THE Northern Pacific, Yakima & Kittitas Irrigation Company in its great work of reclaiming 200,000 acres of arid land by building immense canals and irrigating the same has placed Yakima County in the front rank as the great Hop, Fruit, Vegetable and Hay producing section of Washington. In the center of this magnificent agricultural and horticultural country the Northern Pacific, Yakima & Kittitas Irrigation Company has plotted and laid out the TOWN OF ZILLAH and on Monday, June 27th, 1892, the town market. Zillah is 25 miles south of North Yakima on the river of that name and is the official terminus of the Motor Railroad to be built to North Yakima. Zillah is the headquarters of the company and handsome quarters are being erected to be occupied by the officials as soon as completed. Situated as this town is there are legitimate reasons why it should be prosperous, progressive and healthy. Investigate Zillah.

Bits of Gossip, Facts, Fancies, Fervents, and a Hedge-Podge of Paragraphs of Every Description.

Cle-Elum will celebrate the Fourth of July.

Rev. Rufus Chase has again gone to the Cour d'Alene country on a short vacation.

Died, at Yakima City, June 9th, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Dooley.

Mrs. Dudley Eshelman has returned from a visit with relatives in Killekita county.

Mitchell Gilliam and wife are making arrangements to move from Seattle to Walls Walls.

The people's party of Kittitas county has nominated John Catlin and J. F. LeClere for the legislature.

Charles Noll, of Yakima, and Miss Sarah E. McGinnis, of Kittitas, were married at Ellensburg, June 4th.

Phil Stanton received a telegram Tuesday to the effect that his father, who lives at Salem, was not expected to live. Mr. Stanton left for Salem on the afternoon train.

Senator J. T. Eshelman returned from Vancouver on Saturday last. He considers the republican presidential ticket a weak one, and has great confidence in the democrats wishing an overwhelming victory in November.

Charley Gonz, De Wah and Yung He, local Chinamen, recently purchased the ticket that called for $600 in a Portland lottery. They haven't received their money yet as there is some hitch in the proceedings; but they claim that the payment can't be avoided.

Ellensburg Capital: In Behrke's window is a sight fit for the gods. It is 148 ounces of gold amalgam of the value of $2,230, and is the result of a two weeks' run by Twest, Peterson and York on their Swank claim. The gold was obtained by the use of an arrastra, and the product speaks volumes for the Swank region.

Frank Maleny, of Puyallup, has arrived here to spend the summer with his uncle, J. O. Traynor.

Robert Lee Pardin, of Yakima, delivered the leading oration at the first annual commencement of the state normal school at Ellensburg, Monday evening.

The King County Fair and Agricultural association will hold a spring race meeting on the Kent kite track June 22d, 23d, 24th and 25th. The purses hung up aggregate $4,500.

Timothy Lynch has gone to the Fish Lake country, Kittitas county, where he will remain during most of the summer looking after the development of the Aurora mine, which is owned by himself and brother John.

The Wide Hollow well is down 700 feet, and work has been suspended owing to the funds being exhausted. A petition is in circulation asking the county commissioners to subscribe $500 to permit of the drill being sent down 300 feet farther.

J. T. McWilliams, who was formerly one of the engineer corps of the Northern Pacific canal, is now at Aberdeen, S. D. He writes that he is doing first rate there, considering that irrigation in Dakota is as yet a very young infant, and he has recently issued a pamphlet on the subject.

Harry C. Heerman, president of the Ontario Land company, stopped over in Yakima Sunday and took a drive over the country. He was greatly surprised and pleased at the amount of progress and development made, and said he considered the Yakima holdings of the company among his best property. Mr. Heerman will return here in September.

Promer will celebrate the Fourth of July. The programme embraces a picnic, oration, reading of the Declaration of Independence, foot racing, sack racing, wheelbarrow racing, horse and mule racing, leaping, vaulting, dancing on the platform in the afternoon, and grand ball and pyrotechnical display in the evening. Prizes will be given to the winners of the various contests.

Tasoma is to have a grand musical festival on the 21st and 22d of June, at which Mrs. L. C. Mackison, a sister of Mrs. John G. Boyle, will take a leading part as soprano. The Seattle Post-Intelligencer says that Mrs. Mackison's voice "reveals dramatic fire, flexibility and sweetness beyond description." An effort is to be made to induce Mrs. Mackison to visit Yakima and assist in a coming musical event.

The contract for S. J. Cameron's residence has been let to Brooker & Son, their bid being $2,500.

H. K. Owens, son-in-law of Col. H. D. Cook, has been appointed chief engineer of the upper Kittitas ditch, which is to be built by J. H. Wells and associates.

The prospect of a ditch covering the land of east Kittitas has stimulated filings at the land office, and many of the residents of our sister county have been here during the past week and a half making filings on claims.

Judge J. R. Lewis returned to Seattle Monday. In company with his two sons and A. W. Engle he will return in August for a hunting and fishing trip up the Matchee. The editor of THE HERALD will make a member of the party.

Willis P. Haggard, of Pennsylvania, the eminent authority on agricultural matters, who recently visited this section, says: "The Yakima country is going to be a great hop country in my estimation, and I never saw finer fruit farms anywhere."

The cash received by the Roslyn Relief committee from abroad was $6,900.19; from Roslyn $2,165.50; total, $9,065.69. As the Knights of Pythias have levied an assessment of 50 cents per member for this object, the fund will be swelled to over $10,000.

On Saturday last Col. A. H. Reynolds made an assignment of his grocery store to Sam Vinson for the benefit of the creditors. One hundred cents on the dollar will be paid, but the colonel was forced to retire owing to his own poor health and that of his wife, as the business was too confining.

Last week funds in the hands of the Roslyn relief committee, amounting to $8,000, were distributed among the widows and orphans of the miners killed in the recent disaster. Thirty-six per cent of this amount was divided pro rata among the widows, and 64 per cent among the orphans. The next distribution will take place in three months. Money is still coming in from all parts of the country.

The eleventh annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic will be held at North Yakima next year. It will attract to this city a greater number of strangers than we have ever before called upon to entertain. The various poets of Washington and Alaska can feel assured that their representatives will be heartily welcomed, and that the well-known hospitality of Yakima will not fall on this occasion.

John A. Stone planted 65 acres of hops on his Selah valley ranch this spring, without the intention, however, of putting them this year; but the growth of the vines has been so strong that he is now having the poles hauled, and expects to get very satisfactory returns on his outlay. Next year he will add 35 acres to the area of the yard.

To Sell Fish.

Fish is either boiled, broiled, baked or fried. In all cases it is to be treated on the same principle as meat. When put to boil in cold water, fish, like meat, will part with its substances, which will go to enrich the water it is cooked in. To make a soup of it, or a fish-jelly, which is very delicate, this would be the right way; but to boil fish which is to be eaten it is necessary to put it into boiling water. To know the right moment when a fish is done is not so easy an affair as you might think. It depends not merely on the size of the fish, but also on its kind, on the nature of the water it has lived in, and on the time passed since it was killed, and on the water it is being boiled in. An undone fish is disgusting, while an overdone one is tasteless and mostly tough. After fifteen minutes from the time a fish has been put on the fire one has to be on the watch. If the fish is small or thin it most likely will not stand a second's longer cooking. If large it may need half an hour to be well done, or even more. Experience and a certain fine instinct have to guide you. One sign—and a pretty safe one—is to try a fin. If it gives way easily to a slight pull the fish is done.

Success is already assured the project which an association, under the auspices of the board of lady managers, has of erecting several dormitories where women, especially those of the industrial class, can obtain neat, respectable and cheap living quarters while visiting the exposition. The association is selling $100,000 of shares of $10 each to enable it to carry out the project. Each share entitles the holder to its face value in room and lodging at 30 cents a day. No sooner had the details of the project been published than hundreds of letters of hearty commendation and many applications for stock were received. More than $30,000 of stock was taken before the articles of incorporation could be obtained. The lady managers living in Chicago subscribed for $25,000 of stock. The amount now taken is about $75,000.

New poster type just received at THE HERALD office. THE HERALD also carries the largest stock of job papers to be found in central Washington. Taste and purse can both be satisfied.

Official Paper of North Yakima. Born of the republican presidential nomination were born in Ohio. Benjamin Harrison will be 59 years old on the 24th of August, and Whitelaw Reid will be 35 on the 27th of October.

TOM REED, of Maine, shows up in a poor light through violating the code of convention etiquette and making a personal canvass for votes for president. He merited the rebuke of receiving only four votes.

MISS ANNE L. WINSOR, daughter of ex-President C. B. Wright of the Northern Pacific, is pronounced the champion lady rider of the world in the high jumping class. At a riding school in Philadelphia her horse recently cleared 6 ft. 2 in. above the tan bark.

THE Walla Walla Union-Journal calls the gloomy reception of the nomination of Harrison and Reid "enthusiasm of the reasoning kind." That is very good but THE HERALD would suggest that "gladness of the mournful stripe" would be an improvement.

A. M. CARSON and Nelson Bennett were elected national committeemen. The delegation cast six votes for Blaine, one for Harrison and one for McKinley.

It doesn't pay to ride a high horse. We can't keep it up, and even if we could we would soon find it a thoroughly unsatisfactory steed. For instance, if I covet a cake that some one else is carrying home from the bakery, and if I can get the citron and raisins and icing, and a good share of the dough besides, will it not be more natural, and more sensible, too, for me to possess myself of and enjoy all these good things instead of walking by on the other side of the street, endeavoring to argue myself into the belief that I am not hungry and would not eat cake anyhow, simply because I can get every crumb and the paper it is wrapped in?

