Bring back the blood-stained battle flags, Dead rent with many a shot and shell, And let them shroud the Cannon's mouth, And there their tale of terror tell.

Let rust now gather on the sword, That spark'd o'er the battle plain; The glittered bright above the field, Till dim'd with blood of fallen slain.

Let cobwebs build across the guns, And rust now gather on their steel; No more shall they belch forth their death, No more shall man their power feel.

Let sabers plow the neglected sod, No more shall well with reddened gore; Let swords the bonnet's harvest reap, And bay's nets garner in the store.

Hang up the trumpet on the wall, And let it back in sunshine's breath; No more the warred soldier call, Or sound the bugle note of death.

No more shall Mar's red battle bolts, With terror gather o'er the plain; Let flowers grow where once the blood, That flows on fields of strife and pain.

Yes, sink them in Oblivion's tide, And let them sail far in the past; Bring Ocean's cannon off the deck, And Commerce's flag sail to the mast.

Burning of Barnum's Museum.

The following scenes were witnessed at the burning of Barnum's Museum, in New York, July 14th:

Soon after the breaking out of the conflagration, a number of strange and terrible howls and moans proceeding from the large apartment in the third story of the Museum, corner of Ann street and Broadway, started the throng who had collected in front of the burning building.

Protecting myself from the intense heat as well as I could by taking the mattress from the bed and erecting it as a bulwark before the window, with only enough space on the top as a look-out, I anxiously observed the animals in the opposite room, immediately opposite the window through which I gazed, a large cage containing a lion and a lioness.

To the left of the lion's cage was the tank containing the two vast alligators, and still further to the left, partially hidden from sight, was the grand tank containing the great white whale, seals, rabbits, etc., in the lower compartment.

The fire was caged the box-constructors, anatomies and rattlesnakes, whose heads would now and then rise menacingly through the top of the cage. In the extreme right, containing the Royal Tiger and the Polar bear, whose terrified growls could be distinctly heard from behind the partition.

The conflagration was, as yet, confined to the upper part of the building; the lower walls, however, were becoming rapidly heated and all of the animals began to manifest much uneasiness.

The white or silver fox ran up and down his cage, whining piteously and endeavoring to escape. The lion also paced hurriedly up and down, moaning most distressfully, and all the other beasts manifested similar uneasiness.

The serpents stuck their heads up above the sill of the window and writhed about in strange contortions. When the fire had crept its swift way down to the third floor, and the lurid glare burst through the transoms of the doors, the panic among the beasts became positively fearful.

They sprang against their iron bars and strove to rend them with their teeth, at the same time sending forth savage and frightened cries which were almost human in their agony. At length, when the flames burst through the top of the door and commenced to lick the tops of the cages, the tumult reached its height. Yells, roars, howls and screams went up from the doomed beasts, which were heard to the distance of half a mile.

With a simultaneous bound the lion and his mate sprang against their bars, which gave way and came down with a crash, releasing the beasts, which for a moment apparently amazed at their sudden liberty, stood in the middle of the floor lashing their tails and roaring dolefully.

Almost at the same moment the upper part of the three-storied cage, consumed by the flames, fell forward, letting the rods drop to the floor, and many other animals were set free.

Just at this time the door fell through and the flames and smoke rolled in like a whirlwind from the Hayden river Coeytes.

A horrible howl in the right hand corner of the room, a yell of indescribable agony, and a crashing, grating sound indicated that the tiger and polar bear were stirred up to the highest pitch of excitement. Then there came a great crash as of the giving way of the bars of their cage. The flames and smoke momentarily rolled back, and for a few seconds the interior of the room was visible in the lurid light of the flames, which revealed the tiger and the lion locked together in close combat.

The base of the rods of the serpents' cage had also crumbled, and the largest box constructor—about twenty feet long and as thick as a man's body—was engaged in a deadly struggle with the lioness.

The polar bear had struck to the coolest corner, with half his fur burnt from his snowy coat, and there sat wondering gazing upon the scene before him. Accustomed as he had been to deal only with the walrus and the seal in the cold blue waters of the Arctic regions, he was evidently considerably alarmed at the excessive torrid scene, which was blazing through the room. Under the circumstances he found it impossible to take it coolly.

The monkeys were perched around the windows, shivering with dread and afraid to jump out. The snakes were writhing about, crippled and blistered by the heat darting out their forked tongues and expressing their rage and fear in the most sibilant hisses.

Meanwhile the lion and the tiger were continuing their contest, now with the advantage on one side, now on the other; and the dog was slowly tightening his fatal coils around the panting body of the lioness, which, however, hit and struggled, lacerating the striped skin of its adversary terribly. The floor was already crimson with their blood, while the commingling hisses, howls, yells and roars utterly surpassed all efforts at description.

Rescued by a Dog.

