—How can she encourage him as she does? What can she see in that solemn prig? indignantly demanded Miss Fanny Holton, who had shown a marked interest in Mr. Rossiter during his first six months in society and had danced with him all through the season. "He is one of the foremost, stupidest men I ever knew—utterly unlike what I supposed a cavalry officer to be."

—And yet, Fanny dear, you were very much taken up with him the first winter last year, I mean. "Was the reply of her most devoted and intimate friend.

—What an outrageous fib! I wasn't, and, if I was, it was because I wanted to draw him out—do something to enliven him. Of course I danced with him a great deal. There isn't a better dancer in town, and you know it, Maud; you've said so yourself time and again.

—Well, you didn't draw him out—nor on the moment he sees Mabel Vincent he falls heels over head in love with her. Why, I never saw a man whose every look and word so utterly gave him away."

—Was Miss Mand's characteristic and slangy reply. "And it's my belief she'll take him, too. She likes him well, and she says he knows more than any other man she has ever met.

—He has money, too, and can resign and live here if she wants him to," went on Miss Mand after a pause which, oddly enough, her friend had not taken advantage of.

—You don't know anything about what Mabel Vincent will or won't do, Maud. I've known her years longer than you have, and though I'm awfully fond of her, and would have this repeated for the world—and you must swear never to repeat it to anybody—I know her so well would expect his old adjutant to come back to them at once and restore efficiency and discipline to troop D. Mr. Lane replied with the utmost readiness; but this was before Mabel Vincent came into his life and changed its whole current. How much and how devotedly he loved her Lane himself never realized until the day of his promotion reached him, and with it the news that his successor was already designated. He knew that within the week he might expect orders from the war department to join his troop at Fort Graham as soon as he had turned over his funds and property to the officer designated to relieve him; he knew Noel so well as to feel assured that he would not wait for the arrival of formal orders, but, if the colonel would permit, would start the instant he received telegraphic notification from Washington that "Old Riggs" nomination had been approved. "This is Wednesday," he mused; "and by a week from today I can count on his being here and in ten days I must go."

There was a large party that night, and, fully a week before, he had asked that he might have the honor of being Miss Vincent's escort. It was with great disappointment that he received her answer, which was spoken, however, in a tone of such sorrow that poor Lane felt that the barb, at least, of the arrow had been removed.

"I don't know how to tell you how I regret having to say 'No, Mr. Lane,'" she said, and there was a tremor in her voice and a little quiver at the corners of her pretty mouth. "I have almost felt confident that you were going to ask me—is that a very bold thing to say—for you have been so—so kind to me since our first meeting, and indeed I wanted in some way to let you know that there were other arrangements already made. But how could I say anything? Mr. Rossiter, the eldest son of father's former partner, comes to pay us a visit of four or five days before he goes abroad again. And he is a great friend of the Chiltons, and, being our guest, he goes with me. Indeed, I'm very sorry, Mr. Lane, if you are disappointed."

Fred, of course, begged that she should give herself no uneasiness. There was no other girl whom he had thought of taking. Mr. Rossiter was very much to be envied, and he would like to call and pay his respects to that gentleman when he arrived. "By all means do," said Miss Vincent; and, if not asking too much, would Mr. Lane get a card at the club? Brother Ross was away, or she wouldn't trouble him. But Lane was delighted to be troubled. Anything she asked—any service he could render—she flew with untold eagerness to accomplish; and, though properly jealous of the coming man—this Mr. Rossiter, of whom he had never before heard mention—he was eager to meet and entertain him. The gentleman was to arrive on Monday, and Lane spent a delightful evening at the Vincents', wondering why he hadn't come. Tuesday would surely bring him, or an explanation, said Miss Mabel; and on Tuesday Lane was prompt to call, and glad to spend another long evening at the hospitable old homestead, and stoutly did he hold his ground through three successive relays of visitors, his eagerness to do so by a certain time in his lady's bright eyes that spoke volumes to his throbbing heart, and that very next morning at the club he found her dainty missive on his breakfast table.

How early she must have risen to write it—and to have seen the announcement of his promotion in the Washington dispatches! True, he remembered that it was frequently her pleasure to be up before he got to bed, and she would be sure to give her father his coffee; for Vincent was a business man of the old school, who liked to begin early in the day. Of course he had seen the name in the Washington news and had read the paragraph to her; that was the way to account for it. But her note was a joy to him in its sweet, half shy, half confidential wording. She merely wrote to say that Mr. Rossiter had wired that he had been detained in New York until the end of the week; and now, if Capt. Lane had really made no engagement, she would be glad indeed if he cared to renew the invitation which with such reluctance she was compelled a week ago to decline. Lane totally forgot his breakfast in his haste to rush to the writing room and send her a reply.

All the Queen City had been quick to see or hear of his "sudden emigration" and consequent devotion to Mabel Vincent, and great was the speculation as to the probable result.

"How can she encourage him as she does? What can she see in that solemn prig?" indignantly demanded Miss Fanny Holton, who had shown a marked interest in Mr. Rossiter during his first six months in society and had danced with him all through the season. "He is one of the foremost, stupidest men I ever knew—utterly unlike what I supposed a cavalry officer to be."

—And yet, Fanny dear, you were very much taken up with him the first winter last year, I mean. "Was the reply of her most devoted and intimate friend.