JOHN L. METCALP, the Stevens county representative, who started the late legislature by walking up the aisle with $500 in his hand, which he claimed was given him to vote for Calkins, has been heard from. He disappeared after the adjournment of the legislature and has just been discovered at Kalo bay, Stevens county, where he has a job of chopping wood.

The latest combine is said to have been arranged at Minneapolis, by which Allen is to be elected senator and Nelson Bennett is to have the republican nomination for governor. The arrangement of the deal is accredited to Boss McGraw, of Seattle, but it will be found that the people will have something to say about carrying out the provisions of the agreement.

HEAVY WATERBURY made a prophesy in three parts regarding Blaine. He would have been looked upon as possessing more of the qualifications of a seer if he had left the last two off. Here it is: "Blaine will not be nominated; if nominated he will be defeated; if elected he will die the day before his inauguration. Fate has decreed that Blaine shall never be president."

The nomination of Whitelaw Reid for vice-president will add nothing to the strength of the republican ticket. It is a concession to the wealthy campaign contributing element of New York. Mr. Reid does not stand well with the laboring men. He has vigorously and persistently fought the typographical union and only discharges his "rat" printers when the presidential bee begins to buzz around in his bonnet. Thirty-nine thousand union printers will remember his course, and tens of thousands of members of other union organizations, who are bound by the fellowship of labor, will not neglect to show their disapproval of his methods when the November election rolls around.

That the republicans feel the danger of the tenure of their hold on the administration reins, is evidenced by this dispatch, which was sent out from Minneapolis just previous to the nomination: "In Clarkston's room this morning several delegations were brought in, and addresses were made to them by Clarkson, Washburn and Gallager, in which they depicted an almost dangerous condition of affairs unless the republican party can nominate a man who can command the entire republican vote. Including those republicans who, since 1893, have drifted into the farmers' alliance. Each of the three speakers declared that they had no personal feeling against Harrison, and referred to the many courtesies they had received at his hands, but declared as honest republicans having the interest of the party at heart, they believed that Blaine was the only man who could be elected. They said they did not regard any other man as capable of saving the party from defeat."

THE RANKS ARE THINNING.

The following table, prepared by Capt. Fred C. Ainsworth, of the medical department, U. S. A., giving the probable length of time the soldiers of the late war will live, is of interest to all who wore the "army blue."

Table with columns: Year, Survivors, Year, Survivors. Rows show data for years 1862 through 1868.

Leaven's chart gives the total number engaged on the Union side as 2,775,344, divided as follows: White troops, 2,404,094; sailors and marines, 101,307; colored troops, 178,978; Indians, 2,850. Thus it will be seen that since the war began, in 1861, there have died 1,817,072, or more than 65 per cent of the whole number engaged.

HARRISON THE NOMINEE.

Notwithstanding the Blaine hurrah, Harrison was nominated on the first ballot. His strength was largely from those states that never cast a republican electoral vote; and from the states, other than Indiana, that are accredited as doubtful, his support was of a meagre character. The nominee will enter the campaign under most unfavorable circumstances. The fight in the convention was a bitter one, and while the republican managers will make every effort to pacify the disgruntled element, there cannot be that harmony nor that unity of feeling and purpose that is required to achieve success. Even among his personal following Mr. Harrison is not calculated to inspire any enthusiasm, and the contest on the republican side gives promise of being a dogged one to prevent the loss of office and power. Already there are intimations, and McKinley, whom the party looked upon as a highly protected saint, is openly charged with having secretly connived to bring about his own nomination while professing unadulterated allegiance to the cause of the president. The Blaine managers have retired to their tents and refuse to come forth, while the rank and file of his supporters either openly express their disapproval of the nomination or maintain that sullen silence which bodes no good to the chieftain who is so distasteful to them.

A BRIGHT WOMAN'S CHAT.

There is no reward, no success, no general recognition that can give a woman such a feeling of utter content as the knowledge that some one person is satisfied with all she does.

It doesn't pay to ride a high horse. We can't keep it up, and even if we could we would soon find it a thoroughly unsatisfactory steed. For instance, if I covet a cake that some one else is carrying home from the bakery, and if I can get the citron and raisins and icing, and a good share of the dough besides, will it not be more natural, and more sensible, too, for me to possess myself of and enjoy all these good things instead of walking by on the other side of the street, endeavoring to argue myself into the belief that I am not hungry and would not eat cake anyhow, simply because I can get every crumb and the paper it is wrapped in?

There are only two things we cannot live without—hope and sleep. In our ordinary life they are dear friends and go hand in hand, and when trouble comes they take turns in staying with us. It is sleep that is most practical and constant to us, for it never lets hope stay very far away and can always call it back, and it always will. Sleep brings us pictures of joys past and to come that even hope is powerless to show. Sleep shows us all the crooked lines in our life picture straightened out and made perfect, and brings to our side those who are too far away for even long-armed hope to reach. Sleep can even restore to us those who are in death's cold arms. There is only one advantage held by hope. Hope is the only flatterer on earth who is a true friend.

THEIR COOL SUMMER FABRICS.

Some Combinations of Colors—Green and White, Black and White, Pale Pink and Blue.

It is not altogether the thinness of fabrics or the looseness of style that gives to a summer gown that cool, airy effect so much sought. The thinnest, looziest gown ever devised, if made of some shades of red, would give an impression desirable enough at Christmas, but hopelessly warm for July. Pale pinks and blues are fairly cool looking; delicate lavenders even more so, while a combination of green and white leaves nothing in the way of airiness to be desired. Black and white also, in the proper combination, are deliciously cool to look upon. One of the daintiest summer evening dresses shown this season was a soft, plain black China silk, with a white chiffon flouncing about the slightly pointed neck and at the end of the loose elbow sleeves. Another marvel of simplicity and coolness was a black grenadine, with a fine white thread at intervals of half an inch apart. It was made with a rather full bodice, loose sleeves and plain skirt, full in the back. Dainty rosettes of white "baby" ribbon finished the sleeves and fastened the girle.

Ribbon trimming is used a great deal on all summer gowns, whether they are of gingham, silk or gauze. The prettiest gown is a gingham in narrow stripes of blue and white. The plain skirt is full in the back, and is trimmed with rows of ribbon ruche. The bodice has a pointed yoke effect in white, and surprise folds of the gingham cross into a deep corslet, which is trimmed with a ruche of blue ribbon. The full sleeves end in deep, plain cuffs, which have a ribbon ruche both at elbow and at waist.

A novel bodice for the woman who is tall and slender enough to wear it is made of white China silk and trimmed with the silk embroidered in pale greens. There is a round yoke of the embroidered silk, onto which the plain is gathered with a narrow ruffle effect. The waist is made so long that the end turns up under and gives a baggy blouse effect. The sleeves are also very full and end in ruffled cuffs of the green and white. And the wearer of such a combination will look, on the hottest days in summer, as cool and crisp as lettuce leaves or leeks.

Another combination of black and white with the white predominating, is white crape de chine. The skirt is plain, with a slight suggestion of drapery in front and a few plaits in the back. The

AMMONIA IN BAKING POWDER.

Discussion Before the American Chemical Society.

Chicago Tribune: To the editor of the Tribune:—I have just seen the report in your issue of Sept. 3, of the discussion at the Washington meeting of the American Chemical Society, Aug. 18, relative to the use of carbonate of ammonia in baking powders.

This report is incomplete and incorrect in many particulars, and as the paper which precipitated the discussion was read by me and was based upon my own experiments, I desire to make certain corrections in the interest of the truth and for the benefit of the large number of your readers to whom the question is one of great moment.

The paper as read before the society related that ammonia in baking powder is retained in the bread by reason of its affinity to the gluten. The consensus of opinion as expressed during the discussion was against the use of carbonate of ammonia in baking powder with the only exception of Dr. McMurrie, who is now an employe of a baking powder company which uses carbonate of ammonia in its baking powder.

Of the other parties mentioned as having taken part in the discussion were Professor Dr. Barker, of the university of Pennsylvania, who is the president of the society and one of our highest authorities. In an answer to a pleading by Professor McMurrie that only small quantities of ammonia were used in baking powders, he stated: "No matter how small the quantity is, I must decline to be dosed medically without my consent when taking my meals."

Dr. E. H. Bartley, formerly chemist of the Brooklyn Board of Health and Professor of Chemistry at the Long Island College, likewise named, did not, I believe, take active part in the discussion, but is already on record as strongly opposed to the use of ammonium carbonate in baking powders.

Dr. Richardson volunteered only the question whether the flour used in the experiments was of good quality, of which I assured him by stating that it was the best and the flour used in my family. Professor Hallett was not present.

Your article is misleading in so far as it gives the impression that ammonia disappears on baking. My actual tests agree with those made by others, showing that ammonia remains in the bread. My investigations simply assign a new cause for its retention. H. EDELMAN, Ph. D. Note.—Dr. Edsman, the writer of this communication, is well known in scientific circles, and was for twelve years chemist of the New York board of health. The baking powder company above referred to is the Royal Baking Powder company of New York, and the employe Dr. William McMurrie, who defends that company's use of ammonia; is in such much advertised government authority. There is no such office known under our government as that of government or United States government chemist.

Of the other parties mentioned as having taken part in the discussion were Professor Dr. Barker, of the university of Pennsylvania, who is the president of the society and one of our highest authorities. In an answer to a pleading by Professor McMurrie that only small quantities of ammonia were used in baking powders, he stated: "No matter how small the quantity is, I must decline to be dosed medically without my consent when taking my meals."

