Beware of Quaintments for Cataract that Contain Mercury.

Mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's cataract cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's cataract cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

YAKIMA AND THE STATE.

Interesting Items of News from Yakima and Its Suburbs.

Hits of Gossip, Facts, Fancies, Fervors, and a Hedge-Prize of Paragraphs of Every Description.

Jack Bradford, jr., of the Moose, returned from an extended visit to Tacoma on Friday last.

Yakima has made application to the management of the Tacoma exposition for double the space allotted last year.

Ellensburg Localist: John G. Boyle, attorney, denies that he has joined the third party. He holds on to the party of protection.

The N. P. Y. & K. Irrigation company proposes to exhibit its canal system and mode of irrigation in miniature at the World's fair, and probably at the Tacoma exposition.

Among the new postoffices recently established in this state are Liberty and Rock Island, in Kittitas county; Port Columbia, in Douglas; Chelan Falls and Icicle in Okanogan.

The fishing up the Abtanum is reported to have improved very much of late. W. H. Carpenter, while camped for several days at Soda Springs, made a record of 300 trout while fishing a few hours daily.

Dr. W. F. Morrison is in receipt of a letter from Rev. Rufus Chase, who says that he arrived in Boston in due time, and that he is now enjoying a rest and thinks that the change will result in an improvement of his health.

G. L. Cline, a former resident of Prosser, but now engaged in the livery business at Puyallup, was made happy on the 17th inst., on which occasion his wife presented him with an 8-pound baby boy.

The Denver Club of 1892, Knights Templar of Philadelphia, comprising about 3,000 ladies and gentlemen, passed through Yakima by special train Tuesday morning, bound for Tacoma, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco and then to Denver, where the twenty-fifth triennial encampment of the order will convene on 9th of August.

S. D. McDonald informed a HERALD reporter on Saturday last that the rotary well machine, which is drilling on E. M. Carr's place beyond Barrel Springs, is down about 150 feet and making not more than five or six feet per day. The drill is in a very hard cement formation, and has passed through a strata of float, one of boulders and a third one of onyx.

Frank Davis, a well known horseman, arrived from Tacoma on Thursday last with the horse Richard and a promising Wasco colt that trotted a winning race at Montevale on the fourth. Mr. Davis brings his horses here for the purpose of working them on the Gilson track, which has recently been leased by Phil Stanton, but he would build a track of his own could he exchange Olympia, Monte soal and other Sound property for a desirable 80 acres in Yakima.

The Northern Pacific & Yakima Irrigation company has procured a handsome line of jars in which to exhibit Yakima fruits at the World's fair. They are over two feet high and cost $85 per dozen in Philadelphia. Manager Granger will fully do his part in the endeavor to give the richest section of the state of Washington its proper representation at Chicago, and if the producers will do their part, Yakima county will win a world-wide reputation that will prove of incalculable benefit.

R. J. Mackison returned from Wenatchee on Saturday last, and spent several days looking after his hop yard and stock interests. Mr. Mackison is in the salmon business and owns valuable property in the new town of Wenatchee. Although he pins his faith in Yakima, he is convinced that Wenatchee will become an important point and the chief city of the northern part of central Washington.

It says that there are about twenty Yakima boys located at Wenatchee, including George Gulland, Charley Simmons and Bob Bennett, and that THE HERALD is at a premium there and its coming is eagerly looked forward to.

H. K. Owens, chief engineer of the Wells Irrigating canal, which has been projected for the Kittitas valley, was in the city Sunday and informed THE HERALD representative that the estimates of the cost of the work, amounting to about half a million of dollars, had been approved, and that he would return to Kittitas the following day and begin the work of definite location. The canal will be 77 miles long, the intake being at the Cle-Elum river below the lake. It will cross the Yakima river below the confluence of the Yakima and Cle-Elum, and continue along the west side to a point just below the mouth of the Swauk, where it crosses to the east side of the valley, and skirting the foothills terminates in Badger pocket in the southeastern part of the valley. The canal will be 42 feet wide at its head, and will have a capacity of 40,000 m. per inch, which is equivalent to 800 cubic feet per second. It is estimated that this ditch will irrigate all of the arid land in the Kittitas valley proper.

The United States is to have a national holiday this year that doesn't come very often. The president has issued a proclamation appointing Friday, October 21st, 1892, the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America by Columbus, as a general holiday for the people of the United States. "On that day," says the proclamation, "let the people, so far as possible, cease all toil and devote themselves to such exercises as may express honor to the discoverer and their appreciation of the great achievements of four completed centuries of American life. Columbus stood, in his age, as the pioneer of progress and enlightenment. The system of universal education is in our age the most prominent and salutary feature of the spirit of enlightenment, and it is peculiarly appropriate that the schools be made by the people the center of the day's demonstrations. Let the national flag float over every schoolhouse in the country, and the exercises such as shall impress upon our youth the patriotic duties of American citizenship."

President Hill, of the Great Northern, is contemplating the construction of a line from Butte to San Francisco. The Montana Central, connecting Butte and Helena, is a part of the Great Northern system, and Mr. Hill proposes to extend this line southwest across Idaho to Boise City, and from there across eastern Oregon and California to San Francisco. The proposed line will be about 700 miles long. It is considered one of the possibilities of the future. It is believed that a feasible route, which will tap the Snake river valley and other highly productive districts, can be secured. When the Great Northern line now in course of construction is completed, it is understood that Mr. Hill will turn his attention to the proposed line from Butte to San Francisco.

Pacific coast hops are quoted in New York at 25 cents. Reports indicate that the Sound country will have about half a crop, Oregon and New York two-thirds the average. Above the report of the growing crop is, upon the whole, favorable, although the flies are showing themselves to some extent. The market abroad as well as at home is a puzzle, for although the scarcity of hops is beyond question, yet the price falls to advance to any marked degree.

No returns have been received from the $4,000 worth of county bonds bid in by the Puget Sound Bond and Trust company, of Seattle, and so long a time has elapsed that Chairman Stevenson is of the opinion that the deal will fall through. Bidders should be required to put up an indemnity bond in such cases, as many of these bond companies are in the market simply for speculation, and if they can place the bonds in the east at a higher figure they take them; and if not, they drop them without any consideration for the seller.

