HISTORY OF THE SOUND.

The Early Explorations of Puget Sound.

Deception Pass a Mismomer—Naming of the Bays and Islands by the Ancient Mariners.

The names of towns, villages, rivers, mountains, lakes and bays of the country are often an excellent record of its history. So far there has not yet appeared any history of Puget Sound, and some time will probably elapse before the muse inspires an author to become the Herodotus of the Mediterranean of northwestern America. Meanwhile, however, there is the record of the names of localities which, though mostly overlooked by those who are busy with the acquisition of wealth and absorbed by the adoration of the almighty dollar, speaks eloquently to those who pause to think, and who let their thoughts wander backward to the days that are gone in order to learn what the days that are to come may bring and to meditate on the childhood, maturity and old age of nations. Probably the first mariner of European birth who sighted, as far as we know, the waters of Puget Sound was a Greek sailor in the service of the Spanish viceroy of Mexico. His vessel sailed along the waters in the north of the Sound about 400 years ago. The brave pilot has been dead for centuries, the rule of the Spaniards in Mexico is over and the English speaking race has meanwhile conquered almost the whole North American continent, which in those days when the first white explorer approached our coasts belonged still to the red men. But though these great changes and others of equal import have taken place, the name of the plucky Greek still lives in the name of the straits through which he sailed. Even to this day the waters are called the straits of "Juan de Fuca."

Three centuries elapsed after Juan de Fuca's adventurous voyage before the first white explorer entered the Sound itself. This navigator was a lieutenant of Vancouver's, who sent him from his central station at Restoration point to explore the inlet on May 19, 1792; the historical fact is again recorded by the name of the waters, which, in honor of Lieut. Peter Puget, was called Puget Sound.

A great island in the north of the Sound is called "Whidby's island." It is the largest island of these waters and was once inhabited by the "Satchets," whose villages were located among the beautiful pastures and meadows that we so characterize of the island. The Spaniards, Quimper and Eliza, passed it without paying much attention to it, but Vancouver's officer, Whidby, explored its coasts from one end to the other during the months of May and June, 1792, the name which the island has retained until to-day bearing witness of the event.

Fidalgo island received its name from the canal of Fidalgo, which was baptized thus in 1791 by Vancouver in honor of a well known Spanish officer of that name.

The highest mountain on the island is named "Mount Erie," in honor of Commodore Perry, of the United States, the hero of Lake Erie.

Deception pass, which separates the two islands above named, also records an interesting historical fact. The entrance to this passage was first observed by the Spanish explorers, Quimper and Eliza; afterwards it was explored by Vancouver's officer, Whidby, who, not thinking it passable for large vessels, called it "Deception" passage, which name it has retained, although Mr. Ringold, in the ship Porpoise, 1841, sailed through it and proved the name a misnomer.

Port Townsend, or, as it should be called, Port Townshend, received its name from Vancouver, in honor of the Marquis of Townshend, one of the lords of the English admiralty, who signed the navigator's instructions.

Port Ludlow was named after Mr. Ludlow, a well known United States naval officer of the war of 1813, who received his death wound on board the ship Chesapeake. Vancouver had not explored this port, and Wilkes, in 1841, who was the first to survey, gave the name mentioned to the harbor.

Camano island, east of Whidby island, received its appellation from the "Bocas de Camano," a name given by the Spaniards, Eliza, to the Admiralty entrance.

Bellingham bay was named by Vancouver, but the explorer in his journal does not give any reason for that name.

Cypress island was also named by Vancouver, on account of the many cypresses found there.

Duwamish river and bay were surveyed by Lieutenant James Alden, of the coast survey, and named after the natives of that region; the name of Elliott is of more recent origin.

Port Orchard was discovered on May 24th, 1792, by Mr. Orchard, one of Vancouver's officers and named in honor of him.

Blake island received its appellation by Mr. Wilkes in honor of Capt. Blake.

The above are a few instances given in order to show that the nomenclature of Puget Sound is the history of Puget Sound, and a complete investigation of the plain names will teach the student more of the past of this region than the perusal of lengthy volumes, for in reading up the lives and adventures of those whose names survive to-day he will become acquainted with details of those times in which the explorers lived that would never be obtained in the day records of historical volumes, but which are charms of biographies.

HE TUMBLED.

The Attractive Young Lady Uses Slang to Good Advantage.

