POETICAL SELECTIONS.

Women and Wine. Pop! went the gay cock flying, Sparkled the gay champagne; By the light of the day that was dying He filled up their goblets again. Let the last, best toast be woman, "Woman, dear woman," said he; "Wine, my dear, my dear, my dear, " "When you drink to your sex with me." But she caught his strong, brown fingers, And held them tight, as in fear, And through the gathering twilight, Her fond voice fell on his ear: "Nay, ere you drink, I implore you, By all that you hold in dear, Pledge woman in your toast, " "Ratier, by far, than in wine, " "By woe of the drunkard's mother, By the children that begged for bread, By the face of her who loved one, Looks on the wine when his red, By the kisses changed to curses, By the tears more bitter than red, By many a fond heart broken, Pledge no woman in wine, " "What has wine brought to woman? Nothing but tears and pain; It has torn her heart for ever And proven her prayers in vain; And her household gods, all scattered, Lie tangled up in the vine; Oh! I pledge no woman " In the course of so many years.

The Danger of Confessions.

Dr. William A. Hammond, of New York, a student and authority on diseases of the mind and nervous system, has, in the course of his investigation of curious and irregular actions of the mind, encountered instances of confessions of guilt and of offenses where there was a evidence of innocence. A few years ago a female patient of his informed him that she had got up in the night and gone to visit a gentleman of her acquaintance who lived in a distant part of the city, and that she had remained in his house all night. On making thorough inquiry it was proven beyond a doubt that there was not one word of truth in the story. She had not left the house at all, and the gentleman in question was not in the city at the time. He believes that a dream had left such a vivid impression upon her mind as to seem to her a reality. He thinks children are often punished for lying when innocent of it, being unable to discriminate between actual events and the phantasms of their imaginations and dreams. During the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries there was an epidemic of hysteria and cataplexy that spread over Europe, and many wrongs were inflicted upon innocent persons in consequence of accusations of guilt against them. One Charles, a priest of Marseilles, a moral man, was accused of sorcery by two nuns who were suffering from hysterical convulsions. At first he denied it, and undertook to prove the nature of the disease, but subsequently he himself was seized with it, and confessed to even more than he had charged with. He declared that he had worshipped the devil for fourteen years, and that in return the devil had given him power over every woman that he met, and as to seem to her a reality. He said, in poisoning the minds of no less than 1,000 women. One of the nuns who was present at his trial became much affected by it, and she in turn was accused of being possessed. She was kept in prison a year on the charge of having unlawful relations with demons. She at first denied the charge, but suddenly she admitted it, and accused herself of other crimes—murder, incest, and strange children, and finally, she died in a madhouse.

From the Palouse.

PESAWAWA, May 27th, 1878. EDITOR STATESMAN:—You people in the lower country must not imagine you are the only ones progressing. We can say to you everything up here, in our great Palouse country, is alive with activity. The farmer is looking happy, as he casts his eyes over the glorious wheat fields, fairly speaking: "that is what by and by," and previous to turning his back on the field, casts a sigh, "Oh! hang it, if those Englishmen and Russians will hurry up and get to fighting, I will be away up Palouse in a short time." Our town is growing rapidly, and every visitor is delighted with its location. The steamers pass up and down regularly and the Snake river being such a rapid one, the review of a steamer coming down at the rate of twenty to twenty-five miles an hour, is more interesting to look at than a train of cars. Business is growing apace with the constant flow of emigration into the country. It is surprising to learn (and we have an excellent chance here along the river) from the immigrants concerning whence they came. One would scarce believe that the farmers, and even lumbermen, away from Maine, Vermont and Massachusetts have had time to learn regarding this country. But there is no truer saying, "that what a Yankee can't find out is not worth knowing." From the number of people who come up, and the very few who return, we conclude they all find land to please them. True, there are some who never know what does please them, for two or three weeks, and pass over plenty of good rich land, capable of yielding from 30 to 60 bushels of as good wheat as ever grew under the sun, and yet they will "yawl out," "can't find a piece of land that exactly pleases me," and by the time they make up their minds to file on a certain piece, they ascertain from the land agent, "Sorry, but we are just a little tight; John Smith, of Vermont, filed on that quarter section yesterday." So, Mr. Oregonian, or Mr. Californian, goes off with his eyes-brows clipped, and mutters to himself, "what a fool am I." For such there is, but little sympathy. We learn from the columns of your interesting paper that your merchants and citizens are getting deeply interested in the project of a new railroad across the mountains to the Columbia, to connect with Snake river steamers. Opposition being the life of trade, we wish any new enterprise, which must prove an advantage, our hearty good wishes. The O. S. N. Co., are, of course, a good reliable company. So was A. T. Stewart, of New York, a good merchant, and yet there were others just as good, who founded concerns in that city just as reliable as the others, and the time is fast passing when the amount of merchandise of all kinds, and agricultural implements and machinery of every description will be so terribly enormous, certainly one line of steamers can share a portion with another, and yet have all they should reasonably care to transport. Until railroads are constructed the only outlet for the grain and produce of all kinds, will be the Snake river. After this year the grain, wool and other productions will be an astonishing amount, and a living person. It is only known to those who have traveled over this immense Palouse country, of the preparations and progress of the farmers. Truly, this is destined to be a great country and the homes of a happy and prosperous people. In closing, we would venture a passing tribute to our little town of Pesawawa. It is destined to be one of the most important towns on the river, owing to its superb location. The Pesawawa ferry, and its famed cayuse road, making the trail over the same a pleasure, instead of a task, is one of the greatest features, which will insure the future growth of Pesawawa, making it as it is now, a great shipping point. Colfax merchants receive their goods here from Portland and San Francisco. The freighters prefer to haul goods from Pesawawa, owing to the excellent road. Mr. C. C. Crum, our town proprietor, is an astonishing genius, and a progressive ideas and liberal spirit. He is building several new houses, a nice drug store and hall for meetings &c. Mr. Emsley Fincher, the old resident of Pesawawa, is also busy in forwarding the interests of the town, owning as he does a portion of the town-site. He is now engaged in superintending the bridging down of the Pesawawa stream, which will be made to run along the side of the one town, and also to bridge the other side, and the green hills on both sides, and the steamers coming up and down the river, we have a pretty location for our town. At least every one says so.