Dr. E. H. Bartley, formerly chemist of the Brooklyn Board of Health and Professor of Chemistry at the Long Island College, likewise named, did not, I believe, take active part in the discussion, but is already on record as strongly opposed to the use of ammonium carbonate in baking powders.

Dr. Richardson volunteered only the question whether the flour used in the experiments was of good quality, of which I assured him by stating that it was the best and the flour used in my family. Professor Hallett was not present.

Your article is misleading in so far as it gives the impression that ammonia disappears on baking. My actual tests agree with those made by others, showing that ammonia remains in the bread. My investigations simply assign a new cause for its retention. H. EDELMAN, Ph. D. Note.—Dr. Edsman, the writer of this communication, is well known in scientific circles, and was for twelve years chemist of the New York board of health. The baking powder company above referred to is the Royal Baking Powder company of New York, and the employe Dr. William McMurrie, who defends that company's use of ammonia; is in such much advertised government authority. There is no such office known under our government as that of government or United States government chemist.

HERALDINGS

O. M. Dupuy, of Spokane, was a Yakima visitor Monday.

Born, Wednesday, June 15th, to the wife of George Faltmeyer, a daughter.

Dr. W. H. Hare made a visit to Spokane this week to consult John L. Wilson and other republican chieftains.

T. F. Meyer, of the firm of Snelling & Meyer, returned from the Sound this morning.

H. C. Humphrey was a visitor at Spokane this week attending the grand lodge of Masons.

Miss Sadie Ward, who has been attending school at Seattle, returned home this morning for the summer vacation.

Several of the merchants of the city are endeavoring to inaugurate the early closing movement for the summer months.

You can save 20 per cent on boots and shoes and get leather and not paper goods, at Schott the Shoe Man's. 21st.

The Yakima Artesian well company is down over 600 feet, and is having some trouble through encountering boulders occasionally.

A telegram received from Ellensburg is to the effect that the hose team of that place will not contest for the racing pennant this year.

Have just received the largest and most complete stock of shoes ever received in this city at prices lower than ever. Schott the Shoe Man. 21st.

Ladies fine shoes in B. C. D. E. KE widths in hand-turned, and handwelt, in common sense and opera lasts. Come and see them at Schott the Shoe Man's.

Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Granger left for Tacoma Wednesday to attend the commencement exercises at the Annie Wright seminary where Mrs. Granger was formerly a pupil.

County Treasurer George Nevin left Tuesday evening for Pennsylvania, for a brief visit with his mother and other relatives, whom he has not seen for upwards of twenty years.

M. J. Unger, of the co-operative store, made a business trip to the Sound this week. He will have something to say to the public through THE HERALD next week that will be interesting.

J. J. Carpenter, S. J. Lowe and Andy Popovich left Tuesday morning to spend a week or ten days at a small lake at the head of Milk creek, 45 miles distant, where trout are said to be abundant.

Nick Driver, a crazy man, was arrested by the county officer Sunday. He was without coat, hat or shoes when taken in and had swam the Yakima, being dripping wet. Driver is from Seattle.

Some eighteen or twenty young people from this city attended the Christian church lawn party at the residence of L. D. Morris, Tuesday evening. The number present from the Ahtanum was not up to expectations.

The east-bound passenger was half a day late Sunday, owing to the rails spreading on the Pacific division. The locomotive was overturned, and although the engineer was caught under the machine he miraculously escaped with only a few scratches.

The time of the meeting of the Grand Army in this city next year will be decided by a local committee. The dates settled upon will be observed for annual meeting by the Sons of Veterans and the Women's Relief Corps, who will meet with the paternal organization.

Frank A. Petret, editor of the Seattle Spectator was a Yakima visitor Wednesday. He said that he had heard so much of Yakima that he was very desirous of making the trip and that his favorable expectations were fully realized. Mr. Petret is one of the bright young democrats of Washington and is convinced that James Hamilton Lewis can carry the state for governor.

The marriage of Thos. J. Redmon, of the firm of Walker & Redmon, to Miss Belle Dunn, daughter of Captain Robert Dunn, was celebrated at the residence of the bride's parents, Wednesday evening, June 15th, by the Rev. S. H. Chadler. The ceremony took place in the presence of the family and most intimate friends of the contracting parties after which all present sat down to a fruit supper. Mr. and Mrs. Redmon will dispense with the usual wedding trip and immediately begin housekeeping.

The people's party convention was held at the courthouse on Saturday last. There were 35 delegates in attendance. B. F. Vaughn was the temporary chairman, and J. P. Marks permanent chairman. The delegates elected to attend the convention for the eastern district of Washington at Sprague were L. C. Read, W. B. Clark, George Roberts, J. P. Marks, Leonard Thorp and B. F. Vaughn. The full delegation left for Sprague on Tuesday's train returning Thursday morning. The Sprague convention was opened with prayer, after which the mayor on behalf of the city welcomed the delegates. The delegates selected to attend the national convention at Omaha are L. C. Read, of Yakima; A. E. Young, of Garfield; O. O. Wright, of Douglas; A. H. Jewett, of Klickitat; W. M. Priest, of Lincoln; W. K. Griffith, of Spokane and C. W. Young, of Whitman. The delegates go unaccompanied by the sentiment of the convention was in favor of Weaver for the presidential nominee. The Omaha convention will convene on the 4th of July and as an appropriate feature of the day the number of delegates has been placed at 1776. The chief orator of the Sprague convention was P. B. Warner, colored, of Stevens county. The delegates were well entertained and had the pleasure of witnessing a cavalry parade.

North Yakima not only attracts the attention of the investor, but it attracts the eye of the business and professional man as well. Dr. McCormick, who for two years practiced medicine in Tacoma, has, after investigating almost every town and city in the state, decided to locate permanently with us, for the reason, as he expresses it, that it is the best place. He has formed a co-partnership with Dr. Savage, who is favorably known in this community. Dr. McCormick comes well recommended, having practiced in Denver, Col., where he graduated at the head of his class; was a member of the Arapahoe County Medical association, and a member of the editorial staff of the Denver Medical Times. Having taken a special course in diseases of the chest and climatology, he says it is safe to presume that Yakima is destined to be one of the best health resorts on the continent.

Repeated telegrams sent to Ellensburg have finally resulted in a reply that there would be no Fourth of July celebration at that place, and so the citizens of Yakima feel released from that intangible obligation to repay the Ellensburgers' visit of last year, and will at once take steps to get up an attractive and creditable celebration here. As an informal conference Wednesday it was decided to call a mass meeting to be held at Murphy hall, Saturday evening, at 8 o'clock, when committees will be appointed and the general plan of program outlined. It is earnestly desired that the attendance at the meeting be large and representative as it is proposed to get up a celebration that will attract not only the residents of the immediate surrounding country but the Ellensburgers as well.

Delegate H. J. Snively and M. G. Willis left Wednesday evening for Chicago to assist at the nomination of Governor Cleveland for president. Mr. Snively has not been east since he arrived here some five or six years ago and it has been forty years since Mr. Willis left the middle states to grow up with the great northwest, and this will be his first trip beyond the Rockies in all that time.

The Republic, while publishing the list of the city officers elected by the council, neglected to mention J. G. Boyle as city attorney. The reason for this was that after the trouble through those good republicans, C. M. Holton and Boyle, which culminated in a street fight, Mr. Holton gave instructions that his opponent's name should never appear in that paper.

The land case of Wolf vs. Black has been decided in favor of the contestant, the general land office holding that Black could not make proof on his pre-emption, six years after filing, in the face of an existing, valid adverse claim. The decision is a great hardship on Mr. Black, who endeavored to carry out the provisions of the law as he understood them.

In the language of John G. Boyle, "Old man Shaw, Homer the painter, and Ed Whitson were the only ones pleased with the nomination of Harrison. John L. Wilson is all right, however. He isn't much larger than a cake of soap after a hard day's washing, but he'll get there just the same."

Gorton's minstrels will make a uniformed street parade at noon Monday, which will be preceded by a grand open air concert by Gorton's sold band. The parade will be led by two clever musket drill artists in Zouave costume, who do some wonderful work with rifle and bayonet.

The Washington delegation to Chicago is determined to represent this state in style. Elefant quarters have been secured at the Palmer House at a cost of $1.00 per day, and the entertainments of the delegation will be on a par with those of the Lyon and J. P. Murphy, of Everett, spent several days in Yakima during the past week, and filed on desert land in the Sunnyside country. They are young men of means and bring good letters, so the Herald bids them welcome to the watermelon belt.

L. D. McDonald, of the Rotary Well company, arrived on Tuesday from Tacoma. Mr. McDonald has been employed in the treasurer's office in that city, but resigned the other day owing to a cut in the salary from $4 to $3. The rotary well machine will be moved in a few weeks to the Sunnyside country and started to boring on those lands owned by individuals, which the irrigation company has not shown a disposition to supply with water.

Messrs. Katz & Smith will finish their irrigation work this month, and then lay off during the heated season. Mr. Katz says it is impossible to get a full day's work from either man or beast during the summer months.

There will be a strawberry festival at the Ahtanum Congregational church Friday evening, June 24th. A literary and musical program will be rendered and a good time is expected. All are cordially invited.

Erred Parker returned from the Sound Tuesday night, where he has been looking after mail contracts in which he is interested. Mr. Parker is expecting his brother here from Kentucky next week.