—What an outrageous fib! I wasn't, and, if I was, it was because I wanted to draw him out—do something to enliven him. Of course I danced with him a great deal. There isn't a better dancer in town, and you know it, Maud; you've said so yourself time and again.

—Well, you didn't draw him out—nor on the moment he sees Mabel Vincent he falls heels over head in love with her. Why, I never saw a man whose every look and word so utterly gave him away."

—Was Miss Mand's characteristic and slangy reply. "And it's my belief she'll take him, too. She likes him well, and she says he knows more than any other man she has ever met.

—He has money, too, and can resign and live here if she wants him to," went on Miss Mand after a pause which, oddly enough, her friend had not taken advantage of.

—You don't know anything about what Mabel Vincent will or won't do, Maud. I've known her years longer than you have, and though I'm awfully fond of her, and would have this repeated for the world—and you must swear never to repeat it to anybody—I know her so well that I can say she doesn't know her own mind now and would change it in less than six months if she did. She is as fickle in love as in her friendships; and you can't have forgotten how inseparable you and she were for three months at Mrs. Hoffman's, and then how she fastened on Katherine Ward. I don't care a snap of my finger whom Mr. Lane chooses to fall in love with, but if it's Mabel Vincent he'd better insist on a short engagement and stand guard over her with his sword in the meantime. It's 'out of sight out of mind' with her, and has been ever since she was 4 years old."

—And so in the smoking room at the club and in the feminine cliques and coteries in society the probability of Mabel Vincent's accepting Lieut. Lane was a matter of frequent discussion. But of all this chit-chat and speculation Capt. Lane stood in profound ignorance as he entered his dark office that drenching Wednesday morning with her precious note in his waistcoat pocket. He neither knew nor cared what old Vincent was worth; all he wanted was Mabel's own sweet self, for he loved her with his whole heart and soul, with all the strength and devotion of his deep and loyal nature. He could hardly control his voice so as to speak in the conventional official tone to the sergeant in charge as the latter saluted him at the doorway and made the customary report of the presence of the detachment. Lane stepped into his little dressing room and quickly appeared in his neat fatigue uniform. There wasn't a ghost of a chance of would be recruits wandering in that day; but he was a stickler for discipline. He required his men to be always in their appropriate uniform, and never neglected wearing his own while in the office; yet in all the Queen City no one but his little party, the applicants for enlistment and the few citizens who came in on business, had ever seen him except in civilian dress.

"These reports and returns all go in tomorrow, I believe," said Lane to his sergeant.

"They do, sir."

"Well, will you take them in to the clerk again," said Lane, blushing vividly, "and tell him to alter that 'first lieutenant' to 'captain' wherever it occurs? The official notification is just here," he added, almost apologetically.

"Sure I'm glad to hear it, sir. All the men will be glad, sir, and I'm proud to think that I was the first man to salute the captain today," was the sergeant's delighted answer. "Till call Taintor in at once."

But Lane was blissfully thinking of the little note, now transferred to the breast pocket of his uniform blouse, and of how not his honest old sergeant but sweet Mabel Vincent was the first to hail him by his new title, and in thinking of the note and of her he failed to notice that, so far from coming at once, it was fully ten or fifteen minutes before Taintor, the clerk, put in an appearance, and when he did that his face was ashen gray and his hand shook as though with palsy.

"The sergeant will tell you what is to be done with the papers, Taintor," said Lane, conscious that he was blushing again, and consequently striving to appear engrossed in the morning paper. The man picked them up one after another and without a word; he dropped one to the floor in his nervousness, but made a quick dive for it, and then for the door, as though fearful of detention. He hurried through the room in which the sergeant and one or two men were seated, and, reaching his big desk at a rear window, where he was out of sight, dropped the papers on the floor and buried his face in his shaking hands.

A few minutes later the sergeant, coming into the little cubby hole of a room in which Taintor had preferred to do his work, found him with his arms on the desk and his face hidden in them, and the soldier clerk was quivering and twitching from head to foot.

"What's the matter with you, Taintor?" growled the old soldier. "Didn't you promise me you'd quit drinking?" The face that looked up into his was ghastly.

"It isn't drink, sergeant," moaned the man. "At least, I haven't exceeded for a month. I've got a chill—an ague of some kind. Just let me run down to the drug store and get some quinine—perhaps a little brandy. Then I can do this work. Do, sergeant. I won't abuse your kindness."

"Well, go, then," was the reluctant answer; "but get back quick. And only one drink, mind you."

Taintor seized his cap and fairly tottered through the adjoining room to the stairway, down which he plunged madly, and, heedless of the pelting rain, darted across the street to the gas lighted bar room.

"There's something worse than either whisky or ague back of this," muttered the veteran sergeant, "and I could swear to it."

CHAPTER IV.

"My cousin, Mr. Withers," said Noel.

Capt. Lane, as has been said, allowed until the following Wednesday for the arrival of his regimental comrade, Mr. Noel. He was not a little surprised, however, on the following Tuesday morning, as he sat at breakfast at the club, glancing over the morning paper, to come upon the following announcement:

DEPARTING ARRIVAL.