Softly shone the subdued light of the solitary gas-jet in the parlor of the Biederback mansion on the avenue, according to the artistic liar of the Chicago Tribune, and soft was the voice of the abashed young Erasmus Shackelford, who sat on the edge of a chair, mopped his heated face, and smiled with a kind of papier-mache smile at the entrancing young woman in the dazzling aureole of whose auburn hair he had fluttered in agonizing captivity for months and months.

"Miss Viola," he said, clearing his throat and speaking with every indication of a man about to say something, "you will not be surprised, I presume, if I—I express the feeling, the opinion, as it were, that it's pretty hot this evening?"

Erasmus gave his face another frenzied swipe with his handkerchief and subsided into palpitating silence.

"No," replied Miss Viola, with a smile that brought a large and ecstatic lump of something or other up into his throat, "I am not surprised, Mr. Shackelford. You made the same observation earlier in the evening."

"Yes," he gasped, "I believe I did. It—it was not an entirely new remark. In fact, it was a kind of—a chestnut, I suppose."

The agitated youth made another effort to crush down the lump in his throat. "And I—I feel, Miss Viola—as if I were a—a kind-of—of observation myself that was getting tiresome. Haven't I been—been observed here a little too often? Do I seem to be—a chestnut," and he mopped his handkerchief over his glowing face in tremulous jabs, his voice took on a despairing sound—"a sort of roasted chestnut?"

"No, Erasmus," slowly answered the maiden. "When a chestnut is roasted it pops."

The conscientious historian is bound to record the fact that at this point Erasmus immediately popped.

Bennett and the Pressman.

James Gordon Bennett has a way of dropping in to examine the Herald at the most unexpected times, and as his visits often result in a general "shake up" and reorganization of the paper's managerial, editorial and working forces, they are awaited with fear and trembling by his employees. On one of these occasions, one of the pressmen, a man who had worked for the elder Bennett and was an excellent workman, though guilty of an occasional lapse from sobriety, had a black eye, and was in a quandary as to what excuse he should offer if Bennett noticed it. Acting on a sudden inspiration, he seized an ink roller, and rubbed a dab of ink on the side of his face, completely concealing the discoloration of the skin. Presently Mr. Bennett came into the press room, and with the superintendent, John Hays, went carefully through, criticizing every detail, and looking sharply at every employee. When about to leave, he turned suddenly and pointing at the besmirched pressman, said, "Mr. Hays, what is that man's name?" The culprit quaked in his shoes until Mr. Bennett said, slowly, "I want you to give that man three dollars per week more wages; he is the only man in the room that looks as if he had been working."

Epepsy.

We recommend Electric Bitters for dyspepsia and all diseases of the liver, stomach and kidneys. Sold at 50c. and $1.00 per bottle by Janek.

AN OLD MAN TURNED OUT.

This Time the Sons Were the Heartless Ingrates.

Aster Hoarding His Property to the Hays he is Thrown into the Street.

In the Home for the Aged, conducted by the Little Sisters of the Poor, at west Harrison and Throop streets, says the Chicago Herald, there was admitted a few days ago a man feeble of step, bent of form and greatly advanced in years, who had in many ways earned the comfort and solace of this christian refuge for his brief remaining space of time on earth. Yet it has been reported among some of the most intimate acquaintances of this old man that he would never have been compelled to accept the free offerings of charity had it not been that he was literally turned out in the streets by his own sons, to whom he had bequeathed all his property and fortune.

This most aged of Chicago's surviving pioneers was Augustin D. Taylor, father of ex-Representative James A. Taylor, a well known local politician, formerly private secretary to Collector Seoberger and at present secretary of the Iroquois club. The personal history of the elder Mr. Taylor is of full interest to the people of Chicago, and they will feel strong regret should it become apparent that in his old days he has been made to feel that want of filial affection and duty best described by the abhorred word ingratitude. It has been said that no man will hold himself guilty of ingratitude, and James A. Taylor is hardly an exception to the rule.

Augustin D. Taylor is a man in whose veins the blood of longevity runs. His years have far exceeded the scriptural allotment. He is entering upon his ninety-fifth year, having been born April 28, 1796. He came to Chicago in June, 1813, before the town was incorporated. He enjoys the distinction of having built, chiefly with his own hands, the first Catholic church erected in this metropolis. The house of worship referred to was St. Mary's church that stood on what is now the corner of Lake and State streets. State street, now celebrated as one of the busiest and mightiest marts in the world, had really not been laid out when this modest little wooden church was built. Besides this distinction Mr. Taylor is known as one of the oldest surviving American soldiers. He is, in fact, the only male pensioner of the war of 1812 now remaining on the records of the pension office for this district. A call was made on the old veteran at his home yesterday. The visitor was admitted by Sister Anna, the superior. "I will send Mr. Taylor down to the reception room," she said pleasantly, "if he feels able to stand the ordeal of an interview. He is very old, you know—past ninety-four—but his mind still seems quite clear and unimpaired, and his memory of past events is really something wonderful."