The city was full of people on Thursday last, attracted by John Robinson's circus. In the afternoon the tent was well filled, but the attendance on the evening's performance dropped down to three or four hundred, the people having learned by experience that the program is cut in two through a desire to set a peck up and away. The show is a big one, and a great many people are employed; but there were no features that showed especial talent or called forth applause.

Charley Simmons returned from the Wenatchee country last week, and says that the new town of Icicle, which is on the creek of that name, 20 miles from the mouth of the Wenatchee, is attracting much attention and growing rapidly. There is a large force of Great Northern men there on two heavy cuts and rock-work, and seven saloons, two grocery stores and other business houses are doing a brisk business.

According to a prize definition a honeymoon is the sum total of pleasure effected by the addition of one to one; when all that is disagreeable in life is subtracted; when joys multiply, and an equal division of authority is exercised preceding the rule of three. The vestibule to heaven or hell. A honeymoon is that time before he finds out that she is not an angel—and vice versa.

Jim Hill made a visit to Wenatchee last week, via Ellensburg. It is said that he is not satisfied with the location of the Columbia river bridge at Rock Island, and gave directions that it be built directly opposite the town of Wenatchee. He was also dissatisfied with the progress of the work, and stirred things up generally.

Professor Lawrence says that a Walla Walla man has been here to get specimens of Yakima fruit, evidently for the World's fair, and that he has crossed his tracks in three different instances. The Walla Walla man wants the best of everything, and is willing to pay for it.

Nicholas McCoy, who returned last week from a lengthy visit to the Okanogan country, says that the people of that section are almost a unit for Cleveland. "My goodness me," exclaimed Nicholas, "even Judge Navarre wanted to bet that Cleveland will be elected."

J. A. Brown, who was sent from Yakima to McNeil's island for selling liquor to Indians, has escaped.

The James Hamilton Lewis cigar has been put upon the Yakima market, and is proving very popular.

Tacoma and Seattle merchants are complaining about the new tariff from the Sound to points as far east as Pasco. The Northern Pacific has announced a 2 1/2 cents reduction per 100 pounds, but there is no reduction except on carload lots, and the merchants claim that there is an actual increase on other classes of freight equal to 5 cents per hundred.

The Stine house, Walla Walla, was destroyed by fire on Saturday last, together with several adjoining frame buildings. The loss is placed at $50,000 and the insurance at less than $20,000. Walla Walla will now be forced to build the long-talked-of hotel, that is to be a credit to that city.

Dr. W. F. Morrison has just received a fresh supply of virus, and those fearing the smallpox scourge, which is playing havoc at the British Columbia ports, should call upon the doctor and be vaccinated.

John McGraw and S. Baxter, two well known republican politicians, arrived here Sunday from Seattle to inspect the working of the rotary artesian well machine, in which they are largely interested.

Ten new desks were received here on Friday last for school district No. 28, of which J. T. Stewart, of the Abtanum, is clerk. The district now has fifty desks of the most approved pattern.

Marshall Henderson gathered in two horse blankets and a buggy cushion, which had evidently been stolen, on circus day. The owner can have the property on application.

The remains of one of the fire balloons sent up from this city on the 4th of July was found beyond the artesian wells, some sixteen miles away.

The Hop Growers' association of Yakima will meet at the opera-house on Saturday afternoon, July 30th. A general attendance is desired.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Abrams, of Ellensburg, was gladdened on the 16th inst. by the appearance of a baby daughter.

FRANCE RUSSELL B. HARRISON.
Congress Says He is Not the Heir Apparent, and Scores Him for Pulling out a $50000 Plumb.

The report of the Yellowstone Park investigating committee, which was submitted to the House on July 20th, severely comments on the exertion of Russell Harrison to influence the government in favor of a corporation, and refers to the setting aside of $5,000 worth of stock for him. The report in conclusion says: "The son of the president is in no wise connected with the government of the United States; yet from his relation to the president he, in effect, represents a part of the presidential power. Up to the advent of Russell B. Harrison in the role of a go-between son of his father, the president, no member of a president's family has ever taken part in the executive management of the government. No statutory law exists prohibiting a member of the president's family from soliciting a favor from a department against his enemies or in favor of his friends, because hitherto no such law has been needed; but the impropriety of such an act is so glaring and obvious to require any argument, and when apparently they pass without eliciting reproof from the president or parent, it seems fitting that the representatives of the people should stamp them with their condemnation. It would not be remarkable in a monarchy for the heir apparent to strive to influence officials; but in a republican government, there being no heir apparent, the existence of facts warranting the conclusion that the president's son is influential only in that capacity if called upon to exert and does exert his influence for a corporation dealing with a great department of the government, and that, too, about the time $5,000 in stock of the same corporation is sought to be set aside for the same son."

Feminine Facts and Fancies.

It is considered unlucky for any of the wedding guests to be dressed in green or black, a black crape bonnet, or a band on a gentleman's hat; these accidents entail lifelong misery to the newly married couple.

An old maid's insurance company has been opened in Denmark. Spinners can insure themselves by a small sum on reaching the age of 15, and if still unmarried at 40 are entitled to a regular allowance. If they marry, however, they forfeit all claim.

It was Queen Anne—Richard II.'s Queen Anne—who introduced trailing gowns into England nearly 600 years ago. It was the same royal lady who first set the fashion of enormously high peaked headgear, from which the "matinee hat" is no doubt descended; and also changed the mode of lady horsemanship from the cavalier style to the side saddle.

Don't be discouraged about that escamoteur till you have given Ayer's Sarsaparilla a persistent trial. Six bottles cured the complaint for George S. Thomas, of Ada, O., when all other remedies failed to afford any relief.

Delinquents Must Settle.

This is the time of year when newspapers need money, and subscribers should not forget that the times pass more rapidly with the reader than they do with the publisher who has to pay the bills.

HERALDINGS.

E. E. Wager, city attorney of Roslyn and owner of the Roslyn News, was in the city Wednesday.

M. V. B. Stacy spent a few hours in the city Wednesday. He is again largely interested in Yakima county and expects to return here next week.