According to Sheriff Simmons, Robert Moulton and Horace Leach, typos on the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, will gladden the hearts of their friends in North Yakima by their presence about the first of July.

Mrs. Joseph Teal and Miss Teal, of Portland, mother and sister of Henry Teal of the First National bank, have been in the city for the past week on a visit.

Martin Michae's, a real estate dealer of Ellensburg, spent several days in the city during the past week, the guest of Henry Ditter and family.

H. J. Snively delivered an address before the literary societies of the Ellensburg normal school Tuesday evening.

John Dirks, of Ellensburg, spent the larger part of the past week in the city.

A dispute between Contractor Schmidt and the city council resulted in the closing down of all work on the sewer for the past week. Mr. Schmidt had used up the pipe that had been accepted by the engineer, and had made no provision for additional pipe, and the council fearing that the contract would not be carried out refused to issue a warrant for the $8,000 due the contractor unless he would give some assurance that the work would be prosecuted. Mr. Schmidt made threats that liens would be filed on the work unless the money was paid over, and several meetings of the council resulted; and after getting legal advice the members of the council concluded they were right in holding to their position. This morning Mr. Schmidt started in on the work with the intention of using the rejected pipe, but the probabilities are that he will not be allowed to proceed, as the council meets again to-night for the purpose of deciding on injunction proceedings.

S. J. Lowe is entitled to the credit of naming the Sunnyside country, which is now attracting so much attention. He was running section lines there one day, and the sun's rays were so warm as to be uncomfortable. Descending into the valley he found nothing but gloom and chill. The change was so radical that he remarked that the upper country could appropriately be called Sunnyside. This suggestion he conveyed to the late J. M. Adams, editor of the Signal, who carried out Mr. Lowe's views, and the great stretch of arid land, which is now beginning to blossom under the fruiting influence of water, was christened Sunnyside, by which name it has since been known.

P. H. Kruse, formerly a merchant of Walla Walla, but who recently purchased a land claim of Dr. B. M. Savage in the Rattlesnake mountain district, was in the city Tuesday. Mr. Kruse says that six or seven newcomers have located there of late, and that there is much complaint about roads, owing to the irrigation company having cut up the old traveled road between that section and North Yakima, and failure to put in bridges, thereby forcing the settlers to go many miles around and through unbroken sage brush to get here. The county commissioners should investigate this matter and see that the settlers are not inconvenienced in this respect.

Prof. W. N. Hull, the chalk talker, will give a lecture at the Presbyterian church, Friday evening. He is obtaining data regarding the various sections of this state for a large map of the state of Washington to illustrate his lectures throughout the east, where he is now headed. His drawings of Yakima are made after a thorough investigation and extended talks with the best posted men of this section. Everyone should see this map as Prof. Hull proposes to make it the strongest immigration factor that it is possible to get up within the lines of truth.

The Washington Irrigation & Land company with a capitalization of $150,000 has filed articles of incorporation for the purpose of doing business in Yakima county. The company is an offshoot of one of the largest of the eastern loaning companies, and will have unlimited backing. Its object is to buy and negotiate irrigation lands, loan on property and invest wherever there is assurance of good returns. Dr. E. E. Her, who was at one time associated with the parent company, will be the local manager, and R. B. Milroy the attorney.

Speaking of the opening of the Minneapolis convention, Bob Ingersoll said that "the sons of freedom would drink from the fountain of enthusiasm." They must have imbibed all of the republican enthusiasm that was laying around loose, for none of it has since been seen or heard of.

There has been no eastern mail for several days past, owing to a big washout east of Missoula. Many delegates to the Chicago convention are hung up there, but the railroad officials promise that Thursday's train will go through.

Andrew H. Smith, of the agricultural college commission, was in Yakima for a couple of days during the past week choosing the site to the Sunnyside country for the location of the state experimental station.

Mr. and Mrs. Keys and son, of Barneston, Neb., are in the city in the hope of benefiting Mrs. Keys' health. They have been here only a week, and already the lady feels greatly improved.

Correspondence is in progress looking toward the arrangement of the preliminaries for a horse team contest to take place in this city, July 4th, between the Yakima and Sprague teams.

Died, at North Yakima, Tuesday, June 14th, Erba Almira, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Griffin. The funeral was held from the family residence Wednesday afternoon.

George Ker is making arrangements to build a residence on the Moxee, between the home of his brother and that of H. B. Scudder. The new domicile will be a credit to the county.

Dr. B. M. Savage has entered into partnership with Dr. McCormick, late of Tacoma, for the practice of medicine. Dr. McCormick comes here with the highest of credentials.

Messrs. Katz & Smith are arranging to move their headquarters to North Yakima, the mosquitoes down on the ditch being so troublesome as to make life a burden.

Thomas Grennan, the popular clerk of J. B. Fogarty, came down from Ellensburg on Saturday last and spent the time until Tuesday visiting Yakima friends.

Marshal Henderson donned the star Wednesday. His assistants are Nat Yates and Alex McLean.

Frank Bartholet spent Sunday and Monday at Spokane, returning Tuesday morning.

A miner from the Gold Hill district in the city, having brought down ore from the Blue Belle mine to be sent to Tacoma for assaying. He is willing to wager that the ore will go $4,000 to the ton.

Born, Monday, June 13th, to the wife of Dr. E. E. Heg, a son. The doctor proudly boasts that the new comer is the first boy born on the hill.

Mrs. Ed Whitson gave a picnic at the Ahtanum, Wednesday, in honor of her niece, Mrs. Sharp, of Tacoma.

A CARD: To all kind friends who labored so lovingly with us during the illness and burial of our little darling, and to those sending such beautiful floral offerings we extend our heartfelt thanks.

H. A. and M. C. GARRIN. Gorton's Minstrels.

The above famed old-time organization, now in its 27th consecutive year, will appear at the opera-house Monday evening, June 20th, in an entirely new program of refined minstrelsy. Since his last Pacific coast tour the company has been increased in number to 25, all white men and high class, refined black-face artists. The following appeared in the Anaconda, (Mont.) Standard of June 7th:

"Gorton's minstrels appeared at Maguire's last evening to a large and enthusiastic audience. The first part was neat, the stage being draped with massive curtains of cream satin. The singing was excellent and the music first-class. In the second part all the specialties were exceptionally attractive. Gorton's company does not claim to be the greatest show on earth, and that is probably why it gives better satisfaction than some minstrels with more claim and promise than performance."

Ladies can attend this performance without the slightest misgiving, as there will not be a word or action to offend the most fastidious. Gorton's famous gold band will appear in open air concert at 12 o'clock noon, day of performance, corner of First street and Yakima avenue. A magnificent uniformed parade will follow the concert. Griffin and Marks, the most grotesque comedians in Europe or America, are a late addition to the company and will appear here. Seats at regular prices are now on sale at Jaseck's pharmacy.

John Dirks, of Ellensburg, seems to find attraction around the Indian school, as Cashier Steinweg and wife, accompanied by the Misses Sawyer, Jennie Wright and Dollie Barker, of North Yakima, visited the agency Saturday and remained until Sunday noon.

The boys in the Indian school have, under the guidance of their industrial teacher George Mattoon, planted and cultivated some good gardens this season.

John W. Clendenning, of Chattanooga, Tenn., is the last appointee as a teacher in the Indian school. His family will join him in July.

Summons by Publication. In the Superior Court of Yakima County, State of Washington. J. R. LEWIS, Plaintiff, vs. CHARLES L. LULL, GEORGE W. HALL, Defendants.

Action brought in the Superior Court of Yakima county, state of Washington, at North Yakima and complaint filed in the office of the clerk of said court on the second day of July, 1922.

To the above named Defendant, C. E. Grafston: You are hereby notified that J. R. Lewis, plaintiff, has filed a complaint against you in the Superior Court of Yakima county, state of Washington, at North Yakima, which will come on to be heard sixty days after the first publication of this summons, to wit: Sixty days after the 15th day of May, 1922, and unless you appear and answer the same on or before the 15th day of July, 1922, the same will be taken as confessed and the prayer of said complaint granted.

The object and prayer of said complaint and the nature and object of the action is to obtain judgment against the defendant Charles L. Lull for $10,000, the balance upon a promissory note, dated Sept. 25, 1920, with interest at the rate of eight per cent per annum from June 27, 1921, until paid, and to foreclose a mortgage given to secure said note, upon lots five and six, in block 104 in the city of North Yakima, according to the plat of record in the office of the county auditor of said Yakima county, and to foreclose her and foreclose all the equity and redemption of each and every of said defendants in and to said premises.

Witness my hand and the seal of said Superior Court, at this 7th day of May, A. D. 1922. DUDLEY ESHELMAN, County Clerk and Clerk of the Superior Court.

HARRISON AND REID NAMED

The Republican Ticket Not at All Pleasing to Local Partisans.

Democrats Looking Forward to a Walk-Away in November—Some Brief Expressions From Politicians.

The republican national ticket was named after a session of four days, but it only required one ballot, the balance of the time being consumed in committee work and filibustering. The Blaine boom proved to be mainly froth and feathers, while Harrison had the flesh, bone and sinew of the vote. The patronage system in the south told strongly, and from there the president got half of his support. The result was 535 1-6 votes for Harrison, 182 5-6 votes for Blaine, 182 for McKinley, 4 for Tom Reed and 1 for Lincoln. The nomination of Whitelaw Reid for vice president was made by acclamation.