Presently the old man entered. His form was much bent. His face was shrunken and the color of parchment. The symbols of unusual age showed in his worn face and figure as plainly and unmistakably as verbal inscriptions. Yet he seemed willing to talk of the past, and reference to same events long gone by afforded him no little pleasure. It was only when reference was made to reports of ingratitude on the part of his sons, who allowed him to become an object of charity, that his brow darkened and his dim and fading eyes filled with tears.

"I once had a good deal of property," he said, his voice quivering and his breast swelling with the emotion he could not conceal. "I had $40,000 or $50,000 in city and country real estate, clear of all debt. My fatal mistake was in signing away my interest in my homestead after having divided the rest of my property among my children. That was my fatal mistake. The homestead was at 398 Taylor street, where my son James now lives. It originally belonged to my wife. She died eleven years ago, and I had my life interest in the property, but foolishly signed it away. After the children had got everything I found myself without a home. I was buffeted about from one son's house to another's, till at last my old friend and neighbor, John P. Barron, a south Water street commission merchant, brought me here. Remember, I have no complaint to make against anybody. I am contented and happy here and no money could induce me to leave. My old eyes are too dim to use my prayer-book any longer, but I can use my beads."

"I was born in Hartford, Conn., and was 18 when I was drafted in the war of 1812. Connecticut was not much in favor of that war. I was in the Independence artillery company, and saw only a few days' service and no battles. We went from New London to Saybrook and remained in the fort there till discharged. About a fortnight after I came to Chicago, and in 1833 I began work on the first St. Mary's church. I also did the carpenter work for St. Mary's brick church built later at Wabash avenue and Madison street. Peter Page was the mason. The original frame structure was afterwards moved to the rear of the brick church and used for a parochial school. I did work on many other churches, both Catholic and Protestant."

"I was one of the trustees here before the town was incorporated, and afterward at different times held the positions of alderman, assessor and collector. In the early days I was a member of St. Mary's, but for the last twenty-six or twenty-eight years have attended the Jesuit church on Twelfth street. This place is my home now and no money can get me away from it. Here, at least, I feel secure, and here I can remain contented and happy till I die. My sons may have grown tired of me after I divided all my property among them, but I have no fault to find. Now, I suppose you have learned all that anyone cares to know about me."

Mr. Barron, the south Water street merchant, who secured the old man's admission to the home, said yesterday: "James A. Taylor claims to mingle only with the best society, and he has always spent money freely, but I can not help feeling very bitter toward any man who will show himself an ingrate to so worthy a father. It is shameful. The old gentleman was kicked and cuffed about from one son to another, and finally dumped on the sidewalk near his old home. I took him in and made arrangements for his admission to the Home for the Aged, and he was glad to go there. A few years ago his sons allowed him to go to jail in satisfaction of a judgment for $5000 obtained by Mrs. John Armstrong, a distant relative, for whom he had been guardian, and I signed his bond as soon as I heard of it and secured his prompt release. Mr. Taylor admitted that he owed Mrs. Armstrong about $3000, but his sons had his property when the judgment was obtained, and they finally had to settle the matter. The son at Glencoe could not give the old man a home because he had an invalid wife. I am told that James lately tried to induce his father to leave the institution and share a room in his house, paying for the same with his pension, but the latter preferred to remain in the home of the church."

MERRITT'S FOUR QUEENS.

Each Was a Queen, and Mr. Bolton Paid a Good Deal to See Them.

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, Ga., July 18.—A big game of poker took place here a few nights ago. The principal players were northerners, who came over here from Savannah for a day. After an hour or so of play, with scarcely enough difference in luck to warm up the players, a jackpot was made which was not opened until four or five hands had swelled it to handsome proportions.

Young John Z. Merritt, finding three queens in his hand, threw in a twenty-dollar gold piece with great confidence. Jay Hugh Bolton examined his hand and found a pair of jacks and the ten, nine and seven of diamonds, one of the jacks being also of that suit. With the alternative of drawing to his four flush, Bolton remarked that it would cost $50 to play and posted the cash.