In the early part of the late Indian outbreak and massacre in Minnesota, a family named Holton was living on the frontier, about sixty miles west by north of the Government of New Elm. The family consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Holton, a son, John, about 11 years old, and three young children, two daughters of the respective ages of 8 and 5 years.

Holton had pre-empted or squatted on a farm something like a year before the outbreak, and had got pretty well under way, having a cross of the mastiff and greyhound, fleet of foot powerful of muscle, and possessing unusual intelligence.

John was a lad of precocious development of mind and body, and might have passed for a boy of fourteen. He and Boase were inseparable companions, and the boy taught the dog about all he knew himself, excepting only, as he was wont to say, such things as required speech.

We are thus particular in our mention of these things, because this story hinges on the courage and sagacity of John and the fidelity and intelligence of Boase.

The first knowledge which the Holtons obtained of the Indian outbreak was communicated by a band of about twenty Sioux, who came upon their dwelling just after daylight one morning.

Whether these were being taken the captives know not. Mrs. Holton and the two little girls were an overture with fright and horror that they seemed bereft of reason; but John, though at first stunned by the terrible scenes of which he had been a witness, soon recovered his self-possession, and with characteristic courage he ran to cast about in his mind for some means of escape and revenge.

"If Boase only knew where I was," he thought, "he would come and help me get away."

The squad of savages having the captives in charge, dwindled down to only two in the course of the day; parties of from three to six having successively left, as they came within striking distance of opportunities for massacre and rapine.

Altogether, John entered an oak opening which gradually changed to a dense brushy thicket, wherein the savages at last came to a halt for the night. They made no fire and after partaking of a frugal meal of parched corn and dried meat, they prepared to pass the night by binding the captives' hands and feet, and laying them close together, and then stretching themselves on each side of them.

John was lying next to the savages on one side, his thoughts busy with plans to some mode of escape. He had noticed that each Indian had laid his gun by his side, and had a tomahawk and knife in his belt, and mere boy tho' he was, he felt that if he could get possession of their weapons as they slept, he would be able to do something for himself.

The Walla Walla Statesman

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY EVENING

Walla Walla, W. T., Friday, Sept. 15, 1885

A New Route Proposed to Blackfoot.

The Portland merchants are just now greatly excited about securing for themselves the profitable

trade that promises to come this way from the little Blackfoot and Pelly Peninsulas, and we hope to see the same interest evinced by our own business men towards opening up the shortest and most profitable route to reach the mines, by repairing the Millan Road.

A gentleman who has traveled the "Pen d' Oreille route" furnishes the Oregonian with the following table of distances to Blackfoot city:

The Oregonian, however, leaves Walla Walla

"out in the cold," and computes from a landing

on Snake River, 14 miles above Palouse Ferry, called Snake's Ferry, to the bridge on the Spokane

river, (a good wagon road), miles 70

From Spokane bridge to Pen d'Oreille

Lake, (good wagon road), miles 42

From Lake to Horse Plains, (most of the distance navigable by rafts), miles 45

From Horse Plains to Indian Agency, miles 25

On the Jocko Fork of Bitter R't

river—easy land travel—miles 25

From Agency to Heligate, miles 25

From Heligate to Blackfoot city, miles 40

Total distance from Palouse to Blackfoot 393

To this we may add 46 miles from Walla

Walla to Snake river—good wagon road making a total of 439 miles.

If the Pen d'Oreille be practicable for steamboats for the distance named, as is thought,

then the actual land travel can be brought down to 313 miles. It is stated that the Hudson's Bay Company used to land their freight boats at Horse Plains, and from this point to the Jocko Reservation—about twenty-five miles—

A wagon road could be constructed with little work, through a prairie section.

A gentleman of Walla Walla, who has traveled

the road via the Couer d'Alene Mission

many times, and has also traveled on horseback

the Pen d'Oreille route, states that the table

presented by the Oregonian, as to distances, is in the main correct.

The Oregonian says:

"Parties are now energetically at work to place a steamer on the above lake, adapted to the trade. We have no doubt but that it will be complete the coming winter. The machinery has been all arranged for, and will be sent forward from this city within ten days. This is a magnificent undertaking—and one destined to be of great advantage to this country, and especially to the community of Walla Walla, which is undergoing a thorough prospecting, and being western slopes of the Rocky mountains, and being a private enterprise is actually greater than the immense work of the Central Pacific Railroad. The trade which will be secured by the success of the project, will be of far greater value than any we at present enjoy."

Wegmike this statement in order that our citizens may see what interest is being paid to the mining trade by our neighbors below, and to stimulate our merchants and traders generally to give their assistance to any practicable enterprise that promises to enrich themselves and the community in general.