Our Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, May 23rd, 1878. Secretary Sherman and minister Hayes are the first of the republican visiting statesmen, out of congress—there are none of them out of office—to recognize the importance of the inquiry proposed by Mr. Potter's resolution. The secretary has written a letter to the chairman of the Potter committee, asserting his own innocence of any wrong, asking to be represented before the committee, by counsel, and offering to prove that there was violence in some of the Louisiana parishes in the election of 1876. In short, the secretary has suggested a program for the republican members of the committee, and we may expect them to attempt to prove, in mitigation of unquestioned frauds in the action of the Louisiana returning board, intimidation of colored voters at and prior to election. Any one who is acquainted, as the writer of this letter is, with the material of the colored voting population is made up, and knows the tendency of a considerable portion of it, increasing steadily since the war, to vote with the whites, knows that nothing but intimidation, the intimidation of blacks by blacks—has kept the voters of the race substantially unanimous in favor of republican candidates. More than five years ago, and again at his old home in Maryland a year ago, Fred. Douglass recognized and commented on the inevitable tendency of the former slave to vote with his old master. It is intimidation that has prevented what Douglass thought inevitable. This is the real effect of intimidation. It has controlled the politics of the south for years. In proving, if they can, a few acts of violence on the part of conservative white men in Louisiana, at or before the election of 1876, the republicans will call attention to a slight symptom of disease on the surface of the southern political body. The greater trouble was not so apparent, but was much more dangerous. In this matter of intimidation the committee should adopt the secretary's suggestion if they consider the subject at all, and be thorough. No plan of investigation has been decided upon by the committee. It is believed, though, that five of its members will remain here, three go to Louisiana and three to Florida. A report is hoped for early in July. Mr. Hayes was in consultation on the subject with secretaries of war, secretary Sherman and representative Foster, at the house of the last named, the other evening. Senator Bayard yesterday, in an eloquent speech, told a great deal of truth about this district, and about the responsibility of its present financial condition, and the duty of the general government connected therewith. This senator has a habit of speaking his convictions, whether they lead to popularity or not. In this matter he is no exception. He is in the future all will concede that the senator was entirely just in placing the responsibility for much of our district debt upon the federal government, because incurred by its officers and for its benefit. But too many senators and representatives lack the courage of senator Bayard. Gen. R. F. Butler commenced a speech last night, which was evidently meant to have effect in Massachusetts and other eastern states. Before finishing his hour of speech, and before objection was made to his continuing, he will finish the speech at another time, and send immense numbers of it to New England. It treats of labor, finance and other topics which are believed by some to have more interest than any other question to an increasing portion of the people. Butler is prepared to take advantage of any defections from the two great parties, and is supposed to have vanity enough to remain in the state, and to be elected to the penitentiary. It is not surprising to learn that the friends of the unfortunate woman are not satisfied with this act of clemency and will press for a full pardon. The story told since the conviction, and apparently substantiated by her husband and relatives of the dead woman, if it be the whole truth in the case, makes the tragedy so clearly and unmistakably manslaughter that the verdict of the jury which declared Kate Southern guilty of murder could have been reached only by ignorance. The young wife and mother, distracted by jealousy, for which it is shown she had only too much cause, after leaving her home to escape the threatened destruction of her life by her husband and avowed rival and dared to fight. A struggle ensued and the wife, the weaker and smaller woman, slabs her assailant. This is in brief the story; and would any sane man who heard it declare the fatal blow a murder? It is terrible to think that this poor young mother, in her delicate condition, has been for weeks living beneath the shadow of the gallows. Her thoughts dwelling night and day on the shameful death of the woman, and the fact that she had a child, she is pained now to contemplate her imprisonment for ten long years—those years during which her children will most need her love and care. It is to be hoped that the governor will find sufficient power in his hands to grant a full consideration of the case, to let Kate Southern go free and to restore her to her husband and her child.