All the players threw up their hands except Merritt, who merely saw the raise. Mr. Merritt took one card and got his four queens. Mr. Bolton split his jacks, and drawing to his four flush, took in the eight of diamonds, making his hand a straight flush. Mr. Merritt casually remarked that his hand was worth $1000, and put that amount in the pot.

"My hand is worth $5000," said Mr. Bolton, in a tone whose nervousness caused Mr. Merritt to think that perhaps an attempt to bluff was in progress.

"Fifteen thousand more," said Mr. Merritt.

"Fifteen thousand more," Mr. Bolton retorted.

Merritt's confidence in his queens was undiminished, and he chuckled to himself to think what a snap Bolton had got himself into. There might be some doubt about Mr. Bolton's ability to pay if he lost, but it was worth the risk.

"Thirty thousand more," was the net result of Mr. Merritt's brief self-consultation.

Mr. Bolton paused with his eyes over his hand to see whether it was all right, and apparently went into a mental computation of his bank account.

"I call," said he, throwing up an I. O. U. to balance the pot.

"Four queens," said Mr. Merritt, spreading out his hand on the table and making a move as if to draw in the stakes.

"Not so fast, if you please—a straight flush!" said Mr. Bolton.

Mr. Merritt's face fell and Mr. Bolton pocketed his winnings—something over $43,000—on that hand.

Bodies Forty Years in a Salt Mine.

In a salt mine near Hermannstadt, in Hungary, which for many years had been full of water, and was visited by tourists on account of its great depth and its repeating echo, a recent heavy rainfall raised the water to an extraordinary height. Last Thursday, says a Vienna correspondent, a number of dead bodies appeared on the surface, and Friday they were taken out with considerable danger to those who undertook the task. They were found to be the bodies of Hungarian Hovveds, 300 of whom fell in the battle of Vix Akna on the 4th of February, 1849, and instead of being buried were thrown into the salt lake of the mine. The bodies are so well preserved that the wounds which caused death may be seen quite plainly. Two of the bodies are headless.

Marvelous Effect of a Green Cloud—Strange Story From Tennessee is Vouched for Good Authority.

A special dispatch to the Globe-Democrat from Middleborough, Kentucky, says the people in the eastern portion of Claiborne county, Tennessee, are excited over a remarkable occurrence which took place there on Sunday evening last. It is one of the most marvelous occurrences ever heard of, and it will prove to be a problem over which scientific minds may wrestle for some time to come.

Edgar Ramsey is a farmer who lives five miles from Lick Skillet. He arrived in Middleborough yesterday afternoon. The story he told would not find believers at first, but since then it has been proven that he has told nothing but the truth. His statement is as follows:

"Last Sunday afternoon I noticed what appeared to be a large, green-looking cloud coming from a westerly direction toward my house. It was a long distance off, and the rain was falling heavily. Shortly afterward it became very cold—in fact, so cold that I went indoors, lit a fire, and put on a big heavy coat. When I came out again the big green cloud was almost over the house, and the air was as cold as on a winter day. I watched the cloud for a few minutes, and then hail commenced falling and I was forced to go indoors again.

Eighteen hundred and ninety promises to hold no mean position in the history of politics. It is not the Force bill, or the imperial rulings of Speaker Reed, or the advent of new states in the union which will alone make it memorable, but the most distinguishing feature is the marvelous growth of the Farmers' Alliance, which now is accredited with holding the balance of power.

Messrs. Chambers and Stanton were elected to fill the vacancies in the city council at the special election held on Tuesday. They are both good citizens, and THE HERALD hopes they will be liberal and progressive councilmen. The city needs a system of sewerage; our people have strongly expressed their desires in this matter, and the present council has let the best part of the season pass by with doing nothing in this respect but obstruct the wishes of their constituents. Sickens on every side is largely traceable to lack of sewerage. Messrs. Stanton and Chambers have both expressed themselves in favor of improvement, at least in this respect, and they should make it their main effort to see that there is no further unnecessary delay.

Martin J. Malony will be one of the democratic and Harvey Reed one of the republican candidates for the nomination for sheriff of Kittitas county.