Our readers will be interested in knowing that Capt. Gordon Noel, of the Eleventh United States Cavalry, has been ordered on duty in the city, in charge of the cavalry rendezvous on Spokane street. Capt. Noel comes to us with a reputation that should win instant recognition and the best wishes from the Queen City. For nearly fifteen years he has served with his gallant regiment, and has been prominent in every one of the stirring campaigns against the hostile Indians of our western frontier. He has fought almost every savage tribe on the continent; was disabled in the Modoc campaign in '78, commanded the advance guard of his regiment that reached the scene of the Oatman massacre only in time to rescue the remnant of the regiment from a similar fate, and for his services on that campaign was awarded the compliment of staff duty in the city of Washington.

At his own request, however, he was relieved from this, and rejoined his regiment when hostilities were threatened in Arizona two years ago. And now, as a reward for gallant and distinguished conduct in the field, he is given the prized recruiting duty. Capt. Noel is the guest of his cousin, the Hon. Amos Withers, at his palatial home on the Heights; and our fair readers will be interested in knowing that it is a bachelor, and, despite his years of hardship, danger and privation, is a remarkably fine looking man.

"Not a very demonstrative man, your friend the captain, but seems to be solid," was Mr. Withers' remark.

"Oh, yes. He is as solid as steel as they make them," answered Noel, airily. "Lane has his faults, like most men. It is only those who really know him, who have been associated with him for years, and whom he trusts and likes, that are his friends. For example, I'd go through fire and water for him, and he would for me—but of course you wouldn't think it, to see his perfectly conventional society manner this morning. If I had left you down at the foot of the stairs and had stolen up on tiptoes and gone over and put my arms round his neck, you would probably have found us hugging each other and dancing about that room like a couple of grizzly bears when you came up, and the moment he caught sight of you he would have blushed crimson and got behind his ice cream in a second. You just ought to have seen him the night we met each other with our detachments down near Guadalupe Canyon when we were hunting Geronimo. Some d-d fool of a ranchman had met him and said I was killed in the little affair we had with the Apache roan guard. Why, I was perfectly amazed at the emotion he showed. Ever since then I've sworn by Fred Lane; though, of course, he has traits that I wish he could get rid of."

"Good officer, isn't he?"

"Yes—Lane isn't half a bad soldier. Of course it remains to be seen whether or not of captain he will make. He has only just got his troop."

"But I mean he—well—is a brave man; has shown up well in these Indian fights you were telling us about."

"H'm!" answered Noel, with a quiet little chuckle. "If he wasn't, you bet he wouldn't have all these years in the Eleventh. A share of any kind is just the one thing a man won't stand. Why, Amos, when old Jim Blazer was our colonel during those years of the Sioux and Cheyenne and Nez Percé wars he ran two men out of the regiment simply because they managed to get out of field duty two successive years. Oh, no, Lane's all right as a soldier, or he wouldn't be wearing the crossed sabers of the Eleventh."

Mr. Withers listened to these tales of the doings and sayings of the regiment with great interest. "Lane might have been here a dozen years," said he to himself, "and no one in our community would have known anything at all about the dangers his comrades and he had encountered in their frontier service. It's only when some fellow like Noel comes to us that we learn anything whatever of our army and its doings."

He took his cousin to the great molding works of which he was the sole head and proprietor, and presented his foreman and his clerks to the captain, and told them of his career in the Indian wars on the frontier, and then upon change, and proudly introduced "my comrade, Capt. Noel" to the magnates of the Queen City; and, though not one out of a dozen was in the least degree interested in "the captain" or cared a grain of wheat what the army had done or was doing on the frontier, almost every man had time to stop and shake hands cordially with the handsome officer, for Amos Withers was said to be a man whose check for a round million would be paid at sight, and anybody who was first cousin to that amount of "spot cash" was worth stopping to chat with, even in the midst of the liveliest trade 'twixt bull and bear on the floor of the Chamber of Commerce. A tall, gray haired gentleman, with a slight stoop to his shoulders and rather tired, anxious eyes, who listened nervously to the shouts from "the pit" and scanned eagerly the little telegraphic slips thrust into his hand by scurrying messenger boys, was introduced as Mr. Vincent, and Mr. Vincent inquired if Noel knew Lieut.—or, rather, Capt.—Lane.

"Know Fred Lane? He is the best friend I have in the world," was the enthusiastic answer, "and one of the best men that ever lived."

"Ah! I'm glad to know you—glad to know what you say. The captain is a constant visitor at our house, a great friend of ours in fact. Ah! excuse me a moment—Mr. Vincent seized a certain well known broker by the arm and murmured some eager inquiries in his ear, to which the other listened with ill-disguised impatience.

Withers and, of course, "the captain," were the center of a cordial—not to say obsequious—group so long as they remained upon the floor, and the secretary presently came to them with the commendments of the president and a card addressed to Capt. Gordon Noel to the floor of the chamber at any time during business hours, which that officer most gracefully acknowledged, and then went on replying to the questions of his new friends about the strange regions through which he had scouted and fought, and the characteristics of the Indian tribes with whom he had been brought in contact. And by the time Cousin Amos declared they must go up to the club for luncheon everybody was much impressed by the hearty, jovial manner of the don't begin to realize how delighted I am to see you! So long."

"But about dining with us, Captain—"

"Oh, Lord, yes!" burst in Noel. "What evening, now? I'd almost forgotten. Getting in among bricks and mortar saddles my head. 'Tisn't like being out in the saddle with the mountain breezes all around you; hey, Fred? Gosh! I don't know whether I can stand this sort of thing, after our years of campaigning." And the lieutenant looked dubiously around upon the dark and dingy walls and windows.