Justice Henton performed the ceremony Wednesday afternoon that united in marriage Clement B. Viles and Miss Effie Eaton, both of this county.

Dr. W. H. Hare and E. M. Reed, of THE HERALD, were among the disinterested attendants on the people's party convention at Ellensburg, Tuesday.

A rattlesnake was killed up the Natchez, above the Nelson bridge, Sunday, that had eleven rattles and a button, and measured thirty-five inches in length.

No services will be held at the Presbyterian church next Sunday, except the Sunday-school at 11:45 a. m. The pastor is at Soda Springs with his family.

James Browns Potter, husband of the actress, and H. C. Davis, a friend of President Oakes, of the Northern Pacific, were in the city Tuesday looking around with a view to investment.

The circus at Ellensburg was not a success. The sphyras were so boisterous in the afternoon that the tents had to be taken down in order to prevent a collapse, and were not put up again.

Gustav Fleischer, the little Prussian tailor who owned a house on the edge of the bench in Capital addition, died at the hospital Tuesday night of paralysis and a complication of disorders.

L. D. Hodges, who is well known and largely interested in Yakima, arrived here last week from Mount Vernon and was joined on Saturday by his wife and son from Minnesota. They left on Monday for the Sound.

In one of the fish wheels now in operation at The Dalles 100,000 feet of lumber were used and the ribs supporting it are filled with 2,000 tons of rock. It is so substantially built that it will defy for years the swift current of the Columbia.

On Thursday of last week the authorities of Yakima City had much difficulty with drunken Indians, who pulled guns on a young lad named Shane. Charley Campbell and others went after the lawbreakers and took them into custody.

James Hamilton Lewis stopped over in Yakima for a few hours Sunday, and was the guest of his old college mate, H. J. Snively. Mr. Lewis has acquiesced to the requests of his numerous friends here and will address the people of Yakima early in the campaign.

Charles Henry, Will Carpenter and Will Crook spent several days up the Natchez in the vicinity of Broughton, during the past week, and brought back a three gallon jar filled with trout, a number of which measured from a foot and a half to two feet long.

Patents have recently been received at the land office for Carlos Z. Cheney, Loren E. Bull, Walter A. Bell, Christian Johnson, Samuel T. Packwood, Nettie S. LaChapelle, Edgar T. Stone, Edwin B. Emmerson, William Shaw, administrator of Thomas J. Shaw, and Annie McLeod.

Over in Whitman county the stockmen have had an uphill fight with the "rustlers," but finally the cause of the just got the upper hand. Bill Masterson, the leader of the gang, was killed and a half dozen of his followers have been sentenced to the penitentiary for terms ranging from six to twelve years.

County Assessor Shannafelt is finishing the footings on his tax books which give the valuation of farm lands in Yakima county at $1,929,674, an increase of $175,438 over the assessment of 1891; and of 797,875, an increase of $124,315. The Northern Pacific tract and right-of-way is appraised at $630,150 and the irrigating ditches at $171,900.

A four days session of the county commissioners ended on Saturday last. The board appraised section 16, township 13 range 18, and section 36, township 13, range 17, at $10 per acre. Both sections will be sold in forty-acre tracts. The total sales of school lands amounted to $61,967.30. Most of the land was in the neighborhood of Zillah and was bid in by N. N. Granger, of the Northern Pacific, Yakima & Kittitas Irrigation Co. John Collins, of Seattle, through F. R. Reed, bought 320 acres of land adjoining Proser at $25 per acre and Judge Frank Allen of Tacoma, 120 acres at $12, and 16 acres at $40, in the same neighborhood. The other purchasers were P. A. Bounds, Mrs. Elizabeth Loudon, Warren Eglin, A. M. Lull, Joseph Stephenson and A. B. Weed. The commissioners then adjourned until Monday, August 1st, when they will sit as a board of equalization.

The first bale of the new crop of 1892 hops was shipped per express July 22, by Wagner & Co., of Sacramento, for account of Wm. Uhlman & Co., San Francisco, to S. & F. Uhlman, New York. This is one day earlier than the same parties shipped the first bale of hops of last years crop.

THE ADVANTAGE OF AN ASSOCIATION.

Well Known Commission Men Advise Organization—Eastern Demand for Yakima Fruits.

H. J. Bicknell, North Yakima, Wash. Dear Sir:—Mr. E. F. Benson, of North Yakima, called at our office yesterday with a sample box of peaches from your orchard, and tells us you have plenty of the same kind. We were not aware you had any as fine fruit as this; had we known, we should surely have been looking to your market before this for some of our supplies.

At present we are receiving the bulk of our fruit from Snake river and Walla Walla. We find upon inquiry at the Northern Pacific railway office that you have fully as good rates as either of these points. Now, as the quality of your fruit is fully as good as Snake River or Walla Walla, and if you can manage to raise and pack your fruit as cheaply as these parties, we cannot see why you would not be able to supply some of the fruit used in this part of the country.

Of course we do not expect any one grower could manage to load in car lots, but they could form an association such as is in existence at Snake river and Walla Walla, and could make up a car between the members of the association. One advantage you would have over the Snake river people would be the matter of hauling to the railroad. The Snake river people are obliged to cart their fruit from fifteen to twenty miles before being able to load on a railroad car, while we understand you would only have from one to three miles to cart your fruit. The Walla Walla people are in a position to compete, the same as yourselves, not having to cart their fruit any distance. We mention this matter of hauling merely to show you the advantage you would have over the Snake river people, not only on your loading chaffer, but your fruit would no doubt carry better if you were shipping any distance. Fruit hauled in wagons cannot possibly carry without being more or less jammed, and when fruit is bruised it will not take long for it to commence to decay.

You would not be obliged to depend on Spokane alone as your market. Several cities such as Denver, Omaha and St. Paul are receiving a great many of their supplies from this section of the country, and should you have a surplus you could easily get quotations from these points. Helena and Butte City are also good points to ship to, providing you can manage to get some reliable house to handle your goods; but our experience in these two cities has been that it is very hard to find any one who is willing to take a reasonable percentage, but seem to want the "lion's share."