The democrats will have no lack of timber to make the race for congress this year. From this side Hon. C. H. Warner, of Whitman, and J. L. Sharpstein, of Walla Walla, will probably be before the convention, and from the west side Hon. Henry Drum and Thomas Carroll, of Pierce, and Hon. J. B. Metcalf, of King. Charles S. Voorhees, of Spokane, J. B. Reavis, of Yakima, and James Hamilton Lewis, of King, are also mentioned and would have strong followings should they permit their names to be used. The Yakima delegation is in favor of a Pierce county man, and Hon. Henry Drum has the preference.

The first election this fall will be held in in Maine on the 8th of September, when state officers and congressmen will be voted for. Wyoming will follow next with an election on the 11th of September, at which state officers and a legislature to choose two United States senators will be chosen.

Alas! The spectacle of William Walter Phelps, our minister to Germany, being used for a bar bill is not calculated to improve the standing of American diplomats abroad.

In New York and Pennsylvania, along with horse races, big squashes and pumpkins, gilt-edged butter and fat cattle, the managers are offering inducements in the way of ribbon decoration for tariff debaters. The Democratic Reform Club of New York stepped into the arena and issued a challenge for a debate and the Republican Protective League accepted it. The announcement of McKinley combatting Mills, or, better still, Blaine pitted against McKinley would be a drawing card.

Capt. Holton is canvassing the county. His cream-colored ponies stop in front of every house on the Wenas, the Natchees, or the Ahtanum, as it may be, while the captain is on the inside button-holing the head of the family or grinning while having to kiss the babies. It is said that if he can control the Yakima delegation he will be a candidate for congress, and in the event of his only having a fighting following he will bob up serenely for the state senate.

A close and intimate friend of Blaine is said to have asked him quite recently whether he would, under any circumstances, be a candidate for the presidency in 1902, or whether he would allow his friends to push his cause before the national convention. The secretary in reply declared most positively that he had no intention of becoming a presidential candidate, and did not care to pose even as a possibility. He had no doubt his friends would be delighted to bring his name before the convention at a single word from him, but he added emphatically that he did not intend to give that word.

Missourians as Wholesalers.

Spokane correspondence Spokane Review: All Missourians resident in the northwest are invited to "squat" together at North Yakima on September 4, 5 and 6. We have quite a number of them here and all are going. Those we have here are substantial men and good citizens, but in conversation with one of them this morning your correspondent suggested the propriety of the North Yakima authorities doubling their police force during the convention of Missourians at that place. The gentlemen kindly remarked: "That would be a good thing, and a safe one. A Missourian never indulges in the theft of anything small, but they might purloin a horse and lot, a stack of grain or an entire patch of watermelons. I say this to place the North Yakima authorities on their guard, as the Missourians will bear watching—that is, on a large scale."

Now that Annie Rooney, of Wilmington, Delaware, has been granted a pension for the war of the rebellion, it is suggested that Daniel McGinty, Esq., be also given one to date back to 1812.

SOME OF THE LEADERS.

Men in the Councils of Democracy whose names are now coupled with Congressional Honors.

Henry Drum, who is a member of the executive committee of the central democratic club of Pierce county, is one of the popular and able men in the state. He was born in Girard, Macoupin county, Illinois, in 1867, and by his own efforts obtained a university education, being a graduate of the Illinois State university. He moved to Farmer City, Ill., in 1890, and engaged in the manufacture of brick; thence he moved to Hebron, Neb., where he became associated in the banking business with Hon. Walter J. Thompson, whose sister he subsequently married. He also engaged, to his profit, in stock raising. In 1893 both he and Mr. Thompson sold their interests in Hebron and moved to New Tacoma. They purchased the Bank of New Tacoma and reorganized it as the Merchants' National bank, of which Mr. Drum is now vice-president. He has served as president of the school board of Tacoma, was elected as mayor in 1888, and served one year in that position. He is interested in many and diverse commercial and other enterprises, and his unusual business and financing abilities are kept actively employed. He was elected as a member of the first senate of Washington, and carries the distinction of being the only democrat elected to that body. He is also one of the state commissioners to the World's fair. He is now spoken of for congressional honors, and should be content to be a candidate if it is believed he can get the nomination almost without an effort.