In Yakima the bulletin boards were closely scanned by a number of politicians, but the interest did not seem to be as general as would naturally be supposed. Blaine was largely the favorite among the republicans, with McKinley a good second. The announcement of the result aroused no enthusiasm whatever, but acted rather as a wet blanket on party ardor. A HERALD reporter took the street the following day and courted expressions indiscriminately from republicans and democrats, with the following result:

L. S. Howlett—Harrison's nomination is stronger than Blaine's would have been. Whitelaw Reid adds no strength to the ticket. I know him personally, and he is unpopular among all newspaper men.

Harry Cooney—Harrison wasn't my man, but I guess I'll have to be satisfied. The ticket will be Cleveland and Gray.

Dr. Gunn—Harrison suits me as well as any body after Blaine.

O. A. Fechter—I'm very well satisfied. Think Blaine would have been easier to beat, but Cleveland can snow under either of them.

S. J. Lowe—The republicans don't enthrone worth a cent. We'll use some powder when Grover gets there.

David Guiland, sr.—Blaine was my choice, but Harrison is pretty good. He belongs to our party, so we will have to stick to him.

W. P. Sawyer—The head of the ticket suits me all right, but I am not much pleased with the tail.

Dr. W. H. Hare—The nominations are all right. McKinley was my personal choice, but I am inclined to think that Harrison is the strongest man who could be nominated.

S. O. Morford—I'm not taking a great deal of interest in national politics, but I am forced to concede that if Cleveland is nominated he will either win or give us an awful hard wrestle.

Mr. Snelling—Harrison's nomination suits me all right. I think his name is Dennis.

B. N. Coe—The nominations please me very well. I think the party sealed its doom when it put Whitelaw Reid on the ticket.

Sam Vinson—We have got the boys where the wool is short.

Capt. J. T. Kingsbury—Harrison can now return to the bosom of his family, at Indianapolis, and take Baby McKee with him.

Wayne Field—The nomination is all right, but I would rather it had been either of the other candidates.

Col. J. H. Taggard—How do the nominations suit me? Why, splendidly. I might as well say that as anything else.

Henry Dittus—The republicans will not find smooth sailing in Wisconsin, and I am not certain that that state will not vote the democratic ranks. The schoolbook episode has aroused the Germans, and they are a power there.

J. J. Carpenter—I think the ticket could have been improved.

R. K. Nichols—The nominations are good and strong, and I do not believe they can be overcome by the democrats. My personal choice was McKinley and Tom Reed.

M. G. Wills—If the Hill faction gets in and drills, as there is every reason to believe that it will, we'll walk away with the persimmon without any trouble.

James Glead—I thought they would be firing anvils in town, but it seems very quiet.

Robert Crory—It makes little difference to me—republican, democratic or farmers' alliance—it's all the same; but speaking from a republican standpoint my favorite would have been Blaine.

L. E. Sperry—The ticket satisfies me very well, but I can't feel as enthusiastic over it as I would had it been Blaine, you know.

Sheriff Simmons—I'm satisfied.

Phil Stanton—We've got to like it now.

Col. Reynolds—It's a strong ticket, and they've got the money to back it; but Dudley blocks of five don't go this time. Of course I can't vote that ticket, but we must not overlook its strength.

Henry Teal—I would have preferred to have seen Blaine nominated. Then we would have had an easier walkover.

George Wilson—I'm as good a republican as any of them, but I hope Cleveland will be nominated and elected.

Sam Chappell—Harrison and Reid will do well enough for the next four years.

Dr. G. J. Hill—Cleveland will be nominated, and as a result he will have fifty votes to spare in the electoral college.

W. A. Cox—The ticket is all right, for we can beat it.

Henry Allen—Of Harrison and Blaine I think the stronger man was nominated, but there is an amazing lack of enthusiasm. I believe Cleveland will be nominated on the first ballot.

W. L. Steinweg—The ticket suits me all right. I think Harrison will knock the spots out of Cleveland.

Mayor Wood—The ticket is a sound one, and with Cleveland nominated by the democrats there need be no fears about the safety of the country and good administration of the government.

Judge J. B. Lewis—Blaine would have won. I doubt Harrison's ability to do so. If the democrats put up Boies, of Iowa, he will sweep the country. In this state James Hamilton Lewis will be the next governor. He is wonderfully strong on the Sound.

Wm. Badger—The nominations are very respectable, but any good democrat who may be put up will win.

Dr. McAuslan—I can only look upon it as the best-up of the republican party.

Dr. B. M. Savage—The democrats are now fairly in it. Cleveland will be the next president.

D. E. Lesh—The nominations, to my mind, were very unfortunate. Harrison suits the east, and it will have to elect him. I have been sick ever since the news was received.

Moses Ward—The nominations suit me. Cleveland is the lamest man the democrats can put up. I don't think he can carry three states.

Jos. Light—With the present nominations and the withdrawal of Hill it leaves an open door for Cleveland to walk into the White House. What an awful drop it has been for Blaine! His remaining power will probably be used in knitting the ticket.

A. L. Fix—Harrison is all right now, but he won't be when Grover gets around.

Edward Whitton—Harrison was my choice, and I won several hats on his nomination.

Joseph Stephenson—I think Blaine would have been the stronger man. I want to see a man elected who will make some concession to the silver interests.

A. C. Walker—The nominations suit me. Mr. Blaine can now retire to his cottage at Bar Harbor, and remain there for the balance of his life undisturbed by any political calls.

T. M. Vance—The ticket suits me very well. If the democrats can win against any ticket, this is the one.

J. B. Reavis—There is no question but that the fight in the convention has weakened Harrison very measurably. The nomination of Reid is a highly respectable one, as he is a man of ability; but he is unpopular and can add no strength to the ticket. His position on the ticket is doubtless a concession to D. O. Mills and other heavy campaign contributors. If the factional fight in New York has ceased, as now appears probable, I think the democrats will have clear sailing.

Col. H. D. Cook—I was in hopes of voting for old man Blaine before he and I died, but there is no show now. As to the vice presidential nominees I don't enthrone worth a big D.

Capt. J. H. Thomas—It is a rattling good business ticket, but it is one of those cold blooded affairs that will create no enthusiasm. If I was a democrat and had power to name the ticket I would say Cleveland and Gray, or Cleveland and Boies—they would be the winners.

W. H. Chapman—The nominations suit me all right, but there will have to be harmony in the party to elect Harrison. The west was for Blaine, and Harrison must look to the east for his election. I wouldn't be surprised if this state went democratic. Harrison arouses no enthusiasm, and cannot hope to draw from the democrats or the neutral element.

Prosecuting Attorney Rockford—I do not give as much attention to politics as some others. I was a Blaine man, but I guess the ticket is as good as could be put up.

S. C. Henton—I would rather those fellows at Minneapolis had pitched up things a little different. There was too much wrangling.

Wonders of Yakima.

Payallop Connerer: Wonderful things he saw on his recent trip through the Yakima country—S. C. Kimball, the enterprising merchant. Off and away he went through the wildest region, thirty miles from town, through the Sunnyside region and the vast region to be made to bud and blossom by the big N. P. ditch. He saw fine orchards and wonderful fields of alfalfa, all resulting from irrigation. He also came near being drowned in the river at the identical spot where Mr. Smalley recently faced death.

The Yakima county commissioners are hereby ordered to at once build a bridge at that point, before some good man is completely drowned.

And let us all hope that the good people of Yakima may find a free field and an open roadstead to the markets of the world for the immense surplus products that blessed water is bound to bring from their wonderful soil.

Every one can remember the day when the dotted muslin was a synonym for simplicity. It was a dainty thing in white with little dots of white embroidered over it. It had a ribbon belt and required much work to be laundered, but it was always so "simple" and so "girlish" that to find it part of the wardrobe of the woman who lays claim to no such qualities is rather a surprise. But the muslin itself has changed since the days of its youth. It comes now with hints of color in its make-up and the dot of former days has become quite an elaborate little design.

WHITECAPS IN THE OKANOGAN COUNTRY.

A Gang in the Wenatchee District Terrorizes the Neighborhood and Lobbies Tributes on Settlers.

A well-organized gang of whitecaps exists and commits depredations in the vicinity of Lake Wenatchee and Mason creek, both in Okanogan county. The band consists of about twelve persons, and they seem to be organized for a specific purpose. They are all located on unsurveyed government land, and make a business of locating newcomers on the really, charging for these services some from $75 to $200. Members of the organization are engaged in trapping, and, of course, become thoroughly familiar with the lay of the country.

They will then spy out the best pieces of land, always on unsurveyed government tracts, throw up a few logs and claim that the piece of land is owned by some one in the neighborhood. When a would-be settler comes along they take him in charge and offer to secure the land for him for a stated sum. If the settler refuses to pay the price and locates regardless of them, he will soon be waited upon in the still watches of the night by the whitecaps, who plunder his cabin, tear down his improvements and give the victim of their ill will a few hours in which to leave the country.

Two outrages similar to this have recently been committed, and it has been ascertained that E. W. Montgomery is soon to be waited upon and ordered to leave. These atrocities are having a marked deteriorating effect on the settlement and prosperity of the lake country. Honest, industrious citizens with families are deterred from attempting to settle, and, for a most part, a rich section is given over to the hands of the lawless.

A number of the members have been identified, but proof sufficient to convict cannot be secured. One Allen, of whom but little is known, is said to be their leader, and a certain White, who has trapped in that section for a number of years, is pointed out as first Lieutenant. Barnard, Fulton, Bush and Flaherty are also said to belong to the demoralizing organization. Barnard was formerly pressman on the East Oregonian for a number of years.