Should you and your neighbors be able to make up a car, we see no reason why you could not ship to this point as well as other parties. We will say for ourselves that at any time you wish to know what the ruling markets are on any class of fruit you might have, we shall take pleasure in giving you the exact situation of the market before shipping, and should we consider that some other point would net you a better price, or that by shipping to us you would lose you money, we should surely help you to divert the car. We make a specialty of fruit and vegetables, and have been handling on an average about three cars of vegetables and two of fruit weekly. We would like very much to hear from you, and would like to know how your people feel on this proposition. We are not only in the market for fruit alone, but want potatoes, onions, melons, cantelopes and the like, and can use in car loads. Yours truly, D. B. Ince & Son Co.

Col. A. H. Reynolds has taken a number of citizens to his residence of late to show them what he claims to be a natural curiosity, as it has two heads and no legs. While it is all that he claims for it, and is direct from Kentucky, the Colonel has other things at home that make a visit very interesting, not least of which is his commission as colonel commanding the state troops of Arkansas. He also has mementoes of his active life when he was in the furniture manufacturing business and worked six men, and views of his wholesale liquor house with its stacks of barrels and various departments. The Colonel is now 66 years of age, and his life has been one of industry and stirring event. In his southern home he was prominent not alone in business but fraternally, and the name of Alexander H. Reynolds is still carried there by a Masonic chapter.

Tom Stator and others furnished evidence on Friday last that resulted in the arrest of Samuel Hays for selling liquor to Indians. Two complaints were filed and evidence was brought out showing that he had been selling liquor to Indians at the old town. The authorities have been after Hays for the past fifteen days, as it has been known that he was doing a wholesale business in this line. His examination was held before U. S. Commissioner Henton, and he was bound over on each complaint in the sum of $250.

Mrs. Ivah Felt Graves, wife of Judge Carroll B. Graves, died at Ellensburg Monday morning, of consumption. The body was taken to Spokane that night, accompanied by the bereaved husband and his friend, Austin A. Miers. The interment was in Greenwood cemetery of that city. The death of Mrs. Graves saddened the community in which she lived and was loved for her many good qualities, and large numbers of Yakima friends grieve in sympathy with the stricken husband and for his two motherless daughters.

W. N. Granger is taking a very active interest in arranging for an exhibit of Yakima products at the Tacoma exposition this fall, as well as for the World's Fair, and on his last trip to the City of Destiny he secured the space that was allotted to Yakima, Walla Walla and Lincoln counties in 1891.

THE PEOPLES PARTY IN STATE CONVENTION

It Nominates a Full Ticket—A Platform Overburdened With Resolutions.

Even as early as Saturday the delegates to the state convention of the peoples party began to gather at Ellensburg. They did not patronize the hotel because they could not get a rate of $1.25 per day, but scattered themselves around among the lodging houses and took their meals at the restaurants that abound there.

Sunday a large delegation came in and the streets began to show some signs of life. Considerable street oratory was indulged in and at one time Marshal McGrath came near running in a party of delegates along with some old drunks who were "rahing for the candidates of the old parties. Everything was satisfactorily explained, however, and Mayor Baldwin expressed his regrets at the marshal's inability to discriminate. Thereafter the delegates wore the regulation medals of aluminum and were not interfered with.

The convention convened at Lloyd's opera-house Monday morning. There were 150 out of the 214 delegates present. D. B. Hanna, of Tacoma, chairman of the state central committee, called the meeting to order. The Omaha platform was adopted and was then loaded down with resolutions. Every delegate seemed to have some particular hobby and he would touch it off in the form of a resolution. There were eighteen adopted touching state affairs.

The resolutions demand the abolition of the poll tax; the publishing and furnishing free by the state of all school books used in the public schools; that the schools be furnished with congressional and financial laws, text books on money and functions, and that teachers be examined on the same; the repeal of the law exempting the bond and credit taxation; an amendment of the delinquent tax law; the re-enactment of the redemption clause; that persons or corporations be made responsible for the negligence of employees; that irrigation ditches be built and controlled by the government; for the resumption of the Northern Pacific lands, now held by that company, by the government; for the repeal of all laws allowing foreigners to act as officers; the prohibition of Pinkertonism; state control and operation of roads, factories or mines during strikes or lock-outs. The convention adopted a resolution boycotting the Rochester clothing and all firms handling the same, and one sympathizing with organized labor.

There was much wrangling throughout the convention and the delegate who presided over the Sprague convention, and who was an exceedingly mild-mannered individual, blamed the chairman of the Ellensburg convention for not showing more force and keeping the delegates better in hand. "Why, sir!" he said to a HERALD reporter, it was a perfect pandemonium. I didn't permit any such doings when I was in the chair."

William N. J. Caldwell, of Lewis county; P. B. Barrows (colored), of Stevens; James Bassett, of Lincoln, and Wm. Lee, of Yakima, were nominated for presidential electors. An informal vote for congressmen brought out seventeen candidates, one of whom was J. C. MacCrimmon, of this city, who received five votes. The ticket as nominated is as follows: For congress—J. C. Van Patten, Columbia; F. M. Knox, King. For governor—C. W. Young, Whitman. For lieutenant governor—C. P. Twist, Lewis. For secretary of state, Lyman Wood, "King"; treasurer—W. P. C. Adams, of Whatcom; attorney general—Governor Teate, of Tacoma; supreme judges—G. W. Gardner, of Yakima, and Frank T. Reid, of Kitsap, formerly of Tacoma; superintendent of public instruction—J. M. Smith; land commissioner—T. M. Calloway, of Spokane; printer, A. J. Murphy, of Klkktat.

The session of the delegates extended into the morning it being 1:30 a. m. Wednesday before the final adjournment was taken. At the depot they held a mutual admiration meeting where they addressed each other as brother and spoke confidently of sweeping everything before them. On taking the train they dismissed the republican and democratic parties with "Good bye, old parties," which was probably intended as a post-mortem obituary.