Thomas Carroll was born at the corner of Fifth and Chester streets in Philadelphia, within 100 feet of the old Independence hall, in 1842. He moved from there to Waupaca county, Wisconsin, with his parents in 1854, where he went to school. He joined the army as a private in the Eighth Wisconsin (old Eagle regiment) in 1861, and served during the war three and a half years. He studied law after the war with Leroy G. Palmer, of Mount Pleasant, Iowa, a brother of Gen. John M. Palmer. His home at the time was at Salem, Iowa. He remained there until 1883, when he came to Washington and settled in Tacoma. He was elected city attorney of Tacoma four successive terms, notwithstanding the city at the time was largely republican. Mr. Carroll came into particular prominence as the attorney of the gentlemen who were indicted in 1886 for driving the Chinese out of Pierce county. It will be remembered that there were 53 Pierce county citizens indicted at that time, and the legal contest was one of the most stubborn in the history of the state. He is married and has a wife and two children. A number of his old neighbors are now residing in Tacoma, including three men who served in the same regiment with him. Those who know him best give him the highest praise for all the qualities that go to make a first-class citizen and a gentleman. In the coming convention at Seattle he is looked upon as the leading candidate for the congressional nomination.

John Mayo Palmer was born at Carlinville, Illinois, March 10, 1843, and is a graduate of the Harvard law school, in the class of 1868. From 1872, until April, 1880, he was engaged in the practice of law with his father, Gen. John M. Palmer, at Springfield, Illinois. Mr. Palmer has devoted his life almost exclusively to the practice of his profession, although he served one term in the Illinois legislature, and was for three years an alderman of the city of Springfield. He is an active working member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and takes great interest in all matters connected with it. He came to Tacoma in April, 1880, in search of health which he found in the salt air and fogs of the Sound, and is now one of the most ardent and enthusiastic believers in the future greatness of the state of Washington. His family consists of a wife and three sons. One of his sons is a cadet at the United States military academy, one of them is at Chehalis, Lewis county, and the other is a student at Washington college, Tacoma. Since his arrival he has closely identified himself with the democratic party.—Seattle Telegraph.

Chickens Coming Home to Roost.

The following communication appeared in the last issue of the Ellensburg Localizer over the signature of "Occasional." It makes interesting reading for the members of our city council and all who are opposed to sewerage: Having been absent east for the last five months, I am agreeably surprised at the stir and vim manifested in plucky little Ellensburg. I stopped over a few days at North Yakima, with a view of investing in future capital property, but was sadly disappointed with the sewer facilities. Yakima is like a child just after a severe chastising. Its sanitary affairs are sadly in need of looking after. The stench from east-away rubbish and old privies is horrible. By an almost unanimous vote some months ago the citizens of North Yakima decided in favor of sewerage. On top of this the council asked for an expression of opinion from the people on this subject, either by vote, petition or mass meetings. With hardly a dissenting meeting was given at a largely attended meeting at the city hall. This is not all. The amount of sickness here during the summer season is an expression in favor of sewerage that cries aloud for relief. In response to these entreaties, the council answers that the indebtedness of the city is already over twenty-five thousand dollars. Well, what of that? Does "Occasional" pass us by because we have an indebtedness of $25,000? Is it our indebtedness he is afraid of, or the health and life of himself and his family? Let us see. He comes to Yakima to invest in property because he sees here the natural elements and conditions which go to the up-building of a city. He notes our indebtedness, but sees in it a trifles not worth mentioning; he becomes cognizant of the lack of sewerage by getting a whiff of the disease-breeding air that comes from the out-houses. That settles him. He moves to Ellensburg where, with an indebtedness greater than that of Yakima, they contract for a $60,000 school house, purchase an electric light plant at a cost of $34,000 and bond the city for $150,000 to pay for water works and a system of sewerage. Still the council wishes an "expression of opinion."

The Democratic Clubs in Session.

The state association of democratic clubs met at Tacoma on Tuesday. The organization was a large one, the various clubs being represented in strength. Col. M. Kaufman, president of the Pierce county central democratic club, called the meeting to order, when a temporary organization was effected with Junius Rochester, of Seattle, president; J. J. Browne, of Spokane Falls, vice-president; John L. Sharpstein, of Walla Walla, secretary; Ira R. Bamber, of Tacoma, chief marshal; and vice-presidents, one from each county.

Letters of regret were read from Grover Cleveland, David B. Hill, Wm. F. Vilas, Isaac P. Gray, Henry Watterson, Roger Q. Mills and many other distinguished democrats.

Every time the name of Cleveland was mentioned it was greeted with vociferous cheers. From Yakima county J. B. Reavis was made vice-president and placed on the committee of resolutions, J. R. Coe on the committee of permanent organization and J. M. Baxter on the committee on credentials.