Silver Lodes.—Considerable excitement has been manifested in certain quarters, within the past week or two, about a quartz ledge said to have been lately found at Florence mines. The ledge—so the story goes—has been tested and proved to be fabulously rich in silver—laying the richest washoe quartz completely in the shade. Another quartz ledge, we are told, is undergoing a thorough prospecting somewhere in the Couer d'Alene mountains. The story of this ledge is that one of the victims of the Masses, Editors.—Inasmuch as my last issue of "local" passed editorial inspection, I trust you will not be surprised to find it and, to begin with, what more interesting theme could be suggested than the subject of schools?

Mr. W. P. Young, states that the Public school of this city will likely be re-opened by November or December. I had the pleasure of inquiring of Mr. T. the actual condition of the school system, and he has been so kind as to

no doubt, have readily acceded to my request

on this score, judging, however, from a statement published in your paper some two months ago, it is fair to conclude that the "situation"

of things is somewhat "modified." There are some 200 children living in the Walla Walla

District, and it is high time that the public school be established upon a permanent and satisfactory basis. The system of public school education is the proud boast of our land, and even on the Pacific slope is fast attaining an elevated and creditable position. The custom which has been in vogue for the past five years of employing, as teachers, Tom and Dick,

and a host of other school-seekers, is a pernicious in the long run, in the very existence of the country, "his time it was "played out." Observation has convinced us that there is entirely too much of the routine and treadmill style of managing some of the public schools. The Port Cowper appreciated

this fact in his "Proemium, or Review of Schools," he believes that

"For public schools 'tis public folly feeds,

And the school-seeker's greedy hand

With pack-horse constancy we keep the road,

Cooked or straight, through quags or thorny

dells,

True to the jingling of our leaders' bells."

It is gratifying, however, to know that while

our public school slumbers, at the present writing four private institutions of learning are in successful operation. Will you permit particularization? There are, then, the Academy of St. Joseph, the St. Joseph's school for boys, under the guidance of the Reverend Father O.

Delahanty. The school of Rev. Mr. Chamberlain and lady, and last, but not least, one of Mr. E. C. and Mrs. M. C. Moore, who have recently arrived here from the East. All of them are said to be well attended and have the encouragement of their respective friends and patrons.

TO EVERYBODY'S HEART it must be cheering to learn that amid all the bustle and hurry, and the great struggle for existence incident to a new country, the cause of religion is not altogether ignored. Not long since I conversed with a gentleman of the "cloth" on this subject, J.

R., and although I differ from him in some points of religious faith, I admired the frankness

and earnestness of his remarks. While he regretted more attention was not paid to spiritual affairs by the people of the valley, yet his heart

was glad to see that the noblest of the profession had been accomplished. The Reverend gentleman has been among the residents of Cottonwood, Walla Walla and Tulum, and has succeeded in organizing Sabbath schools at some of these points.

IMMIGRANTS.—Within the past week we have heard of a dozen families who have just crossed the plains. There are some among these immigrants who report that along the route they read posters advertising toward the Paget Sound country, and anxious inquiries were made as to the route to be taken. The route of the road for wagons from Walla to Fort Steilacoom, an account of which was given by Mr. T. F. Berry, in the Statesman of the 25th

EDS. STATESMAN.—The principal sensation

in political circles of Oregon is the set attempt made by the Democratic press to drive Judge Deady from public life, and defect his long-cherished reputation of getting himself elected United States Senator from Oregon. He appears to have laid himself open to censure in the Code Deady, by emphasizing in it about all the crudities of law-dinkers from Draco to himself. It writes in itself so many objectionable features that neither saint or sinner can endorse it, and the only chance for a lawyer to understand it is to first go insane and then read it up while the frenzy is on him. It is well known that Deady is a monarchist, an aristocrat, a law-quack and a "scholar" learned in

Notice. The business will hereafter be continued at the old Pioneer Stand, on Main street, opposite the Empress Hotel, by the undersigned, who, thankful for the liberal patronage extended him for the past four years, respectfully solicits a continuation of the same.

Notice. NOTICE is hereby given, warning all persons against purchasing a note, given to B. M. Washburn against W. H. Babcock, for $250.00, or thereabouts, as I have paid said note in full, and have ample proof thereof.

Notice of Final Settlement. NOTICE is hereby given that E. L. James has filed his final account, as the administrator of the estate of Samuel Leonard, deceased, in the Probate Court of Walla Walla County, W. T., and that Thursday, the 28th day of Oct., has been appointed for said final account to be read and approved.

FROM BLACKFOOT.—A party of seven or eight miners arrived here direct from Blackfoot this week. They came down after provisions, and report that unless supplies are transported into the mines very rapidly, the people there will experience starvation this winter.

A NUMBER of small parties of miners have passed through town this week, on their way to "Blackfoot." Although no one has returned from there with advised others to go, the "fever" appears to be spreading, and the prospect now is that there will be a general emigration in that direction from all parts of the upper country.

