision upon this point, the executive action contemplated will be taken, and the Senate consenting, all that human justice can do to right a twenty years wrong will be done. All that can be done, however, will be small recompense for the cruel injustice that has eaten out the best years of Porter's life, robbed him of all an honorable soldier aspires to, and condemned him to a career of dull inaction, embittered by a ranking sense of undeserved disgrace, instead of the bright course of glory and usefulness that seemed to lie before him twenty years ago. The government he served, and which betrayed and deserted him, cannot repay Gen. Porter for the loss of his best years. Money and rank cannot compensate him for wasted years and lost opportunities. The United States owes Gen. Porter more than it can ever pay. It can at the best only redeem its own honor from a black stain and cleanse the name he must soon leave to his children from an unmerited blot. It does not become the government to count the cost of the small measure of justice it is able to grant. Gen. Porter has never made a question of money of his appeal for justice. But the nation cannot afford to do less than cheerfully grant to him the largest sum he can technically claim, whether it be pay as a colonel or general. The bold and upright course taken by President Arthur in this matter, in the face of the interested plotters who made Porter their scapegoat and the demagogues and shallow fools who echo their shillbottle of traitor, add new honor to his bold and upright conduct of public affairs and give him a new claim to the confidence and esteem of the country. There should be no question of Porter's confirmation by the Senate when he shall be nominated.—Pioneer Press (Rep.)

Comparative Cost of Grain Shipments by Rail and Sailers.
The Southern Pacific Railroad has placed the tariff on Wheat and Flour at $13 per short ton from all points in this State to Galveston, Texas. This definite announcement allows us to estimate with some degree of certainty its effect on sailers. At $13 per short ton, a long ton is $14.56. From New Orleans the lowest ocean tariff to Liverpool is $2.50 per long ton. Accepting this as the probable lowest rate from Galveston to Liverpool, and we get sum total of $17.06 per long ton hence to Liverpool. In this calculation we do not include necessary charges that will be incurred in shipments at New Orleans or Galveston, particularly so when it goes by rail. To reach the many important ports abroad much will have to go by rail or small steamers from the Gulf ports. At from $24 to $55 per long ton to Liverpool direct, sailers can come here in ballast and load outward with a profit; while, with an inward cargo, they can accept a still lower rate and net money to the owners. Taking 50s direct, without taking off the 5 per cent at this end, which goes to the charterer, and it gives us $13.75 per long ton—a difference in favor of ships of about $3.30 per long ton, equal to nearly 14 1/2 per cent. We have taken in the above calculations the highest possible range for ships after the railroad establishment through connections, and the lowest possible rate by steam from the Gulf ports to Liverpool. From New York the rates by steam to Liverpool is from 4d to 5d per bushel, equal to from $2.98 to $3.70 per long ton, which gives in favor of the Gulf ports from 48c to $1.20 per ton. To successfully compete with sailers the railway company must reduce their Grantariff to quite a low figure.—S. F. Post.

THOMAS had been a carpenter, but owing to a dullness in trade, he engaged as footman at the "big house" in the village. On the day of his engagement the mistress, having a lady visitor in the drawing room, rang the bell for the footman. "You will show this lady the front door, Thomas," she said. "Yes, mem," replied Thomas; and bowing to the lady he requested her to follow him. On coming to the door, Thomas opened it, and the lady was about to pass out, when Thomas, tapping her on the shoulder, remarked, "This is the door, mem; a guild pipe into it, framen twa and a half inches thick, with raised moldings; wad cost about twa pound ten, mem."—Manchester Times.

HELENA Herald: The Oregon Branch of the Union Pacific road in western Wyoming is developing the largest body of coal yet discovered in this country. The body of coal at Fort Henry, 100 miles northwest of Evanston, is 60 feet in thickness, which is the greatest width of coal ever found in a single bed in the west. The coal is bituminous, and equal to the best any where.

Coasting Declines.
WASHINGTON.—The president has received from ex-Senator Conkling his declination of the associate justiceship.
Cabinet Changes Imminent.
Appearances indicate further changes in the cabinet. There is talk of transferring Howe to the interior department, when Hiram Price and other Blaine men will give place to stalwarts. Secretary Hunt has never been certain of remaining in the cabinet.

A New Phase of the Situation.
It is generally believed at the capital that Conkling wrote the president this morning declining his appointment. The general talk is that Conkling's declination will be made public to-day, and that Secretary Folger will be nominated to the supreme bench and Conkling secretary of the treasury.