The committee on permanent organization and officers made the following recommendations, which were approved by the convention: President, Henry Drum; vice-president, Chester H. Warner; secretary, George Hazard; treasurer, Francis Henry.

Members of executive committee—Benjamin B. Glascock, Samuel Vinson, Theodore N. Haller, Emery McGinnis, Joseph A. Kuhn, Hugh C. Wallace, George W. Bell, Robert W. Ruffin, Robert Gerry. Vice-president for the national association of democratic clubs—Thomas C. Griffiths. Four members of the general committee for the national association of democratic clubs—Junius Rochester, M. Z. Goodell, John J. Brown and Nelson G. Blatock.

CONGRESSMAN WILSON, of this state and Congressman Beckwith, of New Jersey, got into a disgraceful row on the floor of the house of representatives, Wednesday. Wilson chipped into a dispute with out cause and was called a liar for his pains. He responded with "damned liar" which brought forth a still stronger expression and this Wilson resented by striking Beckwith, who is a white-haired old gentleman. It is time Wilson subsided. He has been in too many rows which have mortified the people of the state he misrepresents.

The new grain crop, which is of splendid quality, is now in the market and can be had at the North Yakima Roller Mills. All washing out, chopped barley and chicken feed can find them at the mill at greatly reduced prices.

Preserved in alcohol at Janek's Pharmacy there is a pig with one head, two bodies, eight legs, two eyes and three ears. It was brought in by A. A. Manning of the Wenas, and is not credited with ever having any great amount of life. —Arthur W. Spike and Thomas McCabe, who have heretofore given their allegiance to Queen Victoria, were made citizens of the United States this week.

Republican County Convention.

At a meeting of the Yakima County Republican Central Committee held Aug. 23, 1890, it was resolved to hold the Republican Convention of Yakima county at the Court House in North Yakima, on Saturday, September 20, 1890, at one o'clock p. m., for the following purposes: To elect seven delegates to the Republican state convention at Tacoma, Sept. 25, 1890.

To nominate candidates for the following offices: Representative, Two County Commissioners, Auditor, Treasurer, Sheriff, Prosecuting Attorney, County Clerk, School Superintendent, Assessor, County Surveyor, Coroner.

To elect a Republican county central committee, and such other business that may come before the convention.

It is recommended by the committee that the primaries be held in the various precincts in the county on Saturday, Sept. 13, 1890, at one o'clock, p. m. The Republican State Central Committee recommends that the "Primary Election Law" be adopted by the precinct committees for the primary elections.

Each precinct will nominate two candidates for justices of the peace and two for constables and will elect a Republican precinct committee.

The ratio of representation for each precinct in the county convention will be one delegate at large from each precinct, one delegate for each twenty-five votes and one delegate for each fraction thereof in excess of twelve votes cast for Hon. John L. Wilson, Republican candidate for Congress at the election held Oct. 1st, 1890.

The precincts in the county under this apportionment are entitled to representation, as follows: 1—Horn, 1; 2—Bedrock, 1; 3—Lone Tree, 2; 4—Alder Creek, 1; 5—Parker Bottom, 1; 6—Hoze, 2; 7—Wenas, 2; 8—Yakima City, 3; 9—Ahtanum, 2; 10—Cowychee, 2; 11—Simco, 1; 12—North Yakima, 9; 13—Kennewick, 1; 14—White, 1; 15—Mount Pleasant, 1; 16—Tappan, 1; 17—Natchees, 2; 18—Wide Hollow, 6.

Total, 40. The committee recommended that alternate delegates be elected and that no proxies be allowed. R. B. MASON, Chairman. H. D. WISCHNETZ, Secretary.

SHE WAS POISONED!

Not by anything she drank or took, but by bad blood. Is it any wonder she feels "blue?" In most cases blues are only another name for bad blood. A man or woman feels unhappy. Life seems dark. The heart is heavy. Bad blood is carrying its poison all over the body, and we call it "blues."

Read these experiences: Mrs. C. C. Hutchinson, of Pittston, Pa., says: "I consider Dr. Acker's English Blood Elixir the best medicine in the world, not only for blood troubles, but also for dyspepsia, with which I have been afflicted."

"Both my wife and myself firmly believe that Dr. Acker's English Blood Elixir is the best of all blood medicines, and will remove all impurities of the blood." GEO. V. SPOONER, Valley City, Dak.

This grand Elixir is sold by druggists in all parts of America. It is a pure, honest medicine; not a cheap sassa-parilla. Try it to-day.