Mayor A. B. Weed has developed as a candidate for the legislature, subject to the decision of the republican convention, and there is a strong belief that he will be successful. His candidacy has occasioned some discussion in the party ranks, as he has refused to pledge his support to Allen; but it is thought that he will submit to the convention's instructions. Lawyer Jones is also a candidate, but he lost strength by stating, on Saturday last, that he would not be a candidate, as he could not afford to make the canvass; but his supporters arranged for that difficulty before the day was over, and he gave his consent and is now out as a full fledged aspirant, and the representative of the stalwart Allentites.

The delegates of this judicial district, at the people's party convention, Monday, nominated a lawyer named Vincent for superior judge. The bar fails to speak very highly of his attainments, and his appearance is certainly against him, causing him to be locally known as Ben Butler.

Special Agent McCormack, of the interior department, returned from Syracuse, N. Y., this morning.

ADJOURNED MEETING OF THE CITY COUNCIL.

A Park in Capital Addition is Favored by the Council—An Offer Made for the Property.

The city council met on Friday evening last in adjourned session. The clerk was instructed to have awnings put up over the front windows of the city building.

The committee to whom was referred the question of a city park, reported favoring the proposition. The council then passed a resolution approving the purchase of four blocks in Capital addition as a total cost not exceeding $2,500, one-half of which is to be paid in 1897 and the other half the following year, with 6 per cent interest. The city agrees to spend $300 annually for a period of five years, beginning with the year 1893, when a fountain is to be erected providing the water mains are laid to the park. This offer has been submitted to the Ontario Land company, who own the property.

Warrants were ordered drawn to provide for the payment of the engineer's laborers engaged on sewer work, for the week ending July 16th.

The clerk was ordered to advertise for bids for sidewalk on north side of lot 1, block 12, on Chestnut street; also to notify the property owners that sidewalk must be laid in front of lot 8, block 208.

The question of closing the saloons at midnight was brought up, but no action was taken on it.

THE Northern Pacific, Yakima & Kittitas Irrigation Company in its great work of reclaiming 200,000 acres of arid land by building immense canals and irrigating the same has placed Yakima County in the front rank as the great Hop, Fruit, Vegetable and Hay producing section of Washington. In the center of this magnificent agricultural and horticultural country the Northern Pacific, Yakima & Kittitas Irrigation Company has plotted and laid out the TOWN OF ZILLAH and on Monday, June 27th, 1892, the town will be placed on the market. Zillah is 25 miles south of North Yakima on the river of that name and is the official terminus of the Motor Railroad to be built to North Yakima. Zillah is the headquarters of the company and handsome quarters are being erected to be occupied by the officials as soon as completed. Situated as this town is there are legitimate reasons why it should be prosperous, progressive and healthy. Investigate Zillah.

WAGERS WON AND LOST.

Reminiscent Stories of an Old-Time Faro Bank Player.

How He Had Seen Some Devotees of the Game Get Quick Action on Their Money—Largest Bet He Ever Saw Made.

Sacramento News: What is the biggest bet I ever saw made? said a prominent Sacramento sporting man this morning. "Well, I can hardly remember. You see the days of big betting are said to have passed away; that is, big betting at Faro, and that is the only banking game a gentleman plays at. I have heard of big bets having been made, but although I have been on the turf for nearly forty years, of my personal knowledge I never saw but one turn made for more than $6,000. That was in Panama in its booming days.

"Dave Nangle and Jim Balthous were dealing faro there, and a chap known as 'One-Eyed Tipton' was playing against their game. Tipton had the reputation of having won his money by stopping stages and beating Wells-Fargo's boxes, but he played faro like a king. He had played in about $7,000, and had some $1,500 in checks before him. It was nearly time for the stage to leave on which he was going to San Francisco. He wanted to get an action for his remaining checks, and asked the dealer if he could make a call for the $1,500. As the dealer had him 'in the box' for $7,000 he assented, and Tipton stacked up his checks. There was a 9, a 4 and a queen in, and he called it 4-6. The turn came that way, and he was paid four for one—$6,000. That, I think, is the most money I ever saw change hands on one turn.

"There have been big sums of money lost here in Sacramento, but not on any single turn. Usually it takes hours to lose much money, for the fortunes of the game varies, though I have seen enough to make a man comfortable for a lifetime lost in a very few minutes.

"Five or six years ago Winnie Marsh lost $7,000 at Ross & Webber's game in thirty-eight minutes. He had played with varying luck for some time and was down about $1,000. He had a certificate of deposits for $6,000 which he had put into the drawer and got checks on. In just thirty-eight minutes from the time he put up the certificate he lost his last check of $6,000 worth.

"That was losing money pretty fast, wasn't it? He probably had his money down so that he got action every turn.

"Young January got a great deal of sympathy here when he lost $30,000 belonging to the state, and the faro games got a great deal of blame. The square faro games, though, had but little to do with his bad luck. Of all the money he gambled away only about $5,000 was lost at square faro games.

"He started in on his gambling career by being skinned out of $6,000 by 'Dive' Bragg shaking dice with a smooth box. Then he was roped against a brace game and dropped $2,800. He then played against various games, and one night lost $8,000.

"That is the biggest losing I know of in one night in Sacramento for a great many years. It was in 1884, I think. After making that losing it didn't take him long to blow the remainder of the $39,000.

"Of course, I know that it is the correcting to tell of the vast fortunes that have been staked on the turn of a card in the early days in this state, but I never saw any of it. I saw a man named Dennis McCarthy tap a monte game in Downville in 1854 for $1,800. He lost the bet.

"Talking of Downville, did you ever know an old-time gambler named Jimmy Horton? Jimmy was a character. He was usually unlucky, and the harder his luck ran against him the harder he swore. He had a favorite string of oaths, and when you heard them flowing in a steady stream from Jimmy's mouth you might be sure he was losing every bet in sight. One night in the old Craycroft saloon Jimmy's luck was tougher than usual, and everybody was beating his monte game. When his string of oaths was at the loudest someone put out a Mexican dollar on the stove and let it stay until it was nearly red hot. Then, taking it between two others, the joker carried it over to Jimmy's table and placed it on a card opposite one with a big stack of money on it. The card with the big bet showed first and Jimmy won only the dollar on the turn.