Opposition to Insults.
A vigorous fight is being made against the confirmation of Rufus Isabella as quartermaster general, bringing to light all charges made during his services under Grant.

Nominations Made and Withdrawn.
The president has nominated Charles Tress, of Michigan, consul at Windsor, Canada, and withdrawn the nomination of Jas. F. Swords, of the District of Columbia, as consul to Calif.

Sergeant Mason's Acquittal.
Sergeant Mason will either be acquitted by court martial on the technical ground that he had not actually entered on duty when he fired at Guitau, or will be given a short sentence.

New Bankruptcy Bill.
The bankruptcy bill reported to the senate provides that when any person without fraud shall become involved in debts beyond five hundred dollars and upwards, which he could not pay, he may apply by petition in equity to the United States district court, setting forth the cause of insolvency, etc., scheduling liabilities and assets, and may surrender his estate for the benefit of creditors, except such as may be exempt from execution, and the court shall adjudge him a bankrupt if good cause appear, and appoint a receiver and serve notice to all interested and distribute the estate according to rules of equity, and if there was no fraud, prisoner shall be discharged as a bankrupt. When a person absents or conceals himself or otherwise attempts to defraud creditors, the latter may petition against him that his insolvency had existed only when the debtor's liabilities exceed the value of his property and court may extend or stay proceedings. Preferred creditors may be made of those who loaned bankrupt money for sickness or in good faith to avert bankruptcy or other adversity. If any creditor has oppressively sought to force debtor into bankruptcy or obtain any fraudulent advantage over other creditors, court may deny his participation in the estate.

Slater on the Chinese Bill.
Senator Slater spoke as follows on the Chinese bill in the Senate on Monday:
"The coming of classes other than those specified as Chinese labor are unrestricted, and rights which they may enjoy here are even greater than they were under the Burlingame treaty. They may come as officers, teachers, traders and merchant's, and the question arises whether after coming here they may change their avocations and become laborers as subjects of other nations. They would have this right, although possibly the treaty carried with it power to legislate so as to prevent this; but the difficulty of enforcing such legislation would render it of little value in failing to negotiate for distinct prohibition against resident Chinese engaged in other labor avocations. Our commissioners to China showed they were unequal to the duty assigned them. If we had a foreign policy that was worthy of fifty millions of people this would have been exacted, not as concession to the United States but as something which of right belonged to us as a nation. It was humiliating for Americans reading the treaty to find this country placed in the attitude of receiving favors from China instead of being accorded the rights essential to self-preservation. Under the Burlingame treaty Chinese could pass free through every part of the United States, while our citizens were not permitted to enter China except at prescribed points, and were not allowed to engage in industries or the internal trade of the country. In the cities they entered, if they ventured out of prescribed limits, they did so at the peril of their lives. Our commissioners were so thoroughly imbued with that theory of modern philanthropy which takes to its bosom all the world and mankind, that the most important part of their mission, the assertion of the inherent rights of a nation to control in its own way the admission among its own people of foreign elements incongruous and dangerous to the peace, happiness and good order of its communities, was overlooked and subordinated to mere idea. Slater then argued that the principle of extirpation could have no application in its relations to Chinese otherwise than in this country. The very statement of principle, he thought, carried with it its own refutation, because the right to come at all is derived not from the alien himself nor from the country whence he comes, but from the people with whom he would form new relations. The pursuit of happiness, the inalienable right of every human being must be regulated by human security and law. Hunger may impel a highwayman in the pursuit of happiness to demand the purse of the senator from Massachusetts, (Hoar) but law and society step in to protect him from molestation. In a thousand ways the pursuit of happiness is limited and circumscribed by the laws of organized society, and its application to individuals extends alike to nations. He said the smallness of the number of Chinese in the country, as compared with our total population, had been urged as a reason for discretizing the earnest appeals of the people of the Pacific states. He answered this by showing that Chinamen had remained almost entirely on the Pacific coast, and asserted that the adult Chinese male laboring element in California was nearly equal to the male adult white laboring population, as the immigrants consist almost wholly of adults without families. He further argued that the parallel suggested by Hoar between the negro and the Mongolian was not apparent, as the former was a native and identified with the country, while the latter is an alien to our customs, religion and civilization. Cameron said in 1879 he voted against the 15-passenger bill, but he would vote for the pending bill. Under the first article of the treaty of September, 1880, Congress could, with the most scrupulous good faith, enact the proposed legislation. The article expressly sanctioned it. When the immense and overgrowing population of China is considered, and that the entire coast of bringing Chinese laborers from Shanghai to San Francisco does not exceed $12, we must see that China can, if no restriction be placed upon the immigration of her laborers, pour countless thousands of them into the ports of California and Oregon. He was one of those who believed that either the Anglo-Saxon or Mongolian race would ultimately possess the Pacific states.