TERRITORY OF WASHINGTON,

The Stammering Wife.
BY JOHN G. SAKS.

When deeply in love with Miss Emily Pryce,
I vowed, if the maiden would only be mine,
I would always endeavor to please her,
She blushed her consent, tho' stammering lass
Said never a word, except, "You're an ass—
An ass—an ass—idiotic tesser!"

But when we were married, I found to my ruth,
The stammering lady had spoken the truth,
For often, in oblivious dudgeon,
She'd say,—"If I ventured to give her a jog
In the way of reproof, You're a dog—
A dog—a dog—matic curmudgeon!"

And once when I said, "We can hardly afford
This extravagant style, with our moderate board,
And hinted we ought to be wiser,
She looked, I assure you, exceedingly blue,
And fretfully cried, "You're a Jew—you're a Jew—
A very judicious adviser!"

Again, when it happened that, wishing to shirk
Some rather unpleasant and arduous work,
I begged her to go to a neighbor,
She wanted to know why I made such a fuss,
And naively said, "You're a cus—cus—cus—
You were always ac-cus-tomed to labor!"

Out of temper at last with the insolent dame,
And feeling that Madame was greatly to blame
For not me instead of caring;
I mimicked her speech,—"like a churl as I am—
And angrily said, "You're a dam—dam—dam—
A dam-egg instead of a blessing!"

Men are miserable when they try to be happy, as happiness comes at its own time,
and not when we call for it.
We are miserable when a friend turns against us.
When an enemy triumphs over us.
When we are sick.
When the means of subsistence vanish
and many mouths ask for bread in vain.
When the hope of immortality becomes
one of annihilation.
When the Creator takes back the loan of a child.
When there is no more prospect in life.
When there is none in Heaven.
When we wish for death in vain.
When we strive for life in vain.
When the man who protects you turns against you.
When Providence aids that man.
When life has been a great strife for bread, and must end without it.
When the family you have brought up proves worthless.
When you meet with a fortune and then
lose it.
When you read a tale that ends bad.
When you have a counterfeit bill, and don't know of whom you got it.
When you break your watch.
When you have the headache.
But most of all, when you have the heartache, and death the only remedy.
The happiest men are only happy at times
—the most miserable at times.

This Year's Western Emigration.—From data furnished by a Nebraska paper, the Virginia Enterprise estimates the Westward emigration so far this year as follows, adding the subjoined comments:

Month	WAGONS.	PERSONS.	STOCK.
May	5,000	20,000	40,000
June	4,454	17,816	36,000
April and July	3,151	12,604	25,200
Totals	12,605	50,420	101,208

Here is population and property enough for a sovereign State, yet so generally have they been drawn from the border States that they are scarcely missed. But a small portion of the emigration has reached California and Nevada. The greater part has settled in Montana, Colorado and Idaho. Montana has probably received the lion's share. That Territory, which abounds in fertile lands and possesses many attractions for the agriculturist, as well as the miner, has now a population of 50,000, and is beginning to discuss the propriety of applying for admission into the Union as a State. Thus is the mighty West, which ten years ago was scarcely mapped upon the Atlas of the Republic, being redeemed from the savages and hearn up into States to swell the number of stars upon the field of Old Glory.

EDITORS are becoming sensible now-a-days. Time was when a glass of whisky would call forth a half-column puff from some of them. Here's the way a reformed Pennsylvania "print" talks: "Somebody has brought a bottle of sour water into our office with a request to notice as lemon beer. If Esau was green enough to sell his birth-right for a mess of pottage, it does not prove that we will tell a four shilling lie for five cents."

The Victoria Chronicle has news of gold discoveries at Mt. Baker, near the 49th parallel, on Puget Sound. The diggings are on the Nootsoo or Lummi river, 70 miles from its mouth. Prospects yield seven cents to the pan. A nugget weighing three ounces had been taken out.

It is proposed to carry the Overland Mail by camels, to be imported to this country for that purpose. Omaha is named as the starting point on the Missouri, and Sacramento as the Pacific terminus.

WHERE soldiers have lost legs, feet or arms in the war, the Government helps them to this extent, in getting artificial ones: $75 for legs; $50 for arms; $50 for feet.

The War Department has figures showing that, including the estimated number of starved prisoners, the war has cost the United States over three hundred and twenty-five thousand lives.

Judge Dryden, one of the ejected Judges of the Supreme Court in Missouri, has brought suit for false imprisonment, laying the damages at $50,000.

Monroe, Michigan, is said to have eighty-two marriageable girls and only three single men.

A man behind the times is apt to speak ill of them. Probably they don't look well from behind.

"Knowledge is proud that he learned so much; Wisdom is humble that he knows no more."