"With increased vehemence he ripped out a big oath and said '— my eyes! I may have to take an old pack of cards and crawl into a hole with the toads and the lizards, and practice until I know how to deal this game, but — I have won this bet!' and he clutched the red hot dollar with a savage grasp. As his fingers closed about it and the burning surface sank into his hand, he gave a scream of pain that made the canyon ring. The game was broken up for that night. Poor old Jimmy Horton! He was a square gambler."

And the little crowd of listeners who had gathered to hear the old time sport talk in a reminiscent way slowly dispersed.

Some of the Gossip, Facts and Fancies Gathered From the Local and State Graces.

"Why not send Steve Judson, of Pierce county, the sage of picturesque old Steilacoom, to congress?" asks the Washington Standard. "Steve would open the eyes of some of the members of the house on parliamentary laws, and he possesses precisely the voice that would attract the speaker's attention amid the confusion of an all-night session. We have sent a pugilist, now let us send a mild-mannered but determined gentleman."

Tom Cavanaugh, of Olympia, is wild-eyed and wooly, and with a death expression in his eyes he declares that he is camping on the trail of Senators Squire and Allen. If our memory is not at fault the ex-Kansas recently got the G. B. from the surveyor general's office through the instrumentality of Washington's senators, and it is not the good of the grand old party he wants now as much as revenge.

At Spokane Judge Nash is mentioned as an aspirant for the supreme bench on the democratic ticket, and Judge Blake on the republican.

Attorney General Jones declares that he has withdrawn from the congressional race. This is considered a disgrace, but had he not said so himself no one would ever have known that he had been in it.

The name of ex-Delegate Tom Brents, of Walla Walla, is now mentioned as a possible successor to Allen. Miles Moore and his faction of disgruntleds would be satisfied with Brents; in fact they could put up with almost anyone other than Allen.

Rev. J. R. Thompson, of Vancouver, who established the Presbyterian church in this city, has declared himself a candidate for lieutenant governor on the republican ticket. The Rev. John is truly a good man, but it is difficult for him at times to distinguish between his profession as a preacher and that of a politician.

S. F. Attorney Mitchell replies to the resolution of the people's party of this county, regarding titles withheld from homesteaders on disputed Northern Pacific land, and says that the matter is up for adjudication by the courts, and that it is not a question for a political party to mix up in.

that the republicans lose nine members and the democrats gain three.

House—38 republicans, 18 democrats, 3 people's party. Senate—16 republicans, 11 democrats, 1 democrat and prohibition, 1 people's party and 1 citizens party. If the republicans fail to elect eight of the fifteen senators to be chosen in 1894, the democrats will control the senate in 1895 and elect a United States senator to succeed Dolph.

Tobias Beckner, of Bickleton, the nominee of the people's party for sheriff, writes to P. Sanford Burke stating most emphatically that he will accept the nomination, and that there has been a regular stampede to the new party from his neighborhood.

Fred R. Reed's interview in the Tacoma Ledger, in which he stated that R. K. Nichols was a conditional candidate for lieutenant governor, has stirred up Mr. Wilson's Ellensburg friends, and they are not backward in expressing their displeasure. They say that this information should have been given to them privately, and that Mr. Nichols should have held off until the state convention took action on the governorship.

The Ellensburg Localier is authority for the statement that Carroll B. Graves will be a candidate for re-election as superior judge. No opposition to his nomination or election has been developed as yet.

It is announced that there has been a compromise among the Spokane republicans, and that S. C. Hyde will be content with a place on the supreme bench of the state.

Stands at the Head.

Dr. George A. Bethune, state chemist of the state of Washington, has examined the various baking powders of the market, and speaks emphatically as to which he considers the best. He says:

"A series of carefully made tests of the baking powders sold in this market shows that the Royal yields the largest percentage of leavening gas. This powder is also found free from any harmful or even objectionable ingredient; its constituents are of exceptional purity, so combined that the powder produces the purest and most wholesome food.

"There is, therefore, no question but the Royal is the strongest, purest and most wholesome baking powder in the market."

A TRAITOR'S REWARD.

Arnold's Claims for Services Rendered in Betraying His Country.

Under date of June 2, 1797, Arnold wrote to the Duke of Portland "that there is none other man in England that has made so many sacrifices as I have done of property, rank, prospects, etc., in support of government, and no man who has received less in return," and again, "I have the strongest possible claim on the faith, justice and honor of the nation for some farther compensation and provision for myself and family."

This further provision and additional recompense he afterward characterized as grants of land, and even went so far as to specify the amount of land to which he considered himself entitled. In a letter to Mr. John King, under secretary of state, including a letter to the Duke of Portland containing a similar statement, he says:

"The usual allowance to field officers was 5,000 acres and to each member of their families 1,200, showing that I am entitled to 14,500."

Again he adds:

"As I commanded a legion, consisting of one regiment of cavalry and one regiment of infantry, which I was at a great expense in raising, I think myself fairly entitled to 1,000 acres, as majors only have received 5,000 acres."

At that time he appears to have contented himself with asking a grant of about 12,000 acres, or upwards of thirty square miles, in upper Canada; but his expectations grew, and that space. In July, 1797, he presented a petition to the king, in which he asked 10,000 acres for himself and 5,000 each for his wife and seven children, all to be placed in upper Canada. This claim amounts to 50,000 acres, and in support of it he gives the following statement of his losses and sacrifices sustained in "Service" to the government:

Loss, real and personal property	$ 80,000
$2.5 per annum, in lieu of which ten years' purchase has been paid to other officers	22,000
Loss of the same or equal rank worth at the time at least	50,000
Total	$152,000

Correspondence on these subjects ensued between General Simcol and Under Secretary of State King. In a letter from the former dated March 26, 1798, he clearly indicates his opinion of Arnold. He says:

"To answer your first query, 'Is there any objection to Arnold and his children having any grant of lands in upper Canada?' I say there is no legal impediment (on American grounds), provided that they have not already had any grant in the province of New Brunswick; but General Arnold is a character extremely obnoxious to the original loyalists of America; but his not intending to reside in upper Canada does away in some measure with that objection."

So it ended, the unhappy man living in perpetual exile without receiving any reward. Arnold died in 1801.

“FOOD FOR POWDER.”