BOB FORD SHOT DEAD.

The Slayer of Jesse James Killed By the Sheriff in a Creed, Colorado, Dance House.

Bob Ford, the slayer of Jesse James, met the fate that was certain to be his at Creed, Col., June 9th. In a dispute with Sheriff Kelly, in Ford's dance hall, the former drew his gun and fired the fatal shot.

[Bob and Charley Ford, under the direction of Governor Crittendon, of Missouri, shot and killed Jesse James on April 10th, 1882. They had been implicated in a train robbery and fled to Nashville, where they lived with Jesse James for a number of months. Early in 1882 Jesse James and his family removed to St. Joseph, Mo., where he lived under an assumed name for several months. At this time there was a reward of $10,000 offered by the state for the bandit, dead or alive. Bob Ford opened negotiations with Governor Crittendon for the betrayal of the famous robber.

He promised to bring in Jesse James dead or alive for the reward and a free pardon for himself and brother Charley. Knowing that it was impossible to take James alive he continued profession of friendship, and on the day named shot him through the back of the head in James' own house while the outlaw was hanging a picture. Both Fords were arrested promptly, but released by the governor. The alliance between Crittendon and the Fords killed the governor as a political factor, and since then he has dropped into obscurity in Kansas City. The assassination caused a big reaction in favor of the James boys. Charley Ford died a few years ago. Bob has been in a hundred rams in the past ten years in the mining camps of the west. He has been a gambler and a saloonkeeper. His place at Creed was the toughest in town.]

A gentleman under 40 years of age whose hair was rapidly becoming thin and gray, began the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor, and in six months his hair was restored to its natural color, and even more than its former growth and richness.

The Indians as Soldiers.

The Indians who have been called in the regular army seem to be making good soldiers. Secretary of War Elihu reports that the six companies of red men so far enrolled show great ambition to become proficient in military drill, that they are very neat, obey orders faithfully, and take much pride in wearing the army uniform. This result is an agreeable surprise to most army officers, who have held that while the Indian made a highly efficient scout, he would never make a trained soldier. It may be that the final solution of the Indian question will be yet reached by enlisting the warlike young men in Uncle Sam's army.

It is conjectured that a specific may yet be found for every ill that flesh is heir to. However this may be, certainly the best specific yet found for diseases of the blood is Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and most diseases originate from impure blood.

Billiardists, give attention; the billiard table at Shardlow & McDaniel's has been completely overhauled and is now as good as when it came from the factory, for it not only has been newly covered but a splendid set of genuine ivory balls have been purchased. A game of billiards and a glass of Faber's Milwaukee beer is a pleasant way to spend an evening and these are inducements which Messrs Shardlow & McDaniel have to offer. 11-1

The Seattle Board of Health.

The health officer, Dr. Sparling, and the board of health of Seattle do not hesitate to advise the public as to the qualities of the baking powders of the market, in order that consumers may avoid those which are impure and unwholesome. They have examined the reports of the state authorities of Washington, Oregon and California, made tests for themselves, and say: "Finding in analysis that the Royal is made of the highest grade of cream of tartar and bicarbonate of soda, and is entirely free from any adulteration, we heartily recommend it for its great strength, purity and wholesomeness."

A Great Liver Medicine.

Dr. Gunn's Improved Liver Pills are a sure cure for sick headache, bilious complaints, dyspepsia, indigestion, costiveness, torpid liver, etc. These pills insure perfect digestion, correct the liver and stomach, regulate the bowels, purify and enrich the blood and make the skin clear. They also produce a good appetite and invigorate and strengthen the entire system by their tonic. They only require one pill for a dose and never gripe or sicken. Sold at 25c. a box by James' Pharmacy.

Baldness is often preceded or accompanied by grayness of the hair. To prevent both baldness and grayness use Hall's Hair Renewer, an honest remedy.

New Railway Safety Device.

A new safety device for clearing obstructions from the track in front of electric cars, and especially for saving the life of any person whom the cars may run down, was tested in Boston last week. The fender, as it is called, consists of a triangular folding steel frame, over which is stretched a stout rope netting. It is attached to the front platform and is the width of the car. When an obstruction is seen on the track the motor-man releases the fender, which opens and spreads the net in front of the car, with the bottom of the frame about nine inches above the track, and so arranged as to easily catch and throw into the net any person standing on the track, no matter at what speed the car may be running. In the case of a person lying on the track, or a child that the fender might pass over, a projecting bar is struck and a big metal scoop is released and drops on the track in front of the wheels. This would pick up any object whatever, but not so tenderly as the net. A dummy of straw and sand was used in the tests, and the results were highly satisfactory to the railroad men present. The device is equally good for cable cars.

THE HAIR

When not properly cared for, loses its lustre, becomes crisp, harsh, and dry, and falls out freely with every combing. To prevent this, the best and most popular dressing in the market is Ayer's Hair Vigor. It removes dandruff, heals troublesome humors of the scalp, restores faded and gray hair to its original color, and imparts to it a silky texture and a lasting fragrance. By using this preparation, the poorest head of hair soon and beautiful. All who have once tried Ayer's Hair Vigor, want no other dressing. Galbraith & Sparks, Druggists, Sharon Grove, Ky., writes: "We believe Ayer's Hair Vigor to be the best preparation of the kind in the market, and sell more of it than of all others. No drug store is complete without a supply of it."

Becomes Luxuriant

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor with great benefit and know several other persons, between 40 and 50 years of age, who have experienced similar good results from the use of this preparation. It restores gray hair to its original color, promotes a new growth, gives lustre to the hair, and cleanses the scalp of dandruff."—BENEDICTO OCHOA, Madrid, Spain.

After Using

A number of other preparations without any satisfactory result, I find that Ayer's Hair Vigor is causing my hair to grow."—A. J. OSMONT, General Merchant, Indian Head, W. V.

"Ayer's Hair Vigor is the only preparation I could ever find to remove dandruff, cure itching humors, and prevent loss of hair. I can confidently recommend it."—J. C. BUTLER, Spencer, Mass.

"My wife believes that the money spent for Ayer's Hair Vigor was the best money she ever made. It has given her so much satisfaction."—JAMES A. ADAMS, St. Augustine, Texas.

SISTER MARTHA

By AUGUSTA LARNED

(Copyright, 1922, by American Press Assoc. Inc.)

CHAPTER I

In a moment Sister Martha was in the room.

The station had stopped at Miss Mayhew's door, thereby causing a state of flutter and agitation in the breast of Miss Mayhew truly pathetic to contemplate. The idea of company was always present to this lonely lady as a sweet, sympathetic longing, but the reality brought with it undignified dismay.

Now she clasped her pale, chilly fingers together and held them fast to the invalid chair, craning her neck from behind the curtain, as a small, black, shiny trunk was taken out from the back of the carriage, and a short, stout woman in a gray traveling dress, with a large straw hat tied down over her ears, making a rather aggressive pose in front, stepped briskly out of the carriage and pointing her parasol with a businesslike air directed the driver to take in her luggage.

Miss Mayhew gave a faint groan as she felt back among her cushions with an air of passive injury. The evil was upon her, and she had been warned and had not heeded the warning. Events with Miss Mayhew generally cast their shadows before, and she learned the full meaning of the "signs" after they had come to pass.

Now Miss Mayhew, when she heard Martha Whitcomb enter her front hall like a strong northeaster, shivered, turned pale, as if it were possible, and shrank into her shawl and wraps in which she was enveloped like a butterfly in its chrysalis. She was afraid of Sister Martha; not afraid of bodily injury from her hands, but of harsh judgments and hard eye beams and skeptical looks in return for her accustomed pliancy over the facts of life.

"There was a frightful frankness about Sister Martha that Miss Mayhew dreaded like a cold douche. Now the first words she uttered were characteristic: 'I know you ain't glad to see me, Vinie, I didn't expect you would be, but Ann Baskett will be mad enough to tear her hair because I've come. But harvest was over, 'twixt corn and pig killing, you know, and I could get away as well as not, so I took a notion to come. We don't always know what's good for us, Vinie, and I thought a sport of company might live you up a bit. And as for Ann, I've brought her a linsy woolsey piece for a petticoat, so I guess she won't bite me.'

Miss Mayhew pulled herself together and looked at her sister-in-law with watery eyes. She made no direct response to this candid speech, nor was any expected from her. 'I s'pose you're hungry,' she said anxiously. 'Our dinner's over and Ann has washed the dishes. She's makin a tea cake now. Would you like a dropped egg on toast, Marthy?' 'I've had my lunch,' said Mrs. Whitcomb, waving away the suggestion. 'Brought it along with me from home. Cold chicken and sandwiches and pickles and cheese. Don't you bother your head about me, Vinie.'

Miss Mayhew heaved a sigh of relief. 'You can go right up chamber, Marthy. You know the spare room, of course, and it's all ready except s'ring and fresh water.'

glasses to the shaded par, and they come five cents the glass higher than some other folks.'

"Of course they did, Ann. There's no other jelly or preserves like yours made in this village. But tell me, does she sleep well tonight?"

"I guess she sleeps a good deal more'n she thinks she does. Sometimes she'll say she hasn't shed an eye all night; but I've my own opinion about that. There's some that can nap considerable when they think their eyelids are pined apart. But I must say I never knew such leary as hers. After dark a cat can't jump anywhere in the street but she knows it."

"Don't you think, Ann, she could exert herself more if she tried?"