"Suppose we say Thursday evening, captain," suggested Mr. Withers; "and I'll have just a few friends to meet you two army gentlemen."

"I shall be very happy, Mr. Withers." "Good! That's the talk, Fred!" heartily shouted the lieutenant, bringing his hand down with a resounding whack between Lane's shoulder blades. "Now we are off! Come along, Amos." And the cousins disappeared down the dark stairway and popped into the carriage.

"Not a very demonstrative man, your friend the captain, but seems to be solid," was Mr. Withers' remark.

"Oh, yes. He is as solid as steel as they make them," answered Noel, airily. "Lane has his faults, like most men. And by the time Cousin Amos declared they must go up to the club for luncheon everybody was much impressed by the hearty, jovial manner of the dashing cavalryman, and there were repeated hand shakes, promises to call, and prophecies of a delightful sojourn in their midst as he took his leave.

"Has 'Cpt. Lane come in yet to lunch?" inquired Mr. Withers of the liveried attendant at "The Queen City," as his cousin inscribed his name and regiment in the visitors' book, as introduced by "A. W.," in ponderous strokes of the pen.

"No, sir. It's considerably past the time the gentleman generally comes. I don't think he'll be in today, sir."

"Then we won't wait, Gordon. We'll order for two. What wine do you like?"

Over at the dingy recruiting office Capt. Lane had forgotten about luncheon. There were evidences of carelessness on the part of the clerk who had made out his great batch of papers, and the further he looked the more he found. The orderly had been sent for Taintor, and had returned with the

THE NOMINATION OF WILSON.

John L. Wilson was renominated by the republicans at Tacoma without opposition. The old professional politicians and office holders of the party had so willed it, and their will was law.

What was this all about? Why should men of brain and brawn cut up such capers over a mental and physical feather weight?

Why should "silver-haired veterans" hug one another over the nomination of a man whom the press and the people of the United States have condemned for his brawling and profane actions in the house of congress?

Why should he be called "gifted" and "brilliant" who is not a student and who has never mastered a single subject? Most men have at least one subject to which they have given thought and study and over which they are masters.

Why should he be said to be "loyal to republicanism" who was the confidant and abettor of Chas. S. Voorhees in his race for congress, and who sought to retain, from a democratic administration, his office of receiver of public moneys at Spokane Falls on account of services rendered that party?

FOOLED THE FARMER.

Last year we exported 40,000,000 bushels of wheat and imported 1900, probably seed wheat for the use of the farmers. The whole duty collected on our wheat importations was $386. That is the sum of "protection" that our farmers receive from a tariff on wheat, while they sell millions of the wheat trade price abroad which regulates the price at home.

GRANDPA FERUSON has been talking to a Post-Intelligencer reporter, and seems to feel personally aggrieved because Commissioners Whitson and Smith do not agree with him in the location of the agricultural school at Spokane Falls.

THE McKinley tariff bill has at last been passed by congress and is now a law. Rutherford B. Hayes, when interviewed regarding the measure, said: "It is ruinous to our best interests and it will do an infinite amount of harm."

After Moses P. Handy. Holton was the county and city. Ed. Butler runs the bar. Judge Nichols runs the state committee. And, damn it, here we are.

TRIPLE TOPICS.

The great Canadian murder trial has come to a close. Burrell has been convicted of murdering Benwell and sentenced to hang on the 14th of November.

Frederick Billings, ex-president of the Northern Pacific railroad, died at his home at Woodstock, Vermont, September 30th. Billings' fortune is estimated at $6,000,000.

The house has adopted the report for the unearned Northern Pacific lands from Wallula to Kalama. The bill will open to settlement 3,000,000 acres of land in Washington and Oregon.

The Portland-Tacoma passenger train collided with a freight near Tenino on Sunday and an engine and a Pullman sleeper were badly wrecked. Two workmen were stealing a ride on the freight and were killed and their bodies badly mangled.

Douglas county measures 108 miles the longest way and covers its greatest width at 62 miles. It contains 142 townships, equalling 5,112 sections, or 3,271,680 acres. The latter divided by the population gives each inhabitant an allotment of 1,035 acres.

In referring to the recent episode in which Washington's doughty representative figured, the Post, published at the capital, drops into poetry:

And yet, remarked John L., when first The talk of me began, They all declared I wouldn't make An able congressman.

POLITICS IN BUNCHES.

The nomination of J. T. Eshelman for joint senator from Yakima and Klickitat means his election. His party in Klickitat has endorsed him, and at home he shines like the reddest sun of mid-day and will run like a race horse with a cockle-burr under the crupper.

Benjamin Franklin Young could not control Klickitat for Holton, as he had agreed to do, so there will be razors in the air around that window.

Of course, though, he can, as promised by Holton in his nominating speech, manage and control all of the great men at Olympia. What a pity he will never get there—knows all the great statesmen intimately and still must stay at home.

Fairweather, of Spokane, is taking his medicine. He wanted to be chairman of the republican state central committee and was ungenerally put aside. Now he carries a concealed knife and can extract political teeth without pain.

Ex-Governor Miles Moore, of Walla Walla, who walked out of the convention in his own county, had no recognition at Tacoma and didn't seem to be able to whoop things up for Calkins to any great extent.