Corruption Everywhere.
And now comes from the southern part of this hemisphere a statement implicating another American ambassador in what is described as one of the "schemes of a gang of rascals who are deceiving the Americans in relation to affairs in Peru and Bolivia." The ambassador now implicated is General Adams, American minister resident at the capital of Bolivia. According to The Times of Valparaiso, important letters from Dr. Cabrera, who is described as "the principal promoter in Washington and New York of the intrigues plotted by Huribut in Lima and Adams in La Paz," have been intercepted, which throw light on the purposes of certain "North American emissaries who seek 'just arrived.' The purposes of said emissaries, it seems, relate to a speculation connected with the "Potosi real scooter, valued at $20,000,000, and a railway from Puno to La Paz, to carry out which the gold plethora in America is counted on. Cabrera says that the money is ready, and that the Bolivian legion—Minister Adams—is completely under the control of the capitalists who have the enterprise in hand." The letters are said to show, also, that Adams himself has acted as the secret agent of the speculators; that he visited the mineral districts of Bolivia and then went to America, where he busied himself selling shares in the Potosi real scooter and other mines. "It is impossible to imagine," the writer says, "anything of a more scandalous nature than the speculative jobbery in which Minister Adams is implicated. He is connected in the Chilean mind with Huribut, for whom, it appears, the Chileans entertain no complimentary opinion. "The moral turpitude of these two men," it is said, "has worked an incalculable amount of mischief to the interests of peace, and made the United States the most unpopular of all foreign powers in the eyes of Spanish America." Their recall from that section of the globe is recommended to the Washington cabinet as the course of wisdom, if they do not wish the honor and dignity of America to be "dragged in the filthy mire of disreputable transactions carried on under the aegis of its great name."

There has not appeared any good ground for doubt that it would have been quite as well for America, and for its influence among the more respectable of the Spanish-American states, if Mr. Huribut had not been sent to manifest his diplomatic qualifications at Lima. At all events, it can not at present be thought that he was granted indefinite leave of absence any too soon. And if the charges now brought against Minister Adams are not altogether unfounded, the same observations may be applied to him. It is pretty clear not only that recent American diplomacy in the Andean countries has been seriously overdone, but that the Washington administration has not been lucky in the selection of its diplomatic representatives in that quarter of the world.

The Recent Floods.
The financial effects of the extraordinary storms and floods throughout the whole of the Mississippi Valley, of which accounts have reached us during the past few days, must be far-reaching and serious. The flood have been unprecedented in their extent and violence. The Missouri, the Mississippi, the Ohio, the Washak and all or nearly all the tributaries of these large streams have overleaped their banks and spread destruction and devastation over a vast area of the most fertile and important sections of the country. Farms are literally washed away—houses, barns, cattle and the land itself being carried off by the raging floods. Railway tracks are submerged or washed out, bridges are destroyed, vast land slides come sweeping down the hillsides and cover the trunks or miles. Hundreds of people, driven from their farms on which everything is lost, are seeking shelter in the towns and villages, which, in some cases, are themselves so cut off from the rest of the world as to render something like a temporary famine not improbable. Whole counties in Arkansas are submerged and immense damage to the cotton crop is reported. In many of the towns along the Ohio, Mississippi, Missouri and Red rivers thousands of men are thrown out of work, while at the same time they see their houses swept away and their property destroyed. Now when one attempts to estimate, however roughly, the actual amount which all this destruction would represent in money he is appalled. The sum must be terribly large.

Paying The Price.
A New York letter of Feb. 21st says: The politicians here all admit that the Tammany men in the legislature have received their reward in the composition of the senate committees for selling out to the republicans. The republican lieutenant governor gives the three Tammany senators more places on the committees than any other members of the senate, republican or democratic. The make-up of the committee on cities shows that it was a part of the bargain to give Tammany this control of legislation affecting New York city. The anti-monopoly party has been sold out and sacrificed for the benefit of the other contracting parties. The railroad committee of the senate has been made up against that party, although two Tammany senators are members. The republicans have been declaring all the while that there was no bargain with Tammany; but the senate committees, organized as they are with a particular view to making Tammany prominent on every important committee, tell as plain a story of bargain and sale as has recently come to the light.