—Man was made to mourn, but need he suffer unnecessarily? For every poison there is an antidote and happily Blood-bilder is the antidote to many evils that poison man's existence. This great vegetable specific is the most valuable that medical research has succeeded in wresting from the secret depths of science. It is a surprisingly controlling power in cases of cancer and tumors, it reduces glandular swellings, alleviates epilepsy, regulates the bowels, promotes digestion, tones the stomach, induces sleep, sustains against fatigue and expels scrofulous and all other blood derangements. Price $1. Sold by all druggists.

—James Beck brought to THE HERALD office Wednesday a lot of pears, a number of which weighed nearly a pound each. Mr. Beck has made a selection of pears for the Spokane exposition, which Mr. Pugsley is placing in alcohol.

—A hundred dollars was quickly subscribed by citizens Monday to defray the expenses of the drum corps at Tacoma and Seattle. Ellensburg democrats offered to stand half of this expense, but the tender was declined with thanks.

YAKIMA WILL ENTERTAIN.

The Missourians Will be Here in Great Numbers and we Will Greet Them With Open Arms.

Next week will be a gala occasion for Yakima. She must put on her best bib and tucker and her company manners and smile her prettiest as she welcomes the sons and daughters of old Missouri.

The streets have been cleaned; the electric lights will shine for all; the buildings will be decorated with banners and bunting; the horses are being trained for the races; the farmers are preparing to bring in marvelous displays of fruits, vegetables, grasses and grains; the oxen, sheep and pigs are being fattened for the barbecue, and the musicians are rehearsing for the ball.

At the fair, which will be one of the attractions during the reunion, our guests will see much of interest and much to marvel at. They will see the resources of the most productive soil in the northwest. They will see fruits that have no superior in size and flavor anywhere; tobacco the equal of the best leaf of Virginia and North Carolina; corn that rivals the choicest growth of Iowa, Nebraska or Illinois; vegetables which have no peer; oats, barley and wheat which will show the perfection of berry and a yield that cannot help but astonish the stranger, and hops which have no competitor outside of the Pugetall valley.

First—The exhibition will be open to the public on Thursday, the 4th day of September, continuing for three days. Second—The doors will be open at 8 o'clock a. m. each day. Third—The exhibition of stock and awarding of premiums will be on the second and third days, commencing at 9 o'clock a. m. in front of the hall on Second street and continue until the program is through.

Fourth—Until after the awards are made, marks of any kind or other indications of ownership will not be allowed. Fifth—Care will be taken by the officers of the fair to prevent accidents or loss, but will not be responsible should any occur. Sixth—Exhibitors of stock must be careful to have the entry card in a conspicuous place on the animal while the premiums are being awarded.

Seventh—No one shall act on the awarding committee who is an exhibitor in that particular class or is related to any person competing for a premium before such committee. Eighth—After the fair no article will be returned except on presentation of the card received by the exhibitor from the superintendent of his or her respective department with the exhibitor's name upon it.

Ninth—All exhibits entered in the hall for competition must be the handwork or production of the person entering the same. Any one disregarding this rule will forfeit all claims as an exhibitor. Tenth—Exhibits for competition, except bread, cakes and cut flowers, must be entered and on exhibition in the hall by noon of the first day of the fair and remain on exhibition until after the premiums are awarded, and exhibitors will give attention to what they have on exhibition, and after the premiums are awarded take charge of and remove the same at the close of the fair.

Eleventh—All stock exhibited must be entered by 8 o'clock on the day on which the same is to be exhibited. Twelfth—No one will be allowed to see the entries until after the awards are made. Thirteenth—Exhibitors will confer a favor on the officers of the fair by making their entries and bringing in their exhibits before the first day of the fair, in order to facilitate the arranging of the same.

Fourteenth—No article will be entered in more than one department or permitted to compete for more than one premium. This will not apply to live stock. Fifteenth—Persons leaving the hall without procuring a return check will be charged the regular price for admission. INVITED GUESTS.

All the officers of the agricultural and mechanical societies and members of the press generally are respectfully invited to attend our fair without further notice. PREMIUMS.

A first and second cash premium will be given for each line or class of exhibits. In the hall all articles entered taking a premium will be charged ten per cent. of the premium. All stock entered for premiums will be charged ten per cent. of the premiums. Premiums will be paid at the secretary's office after 2 o'clock p. m. Saturday, September 6th.