HOW THE TWENTY-SIXTH NORTH CAROLINA CAUGHT HOT BULLETS.

A Pet Regiment That Never Knew When to Quit and Practically Fought on its Stumps After Being Shot All to Pieces.

(Copyright, 1922, by American Press Association. Book rights reserved.)

AMONG the butternut battalions that shouldered their way along the dusty pike between Cashtown and Gettysburg, on July 1, 1862, was a band of 800 tall, lank North Carolinians, one of the freshest and most gallant musters in Lee's entire army.

North Carolina regiments constituted several brigades in Hill's corps, the vanguard of the invading host, and there was nothing to distinguish the Twenty-sixth from a dozen other organizations in the command, excepting its long line of well clad, bearded and high spirited men.

In a certain sense it had been a pet regiment to that time; that is, with a friend at court it had enjoyed its privileges and skipped hard lines now and then, and marched to Pennsylvania fresh from green pastures and the native heath. So while the mass of war weary troops in Hill's leading division looked upon their early morning trip to the country market town as a foraging raid to gobble stores of shoes and sugar before the eyes of rebel guards and militia, the soldiers of the Twenty-sixth cared not a rap for the prospective plunder further than that the taking of it might lead to a scrimmage certain to be funny and possibly exciting. I put it down that the regiment marched in 820 strong and have yet to tell how it hobbled back numbering only eighty for duty. And how was the making of that great gap worthy a page in history?

The regiment stopped more bullets at Gettysburg than did any other infantry organization in either army in a single battle during the whole war. The records of Union and Confederate regiments seem to show a few cases where a loss in killed and wounded was greater in proportion to numbers engaged than that in the Twenty-sixth at Gettysburg, but this regiment had a large list of missing, and if all the facts were known it would doubtless stand at the head of all, both in actual numbers lost and in proportion of loss to fighting strength.

The Twenty-sixth North Carolina was organized in 1861 from companies recruited in eight counties. Four companies hailed from the mountain districts along the Blue Ridge, three were from the central counties and three from the southern border. The organizer was Zebulon B. Vance, a bitter opponent of secession up to the moment the die was cast. Vance, unlike many political cronies, led his boys into several fights, particularly at New Berne and in the "Seven Days," in 1862. He was elected governor in August of that year and took his regiment home, and there it remained in garrison throughout the Manassas, Antietam, Fredericksburg and Chancellerville campaigns. To this long furlough was added the furthest fling of stalwart yeomanry that marched cheerily on to Gettysburg, "good food for powder."

It is a well known story how Heth's brigade ran into Buford's cavalry and Reynolds' infantry along Willoughby creek in the early morning of July 1. The brigades of Archer and Davis advanced across the stream, dropped Reynolds with a chance shot and then were surrounded and all but destroyed. Then Heth's reserve brigades, under Pettigrew and Brockenbrough, took it up, rushed to the rescue of their luckless comrades and the three days' struggle was begun. The Twenty-sixth was on the left of Pettigrew's brigade and crossed the creek abreast of McPherson's woods, where Meredith's "Iron Brigade" and Rowley's Pennsylvania's, replacing the brigades that had wrestled with Archer and Davis, were awaiting the next victims. While crossing the creek the Carolinians met a scattering fire from 700 men in the woods, but they weathered it and pushed up the slope on a bayonet charge.

One Union brigade gave way a little, and as Pettigrew followed up, the Twenty-sixth alone struck the other brigade on its flank. By that time Union supports were on hand, batteries were in position, and every clump of trees, every fence, ridge and building bristled with bayonets and cannon. It looked as though Heth's men would earn their shoes and sugar or go without. The Twenty-sixth pushed on within twenty paces of its antagonists, the overlapping flank of the "Iron Brigade." Finding their ammunition low, the men went among the bushes picking up cartridges, and were busy at this when Pettigrew called his brigade to make a new alignment.

The Twenty-sixth didn't retire. The constant shifting of Union regiments from position to position led the Confederates to expect an easy victory, but every step in advance revealed a new foe—to the right, to the left, or in front. In the pathway of the Twenty-sixth, Cooper's Pennsylvania

MET A SCATHING FIRE FROM THE ENEMY. battery was posted, covering the interval between Rowley's men and the "Iron Brigade." Whenever the ground was clear, this battery showered the Carolinians with grape. Eleven color bearers were shot down one after another, during one charge, tumbled with Rowley and Meredith. Col. H. K. Burgwin, a boy of twenty-two, stuck by the flag until he was bored through both lungs, through the neck, and the mouth. He fell at last and Lieut. Col. John R. Lane took his place by the colors, and he was soon cut down with three wounds.

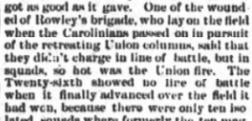

To say that the slaughter was enormous on that field is to speak in flippant terms. Battle historians proudly thought it worth while to go into enthusiasm when ranks were decimated. On the field I write about scores of Union regiments lost 60 to 70 per cent. killed and wounded. That means 6 or 7 out of every 10 shot down. The Twenty-fourth Michigan, of the 100,

A SUNDAY BATTLE.

THE BLOODY DAYLIGHT 'ASSAULT' AT FORT SANDERS, TENNESSEE.

Three Thousand Confederates Stormed a Log and Earth Bastion, but Got No Further than the Ditch—Genius and Daring of Lieut. Benjamin.

(Copyright, 1922, by American Press Association. Book rights reserved.)

FEW rods of ditch from five to ten feet in depth, behind it a parapet of logs and earth and behind that a dozen cannon and a couple of hundred men armed with rifles and hand grenades; a storming column of 3,000 peerless soldiers rushing in the darkness, bayonet in hand, to clamber over the simple obstacle, breach the line of battle, take a city and decide a campaign—here was a focusing of elements for a sensation, even at the front in war time. It was at Fort Sanders, on Sunday morning, Nov. 29, 1862, when Longstreet beheaded Burnside's army at Knoxville, Tenn. Longstreet's attack was a hazardous one, as he had done in Pickett's charge at Gettysburg.