Not to be Hanged.

In the last issue of the STATESMAN we published an account of the trial and conviction on a charge of the murder of Kate Southern, a beautiful and highly respectable woman of Georgia, who in a fit of jealousy killed a woman who was trying to rob her of her husband's love. Kate was sentenced to be hanged. It now appears that the sentence of death has been commuted to ten years imprisonment in the penitentiary. It is not surprising to learn that the friends of the unfortunate woman are not satisfied with this act of clemency and will press for a full pardon. The story told since the conviction, and apparently substantiated by her husband and relatives of the dead woman, if it be the whole truth in the case, makes the tragedy so clearly and unmistakably manslaughter that the verdict of the jury which declared Kate Southern guilty of murder could have been reached only by ignorance. The young wife and mother, distracted by jealousy, for which it is shown she had only too much cause, after leaving her home to escape the threatened destruction of her life by her husband and avowed rival and dared to fight. ### Lewiston Items.

The Telles favors an opposition line on the river. Hawley, Dohli & Co., have established an agency at Lewiston. A mail route between Walla Walla and Lewiston has been established, and hereafter mail matter coming from the east and intended for the lower part of the river, and also to bridge the other side, and the green hills on both sides, and the steamers coming up and down the river, we have a pretty location for our town. At least every one says so.

Here and There.

At Vallejo, Cal., a bird built her nest in the shrike-hole of a ship's munnism and began to set. The O. S. N. company has restored the wages of employes to the old figure. The increase commenced on the first inst. Irishmen who propose to pinch the British lion's tail for the amusement of hearing him roar, should look sharp for his claws. Baker City, Oregon, is not the most attractive place in the world, but it can boast of the finest brick store in Eastern Oregon. Tom Merry will soon commence the publication of a newspaper at the Dalles. Success to him, and he can make it a success if he will only "stick." In the manufacture of locomotives and passenger cars the United States excel all other nations. New Jersey makes the best locomotives, and Delaware the finest cars. Our thanks are due to a friend residing in Georgia, for the present of a one hundred-dollar bill. The note is in confederate money, but as the will is good we are just as grateful. The hull of the old steamboat Onondaga, once the finest boat of the O. S. N. company's fleet, is now serving in the capacity of a large, and is at present lying at the wharf at the Cascades. The great trouble with most Oregon papers is that they are afraid to give expression to their honest opinions; and those that have the nerve, have no opinions worth speaking of. A farmer in Ireland told Gladstone that "Lord Leitrim was a bad man and ought to have been shot long before." "And why wasn't he, then?" asked Gladstone. "Because, says the farmer, I suppose what everybody's business is nobody's." A man who has no bills against him belongs to the nobility of the highest rank. Now, we want a half dozen anxious gentlemen to call at the STATESMAN office, and confidentially ask for the point of this pun. Boston Transcript:—"A gentleman who has had an unfortunate habit of interrupting when others are talking, was brought up with a request that the other evening by a victim, who quietly said, 'go ahead and tell your story. You may forget it.'" Among the wheat producing states, Iowa takes the first rank, Minnesota second, Illinois third and Wisconsin fourth. Ohio raises the most winter wheat, and Illinois the most corn and oats. Pennsylvania raises the most rye, and California the most barley. The mill companies on the sound are gradually working into the employment of married men in preference to the bachelor element. The fact that led to the seating of Hayes in the white house. When that investigation is had, it will be discovered that president Tilden was sold out by southern democrats, and more than one hailed from Georgia. The truth is, that politicians, whether republicans or democrats, are a scaly set, and think only of their individual profit. The Portland Telegram insists that the most important business before the next Oregon legisla are will be the passage of a law for the suppression of quackery. Unscrupulous quackery has become a serious evil, and a law, as it would bear heavily upon them, and likely to reduce many of them to beggary. In this connection, the Telegram intimates that one of the physicians of that town was formerly a San Francisco barber. Thank God, we have no quacks in Walla Walla. One of the Portland papers, referring to a recent excursion from that city to Vancouver, says that the pleasure of the trip was marred by the presence of a number of Hayes in the white house.