Ann closed her lips like a steel spring and opened them with a show of reluctance. She was flattered by Mrs. Martha's attentions, but still in her breast there was a stanch, grim kind of loyalty to her sister-in-law. She had taken her broom now to brush up some invisible dust upon the floor, and she leaned on the handle and looked at her visitor with her pebble gray eyes.

"Sometimes I think she could, Miss Whitcomb, and sometimes I think she couldn't. When the neighbors cooed her up to take a ride with soapstones and hot water bottles and something strenuous to take on the way, she is generally in bed a day or two afterward; the bones of her legs seem to be soft—all gristle, or what-over you call it. When she tries to walk she sinks right down like empty bags. Once a year she comes into the garden. When I see the dandelions spottin the grass and the plumbagos white up again, I know she'll come out, and maybe totter twice around to look up under the old trees and notice the lark in bloom. There's a pair of blue birds that's come a good many years runnin to build in the crutch of the tough apple tree. She wouldn't have them disturbed for the world and she stops and looks at the nest a long time, and at the old ones bringing bits of grass and straw to build with, she brings her in mostly in my arms and put her down on the couch and river her up warm, and revive her with the smell-in-salts."

"Well, it beats all," said Mrs. Martha. "The Mayhews, all I ever knew, were strong folks—never had hip or neuritis or no kind of nerves. Good, sensible, solid people. Ain't make it out. What does she do, Ann, there all day long by the settin room window?"

"She likes to see the folks go by, and to nod and smile to the school children she knows all their little ones by sight, even if she don't fetch their names. And when one of them is sick and kee home from school seems as if the very vitches told her. Then I hev to pot with some jam or jelly or buttered Mary or yellow haired Jim, and to say how Miss Mayhew sent me, and hopes the jelly will help him to swallow the doctor's nasty stuff. When it's summer she sends flowers, makes up the little bunches of sweet peas and other things that a nice young lady in town, and while she's doin of 'em seems as if she just does. She'll hold the little socks on her hand a half hour together, them blue and pink ones, and look kind of smilin as if she was seein somethin that wasn't there. Now she's makin a white-blanket, and she's workin hard at it, and she's real happy lookin when she's absorbed in that work. I've told her she might sell them things for a hand some little sum, but she allus shakes her head. If she couldn't give me away it wouldn't do her a mite of good. You see it do her a mite of good, and she puts that money she saves in wool and ribbons for the babies."

"Is the cap'n at home now?" asked Mrs. Martha suddenly, as she seemed sucking the core of the pear.

I can look right down on the front door and see the Wood girls' beax when they come to call. Does that oldest Wood girl scream around in the front yard as much as she used to?"

"I guess not quite," said Ann; "she's been gettin engaged, and I shouldn't wonder if it had had a subduin effect."

"Gettin engaged, has she? Why that makes these windows real excitin. And there's the back of Cap'n Bligh's house and part of his orchard. What a sight of apples he's going to have on his trees—all grafted fruit. The smoke is going up from his kitchen chimney straight as a column."

"He's lived alone ever since his sister died. Don't he no woman about except old Mrs. Brewster. She cleans the house once a week and does his washin. He cooks his own meals all but bread, and that he buys at the baker's—ken, they say, brile steak and make coffee and johnny cake, and even pies, but I shouldn't wonder to see 'em go."

"It's the strangest thing I ever heard of," said Mrs. Martha, falling into a muse, "that he should be livin there with her, only a stone's throw apart, just as if they was shut up each in a separate tomb."

Ann went out and shut the door without making a reply. She had said all she meant to say about Cap'n Bligh and his affairs. "She'll be kerryin things from me, and spread 'em over the town," was her inward, self rebuking remark as she went down stairs.

Mrs. Whitcomb soon followed, and after descending the shallow, near steps, she opened discreetly the parlor door on the other side of the prim, cold hall from where Miss Mayhew sat at her window. There was but a dim light in the large room, for the shutters were closed, the shades drawn and only a little ray here and there filtered through the slats. The room was spacious and stiff with old-fashioned gentility. There was a high wood chimney piece with girandoles and clumsy vases, and over it hung a lugubrious engraving called "Washington's Death Bed." The carpet was of an antique pattern known as Venetian stripes, now worn to dingsiness. The furniture was of slippery haircloth, but cased in heavy lumbering frames. An astral lamp stood on the center table in a bead mat, and there was a little tray with a few yellow cards and one or two of Miss Mayhew's valentines. There was also a highly embellished "keepake" of the year 1850, and the family Bible heavily gilt and looking new and as if never opened. It was spotted clean, for Ann swept and dusted the rooms every fortnight, gaining the dust and curtains and covering all the furniture.

Mrs. Whitcomb gazed around with the feeling natural to her economical soul that much good material was going to waste. Behind the parlor was an ample dining room furnished in the same tasteless style. She remembered the Thanksgiving and merry makings of mother Mayhew's time, but after a moment's consideration she stepped to the kitchen door and said to Ann: "If folks call to see me I wish you would show them into the parlor."

Ann fairly gasped. It was more than two years since "folks" had sat familiarly in that room.

Whitcomb did not commune, and there was but little opportunity for gossip and inquiries on the church steps after meeting.

To be sure, Mrs. Wood had called in greeting across the road to her. The Woods were all a rather noisy, out-of-door kind of folk, and fulfilled most of their social duties over gates and fences. The house was so near she could catch the drip of conversation from the window. At first it was one of her neighbors, Miss Angie's, who looked at her with a reference to her crops, and the thought had never occurred to her that it was in the least unreasonable.

There was a tennis court at the side of the Wood mansion, and Mrs. Whitcomb found a certain resource in watching the play. "Mintie's bean" came over every afternoon except Sunday, and it seemed as though the Woods were holding a public festival for the benefit of the neighborhood. Miss Mayhew did not spend much time with her sister-in-law. After family affairs had been talked over they did not seem to have very much to say to each other, and gradually the invalid faded out of observation. At first it was one of her "bab' galls" that confined her to her bed for two or three days, and then she continued to take her meals in her own room, passing from the bed to the couch. Her chair by the sitting room window was empty, and the school children missed her nod and smile as they passed by.

The whole house was open to Sister Martha, all but this shaded room, and when she knocked there was no response. Ann cooked her best dishes for the visitor, who, rather than take them alone, ate with her in the neat kitchen. Mrs. Whitcomb did not mind eating with Ann. She always shared her meals with her own "help" at home, but her visit on the whole was turning out inglorious. Nobody had asked her to see or to spend the day, she looked eagerly in the Littlefield News to see if her name had appeared among the arrivals. Yes; there it was at the head of the column of town items. "Mrs. Joseph Whitcomb, of Bath, is spending a few days at the old Mayhew homestead on Cliff street."

Everybody in Littlefield had read that announcement without its raising a ripple on the surface, for the Littlefieldians, as a rule, took the village paper solely to read the "locals" containing facts they all knew in advance; such is the stolidity of seeing one's name in print.

Sometimes sitting up there in her own room with the three slightly windows, a wild impulse seized Sister Martha to do something reckless that should make folks talk. She was not a passive person, nor was her mood meditative. Vinie's room was next to her own. She kept a light burning in there all night. Their windows looked the same way toward Captain Bligh's house, and in the same hours when her insomnia was at its worst, planning her eyelids opened making her brain whirl, she would hear slight stealthy movements through the wall, and would know that Vinie was awake treading in her worsted slippers up and down the carpet.

There was a light, too, in the captain's window, for he sat late reading—or the Lord only knew what he was doing—long after other folks were in bed. The neighbors called Captain Bligh a heathen. He never went to church, nor did he often enter any other house than his own, but he was keen and sharp enough about his own interests and had bought up much valuable real estate in the town for purposes of speculation. Sister Martha, in her own dark room, spied on these two lights as she heard Vinie's stealthy steps. The two lights had looked across intervening space at each other for fifteen years when her father was a young man and the affecting ballad of the knight who turned hermit on the mountain to watch the candle in his lady's window across the valley, and had she known it it would probably have seemed to her sentimental stuff.

Sister Martha had her own thoughts as she gazed at the lonely bachelor's window, and at times blended with them was something like a twinge of remorse. She hoped when the kitchen took her in the side it did not betoken incipient heart disease. Ann Baskett had sealed her thin lips about Captain Bligh and was not very communicative on the subject of the neighbor's affairs. Her opinion that Miss Whitcomb was "a kerryin and a fetchin woman" was no whit lessened by the gift of the linsy woolsey piece for a winter petticoat. Ann received it somewhat grimly, as an instance of condescension that she could afford to buy such clothes as she needed. She let it lay neglected two days on a kitchen chair before she carried it to her own room. Ann's scorn of presents was due to her consciousness of a good bank account. She had a great resource and pleasure in the Mahew family, and she thanked God she was not hard on her things.

Her principal employment in the long winter evenings was to sit at her clean kitchen table, with a brightly burning kerosene lamp, and make over her old clothes. A new fashion hardly ever came up that she did not get some odd wrinkle of it on her garments. When the high sleeves first were in vogue she was one of the earliest to appear at meeting with a queer little puckered bunch on each shoulder. Meeting was Ann's great resource and pleasure. It was her theater and opera, her concert and lecture. She never missed a service at her church however stormy the night, and with her kitchen key in her pocket she felt her dominions were safe, no matter what might happen to the front of the house.

front door and see the Wood girls' beax when they come to call. Does that oldest Wood girl scream around in the front yard as much as she used to?"