Howlett is another one who is living on very thin gruel—knocked out at home and Tacoma, too; while Holton climbs the pole showing the red, white and blue in broad stripes across his great record as a knocker-out.

A prominent Spokane republican says the party now belongs to Patrick Henry Winston, Haines, of Seattle, and Captain Colner, of Tacoma. Anybody who wants a smile will please call at the side door on the alley and send in a card.

Eugene Wilson, of Ellensburg, chairman of the republican state central committee, is a Nelson Bennett man. Nelson says nothing, but saws a heap of wood.

Perhaps Calkins thinks he has a walk-over. All the same, Squire is getting there. It is not a question of transcendent ability this year.

Calkins, however, is shrewd. He has taken the benefit of the advice Ex-Representative T. J. V. Clark gave to Walter J. Thompson a year ago. Clark had been around to see Squire, and he had been to the Turner headquarters, and he had been into several other camps at all of which there was a plentiful display of glassware and wines. Finally he came to Thompson's elegantly furnished rooms.

Naively may not be Holton's idea of a representative for Yakima county, but somehow the people think he is the right man in the right place this time.

Democratic watchfires are burning brightly from the mountain tops of eastern Washington for Carroll. They signal to the democracy at the Sound to "hold the fort for we are coming" fifty thousand strong for honest, competent, true and faithful Thomas Carroll.

Patrick Henry Winston is swinging around the circle speaking for republicanism and John L. Wilson. Notice the distinction? He is dated to set Yakima on fire October 10th. Civil service must have been thrown to the eternal demotion bow-wows when a federal official how long some of our democratic holdovers would last if they started out to give honest Tom Carroll a boost towards congress?

After Moses P. Handy. Holton was the county and city. Ed. Butler runs the bar. Judge Nichols runs the state committee. And, damn it, here we are.

AT THE SPOKANE EXPOSITION.

Yakima Enjoys the Post of Honor With a Marvellous Display of the Products of our Fruitful Soil.

Spokane Spokesman: When the crowd surged into the building, the first thing seen was a double row of 120 watermelons from Yakima, but the day was rather cool and the Yakima melon patch suffered no violence at the hands of the multitude. One of these melons weighs sixty-seven pounds. A. B. Ross, who is in charge, intends to have a bevy of United States troops parading up and down the double row of temptation.

The story is told that down in the Yakima country corn grows so high that step ladders have to be used in picking it. In proof of this Mr. Ross has on exhibit a lot of cornstalks nineteen feet high. The incoming crowd, after looking for a moment at this corn and melon combination of wonders, did not pause to see the other prodigies of Yakima soil, but rushed on, apparently afraid of bewildering their minds by further contemplation of such freaks of nature. But those who lingered around the first display seen in entering saw a radish that weighs twenty-six pounds.

"Think of taking that up in your fingers, sticking it into a salt cellar and munching it with one bite," said a bystander to a farmer, who was gazing upon the radish.

"Well, y'gosh, I could purty near do it," responded the big fellow, as he grinned, showing in the midst of his tangled whiskers a cavity like the open jaws of a shark about to close on a South Sea Islander.

This is the way, according to samples, the grain and vegetables grow in Yakima: Potatoes, 2 inches in diameter; tobacco, 1000 pounds to the acre; oats, 7 1/2 feet high; timothy, 6 feet; alfalfa, 12 feet; corn, 10 feet; clover, 6 feet.

To-day the babble of a miniature irrigation ditch will be heard in front of this display. The lullaby of the waters may soothe those who might be afflicted with vertigo at the sight of the cereal and vegetable miracles.

Was Pleased With Our Fair.

J. E. Neely, editor of the Rosalia Register, who was in the city during the meeting of the Missourians, has this to say of our fair:

"Through the courtesy of the management we were allowed to 'dead-head' our way in and given the liberty of the large hall in which the exhibits were placed. Everything that the soil of any country produces was here displayed in magnificent profusion. Corn that would make an Illinoisan turn green with envy; tobacco that Virginia cannot discount; fruits that California would be proud of; vegetables that would do honor to New Jersey or Maryland; and last, but by no means least, paintings and all kinds of fancy work made by the hands of Yakima's fair ladies were all displayed. Those who think there is no civilization or refinement in the west should see the beautiful works of art here displayed by the ladies of the west. The Moxee company, who have a large tobacco plantation near Yakima, had a fine display of tobacco in its natural state and made up into very tempting looking cigars. This is an industry that will bring vast sums to this state. Tobacco can be grown here as well as in Virginia, and the demand for tobacco is greater here than there. The freight from the tobacco producing states of the south and east would alone be a good profit for it here. With the production of tobacco comes cigar factories, and these employ hands who help to swell the population. The freight charges from the east are so great that tobacco producers in this country can control the entire trade of the Pacific northwest at prices that would yield large profits. Tobacco producing is as yet in its infancy, but it is bound to be one of the chief industries of this grand young state."

Kittitas Democrats.

The democratic convention of Kittitas county was held at Ellensburg on Saturday last. On temporary organization V. G. Frost was elected temporary chairman and F. C. Senator temporary secretary. After the report of the different committees, F. H. Rodkin was elected permanent chairman and F. C. Senator permanent secretary. The balloting then began for two members of the legislature, and the present probate judge, John Davis, and A. L. Slemmons were nominated by acclamation. For sheriff there were three candidates, M. J. Maloney, C. S. Palmer, A. A. Mead. The rivalry was very strong for this office, the excitement running high for a while. Mead, who was the defeated candidate last year for the same office, was finally nominated on the third ballot by three majority.