Many an incidental fight took place for the control of Knoxville. The day to east Tennessee, and fell to Longstreet, whose corps of invincibles had been sent west after Gettysburg to try and wrest it once more from the Union grasp. Burnside had but recently jumped into the tracks of a retreating Confederate army and hadn't reached a firm foothold. He commanded 12,000 men. Longstreet brought 20,000 against him.

The opposing armies first came into collision a few miles south of the city, for Burnside was pushing on to Chattanooga, leaving Knoxville behind him, at the same time that Longstreet was leaving Chattanooga behind him to surprise and carry Knoxville. Little had been done by Burnside toward intrenching the place, because no one expected so serious an occupation. The field of fighting had apparently moved south for good.

In the midst of busy efforts to build defensive works around the city the Confederates appeared in force about a mile beyond the outer fortifications, on the south, on Nov. 17, bent on going straight into Knoxville. There was really little in the way of their doing so on that morning, excepting about 700 Union cavalry led by Gen. W. P. Sanders in person. Sanders commanded a full cavalry division, but he remained at the point of danger to see it out. The handful of men who were left to fight while their infantry comrades were getting things in trim behind them. With the enemy closing in and the breastworks and trenches of the city in a state of confusion, Sanders asked for a day's grace at their labors. The general referred the matter to Sanders, who said yes, without of course consulting Longstreet as to his intentions. The day's grace was to be in the night of the 18th. During the night of the 17th Sanders' men built a breastwork out of fence rails, sent their horses to the rear and awaited the issue of the next morning.

It so happened that Longstreet was anxious for a speedy attack, and his leading soldiers ran into Sanders' rail pile early on the 18th and drew back, with countless broken shins. Then Sanders' engineers were brought into play, the rails were knocked into splinters, and a Confederate column charged upon and overwhelmed the brave cavalry. Sanders' men were wounded, and while he stood erect, head and shoulders above the flimsy breastwork, over which bullets swept like driving hail. His courage stimulated his followers and they butted the enemy unit with bayonets, and by that time the breastworks and redoubts around the city were nearly completed.

Directly in rear of the spot where Sanders fell, and at the most salient point south of the town, there was an old Confederate fort which the Union engineers were busy remodeling during Sanders' picky fight on the outskirts. As soon as news of his heroic deed was carried back the work was named in his honor.

The ruling spirit in Fort Sanders was Lieut. Benjamin, Battery E, Second United States Artillery. Benjamin commanded the artillery in the fort, ten or twelve ordinary field pieces. About 200 riflemen belonging to the Seventy-ninth New York, Highlanders, the One Hundredth Pennsylvania Roundheads, and the Twentieth Michigan were distributed about the fort, which was an irregular quadrilateral averaging 100 yards' length on a side. The work was located at the angle where the lines of defense on the north and west met, and its capture by the Confederates would carry down the Union line, running east and south from it. It was faintly placed and poorly constructed, but such as it was the defenders had to make the best of it.

The Confederates fought at night, Fort Sanders was the key to Knoxville and devoted ten days to preparations for attack upon it. Thirty cannons belonging to Alexander's crack artillery corps were placed in batteries along the walls, and a sharp range. Four pieces were elevated upon skids so as to rain down shells vertically inside the parapet, at Fort Sanders, and four long range guns were placed on a hill a mile and a half away, having a range to reach lengthwise the trenches adjacent to the fort on the south. Ordnance enough, it would seem, to make dust out of Cobras susceptible to Measles. Deadly and dangerous as the cobras are they may nevertheless be occasionally handled with impunity by those who know how, and possibly by persons who possess some characteristic which makes them less liable to attack, as we know is the case as regards bees in our own country. Miss Hopley relates a case of a Brahmin boy, who was taken into a cobra's den, but his own voice attract and handle them with impunity, and they would come forth from thickets or walls and go to him. He was regarded by some of his countrymen as divinely inspired, but in spite of that he got bitten at last.—Quarterly Review.

DEATH OF LIEUT. SANDERS. of a log and earth fort in a few minutes. But this was not all. At the supreme moment, after bombardment had done its work, a storming column of infantry, followed by horse batteries, was to proceed through the gap and sweep whatever the artillery fire spared around the fort or beyond it. The fort once passed, then on to the reserve lines and through them to the town.

The men in Fort Sanders assumed that the enemy was planning to do. Every foothold on the exterior slope was pared off, the ditch was widened, and riflemen stood on duty along the parapet at the ticklish hours of twilight and dawn to welcome assaults in due fashion. A happy thought of Lieut. Benjamin's placed the oblique in the way of the enemy. Along the front of the fort was a field of pine stumps, where the trees had been cut off two feet from the ground. Benjamin, with his men, would telegraph wire about the stumps, enough to trip soldiers on them just high enough to abate of brush was made under the screen of a ridge, so as to be unseen until assaults were almost upon it.

For some reason the Confederate attack was made at the first streak of dawn, leaving but little time for the artillery prelude. It was on Sunday, the day of consultation between the two armies, that the batteries fired a few signal shells at the fort and tossed a few more into the lines beyond it, and were then called off their exciting game to give cold steel a chance. Suddenly three lines of men in gray, 1,000 Mississippians and 2,000 Georgians, from McLaw's veteran division, rushed from their cover, 200 yards from the goal, and headed for it at double quick. They moved on noiselessly, without yelling or firing a shot, but with their bayonets ready for execution the instant the parapet was reached. When fairly under way the columns wavered, the front ranks going down on the tangled wire. Benjamin opened his guns with canister, and the riflemen around him piled their shots upon the discomfited assailants. A setback for them was inevitable, but the rear ranks crushed the wire beneath their tread and pressed on in the face of the storm with matchless impetuosity.

They reached the ditch, but with their ranks in a jumbled mass instead of the formed line, as soldiers should move to the assault. The north western bastion of the fort formed a salient angle and reached out, as it were, toward the Confederate lines. In their haste to be first on the works, and possibly because of the confusion over the tangled wire episode, the heads of the three columns converged at the angle. On the edge of the ditch everything came to a halt, but many of the men were cool enough to fire through the embrasures upon Benjamin's artilleryists and on the riflemen above on the parapets. The fire of the fort was soon silenced under these telling short range shots and the Confederates far in the rear believed that it had surrendered.