"I guess not quite," said Ann; "she's been gettin engaged, and I shouldn't wonder if it had had a subduin effect."

"Gettin engaged, has she? Why that makes these windows real excitin. And there's the back of Cap'n Bligh's house and part of his orchard. What a sight of apples he's going to have on his trees—all grafted fruit. The smoke is going up from his kitchen chimney straight as a column."

"He's lived alone ever since his sister died. Don't he no woman about except old Mrs. Brewster. She cleans the house once a week and does his washin. He cooks his own meals all but bread, and that he buys at the baker's—ken, they say, brile steak and make coffee and johnny cake, and even pies, but I shouldn't wonder to see 'em go."

"It's the strangest thing I ever heard of," said Mrs. Martha, falling into a muse, "that he should be livin there with her, only a stone's throw apart, just as if they was shut up each in a separate tomb."

Ann went out and shut the door without making a reply. She had said all she meant to say about Cap'n Bligh and his affairs. "She'll be kerryin things from me, and spread 'em over the town," was her inward, self rebuking remark as she went down stairs.

Mrs. Whitcomb soon followed, and after descending the shallow, near steps, she opened discreetly the parlor door on the other side of the prim, cold hall from where Miss Mayhew sat at her window. There was but a dim light in the large room, for the shutters were closed, the shades drawn and only a little ray here and there filtered through the slats. The room was spacious and stiff with old-fashioned gentility. There was a high wood chimney piece with girandoles and clumsy vases, and over it hung a lugubrious engraving called "Washington's Death Bed." The carpet was of an antique pattern known as Venetian stripes, now worn to dingsiness. The furniture was of slippery haircloth, but cased in heavy lumbering frames. An astral lamp stood on the center table in a bead mat, and there was a little tray with a few yellow cards and one or two of Miss Mayhew's valentines. There was also a highly embellished "keepake" of the year 1850, and the family Bible heavily gilt and looking new and as if never opened. It was spotted clean, for Ann swept and dusted the rooms every fortnight, gaining the dust and curtains and covering all the furniture.

Mrs. Whitcomb gazed around with the feeling natural to her economical soul that much good material was going to waste. Behind the parlor was an ample dining room furnished in the same tasteless style. She remembered the Thanksgiving and merry makings of mother Mayhew's time, but after a moment's consideration she stepped to the kitchen door and said to Ann: "If folks call to see me I wish you would show them into the parlor."

Ann fairly gasped. It was more than two years since "folks" had sat familiarly in that room.

"What do you say Ann?" after musing a moment; "I have an idea. Suppose I was to give a tea party?"

Ann turned slowly around from the table where she was doing up the brocked things, and Mrs. Whitcomb noticed that her gray pebble eyes had turned green. "Why, Marthy Marter Whitcomb," said she deliberately; "be you crazy?"

"No, Ann," snapped Mrs. Martha; "I'm clothed and in my right mind. But what's to hinder my havin a few people to tea in my own mother-in-law's house that way? There's the parlor and dining room all sweep'd and garish'd, needin only a few bunches of flowers set around to brighten things and some sparrowgrass bushes in the chimney."

"I guess I should be somethin to say, leas'tways about the part of the brocked that belongs to me. Them are her rooms I don't claim to control over them."

"Of course you will have all to say, Ann. I am aware of that. If you put down your foot that is the end of the worsted. I should think it might live you, Ann, to have a few folks in to tea almost as much as a prayer meetin'!"

"I don't want no liveliness," said Ann grimly. "I've got along these fifteen or twenty year without any and I'm perfectly well; not an ache anywhere, leas'tways it might be a kind of stiffener of the joints on damp mornings."

"I don't see as she never know anything about it, at least at first. We might get well started so as not to fluster her."

Ann again withdrew her parboiled hands from the hot suds and rested the right—doubled into a rather formidable looking fist—on the table, while her look turned through Sister Martha like a sewing machine needle.

German Syrup

G. Gloger, Druggist, Watertown, Wis. This is the opinion of a man who keeps a drug store, sells all medicines, comes in direct contact with the patients and their families, and knows better than anyone else how remedies sell, and what true merit they have. He hears of all the failures and successes, and can therefore judge: "I know of no medicine for Coughs, Sore Throat, or Hoarseness that had done such effective work in my family as Boasche's German Syrup. Last winter a lady called Hoarseness, at my store, who was suffering from a very severe cold. She could hardly talk, and I told her about German Syrup and that a few doses would give relief; but she had no confidence in patent medicines. I told her to take a bottle, and if the results were not satisfactory I would make no charge for it. A few days after she called and paid for it, saying that she would never be without it in future as a few doses had given her relief."

OUR MIDNIGHT VISITOR.

My father and Digby staid at the scene of the wreck, but I walked over to Corriemains to reassure Minnie's mind as to the apparition at the window.

It was wonderful how quickly the stranger accommodated himself to our familiar ways, and how useful he made himself about the house and garden.

I have seldom heard a more brilliant conversationist. Of an evening he would keep my father and myself spellbound by the kitchen fire for hours and hours.

My father had gone out in the dainty fashion and smoked his cigarettes. It seemed to me that the packet he had brought with him on the first night must have consisted entirely of tobacco.

"You shouldn't tell such tales to an old man," I said. "My dear fellow," he answered very kindly, "you have seen nothing of the world yet.

"This was a bullet," he said, pointing to a deep bluish pucker underneath his collar bone. "I got it behind the barricades in Berlin in eighteen hundred and forty-eight.

"What's this?" I asked, pointing to a little chain leather bag which was hung by a strong cord around his neck. "It looks like a charm."

"He buttoned up his tunic again hastily, looking extremely disconcerted. "It is nothing," he said brusquely. "I am a Roman Catholic, and it is what we call a scapular."

"One of the peculiarities of our visitor was that in all his plans for the future with which he often regaled us, he seemed entirely untrammelled by any monetary considerations.

"It was not long before these suspicions began to assume a more definite shape, which came about in this way. Minnie and I made the summit of the Combera cliff a favorite trysting place, as I think I mentioned before, and it was rare for a day to pass without our spending two or three hours there.

When I finished reading this my father and I sat looking at each other in silence for a minute or so. Then my father jerked his finger over his shoulder. "Yes, it must be," I answered, thinking of the fustils on the handkerchief.

among the pools until he was standing immediately beneath us, so that we looked straight down at him. To him the spot must have seemed the very acme of seclusion, with the great sea in front, the rocks on each side and the precipice behind.

"No, he has it with him," I said, like a cured fool as I was. "How d'ye know that?" asked the old man, looking up quickly with eager eyes.

"Because I have seen it," he said. "The faggot which he held broke in two in his grip, but he said nothing more. Shortly afterward our guest came in, and we had dinner, but neither of us alluded to the arrival of the paper.

"The new forest has no' been bent," persisted my father. "There's no use throwing difficulties in the way," said our visitor angrily. "If you won't come, I'll get Tommy Gibb and his father, but go I shall. Is it a bargain or not?"

"I'll gang," my father replied sullenly, and went down to get the boat ready. I followed, and helped him to bend on the new forest. I felt nervous and excited.

"What do you intend to do?" I asked. "I'll gang," he said indifferently. "The worst case to the worst we can give him up at Lamnah—but oh, it was a peety, an awfu' peety. You're young an strong, laddie; can ye no' master him between us?"

"No," I said, "I'm ready to give him up, but I'm damed if I lay a hand on him." "You're a cowardly, white livered loon!" he cried, but I was not to be moved by taunts; and left him mumbling to himself and picking at the sail with nervous fingers.

Again we were silent for a time. My father took one of the faggots out of the grate and twisted it about in his hands. "It must be a muckle stane," he said. "He cannot have it about him. Likely he's left it in France."

"No, he has it with him," I said, like a cured fool as I was. "How d'ye know that?" asked the old man, looking up quickly with eager eyes.

"Because I have seen it," he said. "The faggot which he held broke in two in his grip, but he said nothing more. Shortly afterward our guest came in, and we had dinner, but neither of us alluded to the arrival of the paper.

One day we were finishing breakfast when our guest asked if the boat was mended (one of the theolipins had been broken). I answered that it was.

"I want you two," he said, "to take me round to Lamnah to-day. You shall have a couple of sovereigns for the job. I don't know that I may not come back with you—but I may stay."

"My eyes met those of my father for a flash. "There's no' vera, much wind," he said. "What there is in the right direction," returned Digby, as I must call him.

"The new forest has no' been bent," persisted my father. "There's no use throwing difficulties in the way," said our visitor angrily. "If you won't come, I'll get Tommy Gibb and his father, but go I shall. Is it a bargain or not?"

From the time that I finally identified our visitor Digby was actually won, the diamond robbery, my resolution was taken. Some might have been squeamish in the matter, and thought that because he had shaken their hands and broken their bread he had earned some sort of grace from them.

The more I thought of it the more I admired the cleverness and shrewdness which he had managed the whole business. It was clear that he had a vessel ready, manned either by confederates or by unsuspecting fishermen. Hence he would be independent of all those parts where the police would be on the lookout for him.

But my father and I showed no change in our manner toward our guest, and he himself made no remark, as though he had made for England or for America, he could hardly have escaped without capture, but by choosing one of the most desolate and lonely spots in Europe he had thrown them off his track for a time, while the destruction of the brig seemed to destroy the last clue to his whereabouts.

"At present he was entirely at my mercy, since he could not possibly reach the island without our help. There was no necessity for us to hurry, therefore, and we could mature our plans at our leisure.