The following nominations were then made: Auditor, M. J. Maloney; clerk, E. T. Matthews; prosecuting attorney, C. V. Warren; treasurer, J. F. Travers; superintendent of schools, J. H. Morgan; assessor, John Foster; coroner, Dr. Fox; commissioner—first district, A. Hevens; second district, James Heron; third district, M. Mitchell.

Among the Newspapers.

The Roslyn News reaches our exchange table. It is a small paper, but has many good qualifications besides being democratic.

A newspaper has been established at South Prairie, Washington. It is named the Echo, and in speaking of the Gloria Mundi splices it calls them the Glory Monday. That is good for a starter.

Pasco is to have another paper, The Cannon Ball. With two papers already established in Pasco, THE HERALD is puzzled to know where the powder is coming from to keep the new venture moving.

Ellensburg's fourth paper, but the only one that shouts for democracy, has made its appearance. It glories in the name of The Washington Sentinel, and its present standard is maintained it will shake up some dry newspaper bones in the metropolis of Kittitas.

REUNION AND TRIE.

The Democrats Live up to Their Promise and Nominates Their Best Men to Fill the Offices.

The democracy of Yakima county met in convention at the court house on Saturday afternoon, Sept. 27th, for the purpose of nominating a county ticket, and right well it has done its work. Although there had been considerable canvassing, especially for the offices of treasurer and assessor, the delegates, with few exceptions, remained unpledged and labored faithfully to put up a ticket that would on account of its excellence more than carry the party vote. This single purpose remained in view throughout the four hours the convention was in session and resulted in a ticket that the party feels proud of and that even hide-bound republicans say is a good and strong one.

The convention was called to order by Dr. B. M. Savage, chairman of the county central committee, and temporary organization was formed by electing J. T. Eshelman chairman and C. W. Liggett secretary. Upon taking his seat Mr. Eshelman thanked the convention for the honor conferred and briefly urged upon the delegates the necessity of nominating honest and capable men, whose choice would preclude the defeat of the republicans on the 4th of November next.

On motion, the chair appointed a committee on credentials consisting of Dr. B. M. Savage, John Cowan, J. L. Morrison, Carl A. Jensen and J. T. Kingsbury, who reported the following delegates as entitled to seats:

North Yakima—Dr. B. M. Savage, Wm. Lee, W. G. Coe, Matt Bartholet, G. W. Cary, A. H. Reynolds, J. W. Golden, James Foster, W. A. Cox, E. M. Reed, H. Allen, C. W. Liggett, Hugo Sigmond, J. M. Baxter, J. T. Kingsbury, Theodore Stone, J. T. Eshelman, Joe Bartholet, J. R. Coe and G. W. Gardner.

Wenas—John Cowan, George Hall, A. L. Sherman, Barney Moore and Charles Longmire.

Moxee—L. B. Kinyon. Wide Hollow—James Beck, Dag Beck, John Beck, Orlando Beck, J. W. Morrison and J. L. Morrison.

Cowhee—Sherman Lewis and Dave Weddel. Tampico—James H. Conrag and Andrew Slaven.

Natches—J. M. Kincaid, John McPhee, J. L. Chamberlain and N. S. Hecox. Yakima City—John Edwards, C. O. Rodman, Hugh Purden and Matt Lacey. Lone Tree—M. B. Cochran, Carl A. Jensen and Henry Creason.

Ahtanum—S. V. Hughes and A. J. Chambers. The chair appointed the following committee on order of business: E. M. Reed, J. W. Beck, A. L. Sherman, D. D. Weddle and S. V. Hughes. The committee was unanimously in favor of following the good old democratic precedent of starting in at the head of the ticket and nominating down, and not commencing at the tail, as the republicans had done, and in accordance therewith they made their report, which was adopted.

At this stage of the proceedings the temporary officers of the convention were made permanent. Joseph Bartholet was elected assistant secretary and the committees of the convention extended to the press.

On motion, the chair appointed the following committee on platform and resolutions: Wm. Lee, J. M. Kincaid, A. H. Reynolds, J. H. Conrad and J. R. Coe. The following report was submitted and adopted:

Your committee heartily concur in the expressions disseminated by the democratic state convention and endorse the candidacy of Thos. Carroll, of Tacoma, for congress, as we recognize in that gentleman the personification of ability, purity and democratic principles. We further recommend the adoption of the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the general government shall issue all the money—gold, silver and paper—each to be full legal tender for all debts, public and private, in sufficient quantity for the transaction of the business of the country, and make direct loan to the people, upon ample security, at a rate not exceeding two per cent. per annum.

Resolved, That we condemn the action of the government in giving corporations large tracts of land without any return for the same; and further, that we believe that our lands should only be owned and controlled by citizens of the United States.

Resolved, That the president, vice president, United States senators, and all other federal officers, where practicable, be elected by a direct vote of the people.

Resolved, That in appreciation of the services of the United States soldiers and sailors, we demand for them justice before charity, and to this end we demand that all soldiers be paid the difference between the depreciated currency paid them and the price of gold when they were paid.

Resolved, That the government should own and operate all railroads, telegraph lines and telephones in the interest of the whole people instead of delegating to corporations the control of business in which all the people are interested.

Resolved, That the railroad system of this state is not above the law; that the right to control and so far supervise railroads as to fix fair and equitable rates for fare and freights is inherent in the state governments, and we demand that such laws be enacted by the next legislature as will secure to the people their just rights in this regard.

For auditor, the names of Mathew Bartholet and James T. Foster were presented. Mr. Bartholet was nominated on the first ballot.

Bernard Wilkinson, Theodore C. Stone, Geo. W. Cary, W. A. Cox and H. H. Allen were placed in nomination for the office of treasurer. Mr. Cary started out in the lead with eighteen votes and maintained his position through the contest, gaining one vote each time until the sixth ballot when, having received a majority, he was declared the nominee of the convention. Mr. Stone pressed Mr. Cary very closely and until the end the result was an open question.

The next nomination to be made was that of sheriff. At this moment a call being made for the professional services of Dr. B. M. Savage, that gentleman asked the indulgence of the convention and stated that his friends had urged his consent to the use of his name for the office of sheriff, and, while he heartily thanked those friends, he considered the fact that all of the candidates so far selected were from the city and he withdrew from the race in order that the office might be given to the country. Dr. Savage's action in the interest of harmony and the good of the party was loudly applauded, and as there was but one other candidate before the house, Mr. David Longmire, he was nominated by acclamation.

L. C. Parrish, of Moxee, was unanimously nominated for prosecuting attorney.

For county clerk, Mr. F. D. Eshelman, the present incumbent, was renominated by acclamation.

For county commissioners, John McPhee was nominated from the first district, Joseph Stephenson from the second and Henry Creason from the third.

For school superintendent, Mrs. Hilda Englehart Meyer was unanimously chosen.

There was another contest over the assessorship, W. W. Dickerson, Orlando Beck, George Hull and L. B. Kinyon being placed in nomination. Upon the third ballot Mr. Hull forged ahead and secured the majority of the votes and the nomination.

For surveyor, Captain J. T. Kingsbury was nominated by acclamation.

For sheep commissioner, John Cowan was chosen over Peter Leonard.

Dr. Samuel W. Rodman was the unanimous choice of the convention for coroner and was declared the nominee.

The following county central committee was elected: B. M. Savage, J. M. Baxter, H. W. Creason, J. M. Kincaid and Chas. Longmire.

Before adjournment, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the delegates heretofore elected to the state convention be authorized and directed to confer with the delegates from Klickitat county, and with the delegates from Kittitas county nominate a candidate for state senator from this senatorial district.

CONVENTIONALITIES. The statement that L. L. Thorp aspired to the nomination of sheriff was an error. Mr. Thorp's friends asked him to make the race, but he was steadfast in his refusal to allow his name to be used in that connection. He is of the opinion that David Longmire will be the next sheriff.

Unsuccessful candidates for all of the offices over which there was a contest took their defeat in good part, except for the office of assessor, there being some little ill humor displayed by a couple of candidates who failed to reach.

Chairman Eshelman, when the nominations were approaching a close, picked up a sheet of paper and with a very solemn face and mournful voice said he had a painful announcement to make. He said the members of the convention were well aware that there was considerable sickness about the county and it was incumbent upon the delegates to proceed with the nomination of coroner to sit upon the remains of the republican party on the 4th of next November. This rally was enthusiastically received, and Dr. Samuel W. Rodman was nominated by acclamation.

At the adjournment of the convention three cheers were proposed for the ticket by Dr. Savage and they were given with a will and a vigor.

It is the opinion of both parties that there are no musca domestica on the ticket nominated by the democrats.

DEATH OF JOHN BUCKLEY.—John Buckley, a well known merchant and prominent citizen of North Yakima, succumbed to consumption on Sunday, September 28th, and was buried the following day under the auspices of Yakima lodge No. 22, I. O. O. F. Mr. Buckley was born in Ireland 48 years ago, and emigrated with his parents to Canada at an early age. When 19 years old he started west, and for the past twenty years he has been a resident of Oregon and Washington. Previous to coming to Yakima in 1885, he lived in Olympia and Centralia. During the past few months disease compelled Mr. Buckley to withdraw almost wholly from business, but previous to his sickness he was very active and was at one time a large owner of stock in the North Yakima milling company and president of that organization. Mr. Buckley leaves a wife and several children in moderate circumstances, his life having been insured for $5000 in the order of which he was a prominent member.

YAKIMA AT THE EXPOSITION.—Commissioner H. B. Scudder left for Spokane Falls on Sunday last to take charge of the Yakima exhibit at the fair. Mr. Scudder is being ably assisted by J. M. Stout and A. B. Ross. The Yakima exhibit is one of the most attractive to be seen at the fair and occupies the most prominent space in the pavilion, being in the main hall near the entrance, where ground floor 40x32 feet is allotted to it. H. D. Cook is now gathering products to replace those which become wilted, and our producers are urged to assist him in every way possible. Over $500 has been raised for expenses, half of which was donated by the county and the balance by subscription of citizens. The plans for Yakima day, October 18th, have not been agreed upon, but Mr. Scudder will let us know after a conference with Manager Robinson. It is expected that Yakima will send at least two carloads of excursionists to Spokane on that occasion.

THE LATEST HOP NEWS.—The hop picking is about completed, and the Indians are spending their money among the merchants. They have received this year between twenty-eight and thirty thousand dollars for picking. Mr. W. A. Cox, of Chappell & Cox, who have bought nearly half of the crop, estimates that the expenses of picking, drying and baling this year will amount to about $50,000. With hardly an exception the yards have yielded from a thousand to five thousand pounds more than estimated. Mr. Cox says there will be twenty-five hundred bales for shipment, or nine hundred bales in excess of last year. The hops, according to Mr. Charles Carpenter, are of good quality, although a few were reddened by the frost that occurred about the 12th of September. The market at present is slightly off, and but 32 cents is offered. Growers, however, are confident of their taking another shoot upward and are not disposed to sell.

A LUCKY YAKIMA INVENTOR.—Some time ago Tom Staton patented a hay baler and shortly afterward sold a five-sixth interest to Portland capitalists for $10,000, retaining a sixth interest which was non-assessable. Last week the attorney for the Portland purchasers was in the city and tried to buy the remaining interest, offering $2000 therefor. Mr. Staton declined to sell, on the advice of friends, and was then invited to Portland to confer with his partners. It now transpires that one of the balers, under the patent, has been so far exceeded in expectations that when Mr. Staton reached Portland he was offered $15,000 for his remaining one-sixth interest, which offer he has accepted. The transfer of the property will detail Mr. Staton in Portland until the middle of next week.

A HEAVY REAL ESTATE SALE.—Mr. I. N. Terry, of New Hartford, New York, stopped off at North Yakima this week. He knew nothing of this place, but was told on the train that it had a good future; so he switched off, and was so well pleased with the town and country that he had been here but a short time when he bought the Joseph Fairbrook property on the corner of Yakima avenue and First street for $8500 cash, and two residence lots on First street, this side of Colonel Prosser's. Mr. Terry is not buying for speculative purposes, but for permanent investment, and proposes to improve his holdings. He has not decided whether to put up a store and office building on his avenue property or a hotel, and should he decide upon the latter Mr. Steiner has signified his desire to be the lessee.

A HIGHLY CREDITABLE ENTERTAINMENT.—The concert given under the direction of Rev. W. H. Cornett, Friday evening, Sept. 26th, for the benefit of the Presbyterian church, was a success in every way. The audience was a large one, and showed by hearty and frequent applause its appreciation of the talent displayed and the efforts to please made by those taking part in the entertainment. About one hundred and fifty dollars was realized, which will be applied to the work of completing the church, which has remained in an unfinished condition since its erection in 1885. Those contributing to the artistic part of the entertainment were Messrs. Bartholet, Conley, Greene, Vance, Lombard and Cornett, Mrs. Frank Hoxley and the Misses Allen, Fulkerson and Bailey.

THE SHIPMENT OF FOWLS PROFITABLE.—Yakima has struck the right gait this year in the matter of shipments and is not depending on any one thing to make her prosperous. Aside from her fruits, vegetables, hops, hay, melons and cattle, there are being shipped large quantities of ducks, geese, chickens and turkeys to the markets of the Sound and to Spokane Falls. The birds are shipped in coops covered with wire netting and get to their destination in good condition. This industry is proving very profitable to the shippers and can be enlarged upon with still greater gain.

Hon. J. M. Adams and wife returned from the Sound on Friday last. Mr. Adams, while still very weak, is considerably improved in health.
Thomas G. Redfield is back from a visit to his former home in southern Oregon. It is the only time he has been there in ten years, and he says the dullness of that section in comparison with Yakima is most marked.

Senator Eugene Canfield and his nephew, Robert Canfield, of Whatcom, spent several days in the city this week. The Canfields are largely interested in property in the vicinity of Prosser and expect to boom that place one of these days.
Jay P. Graves, brother of Judge Carroll B. Graves, one of the most successful of the Spokane Falls real estate dealers, spent Tuesday in the city. He was greatly taken with Yakima, and says it is bound to be a place of commercial importance.
Walter Oakes, of Tacoma, son of President T. F. Oakes of the Northern Pacific, spent a couple of days in Yakima this week indulging in the excellent chicken shooting to be found hereabouts. Mr. Oakes was greatly surprised to find North Yakima a place of such metropolitan appearance and was captured outright.

Lieut. A. B. Wykoff, U. S. N., spent Sunday and Monday in the city visiting friends. Lieut. Wykoff is a member of the commission appointed to select a site for a naval yard on the north Pacific coast. Among the other members of the commission are ex-Senator Thomas C. Platt, of New York, who passed through Yakima Sunday in his private car, and Captain Thomas Oliver Selfridge, who was the second lieutenant of the Cumberland when she was sunk by the Merrimac in Hampton Roads.
J. C. Lawrence, who was appointed register of the newly established land district, which embraces Douglas, Okanogan and a part of Kittitas county, spent several days in the city this week arranging for the transfer of maps and other records from the North Yakima office to the Waterville office. All business for that district will be suspended on the 20th inst. and remain so until the opening of the Waterville office on the 6th of November. Mr. Lawrence's associate is Frank Dallam, the founder of the Spokane Falls Review and at present editor of the Lincoln County Times of Davenport.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH DELEGATES IN SESSION.—About forty delegates of the Christian church met in this city on Thursday and will remain in session over Sunday. To-day the subject of establishing a newspaper in Portland is in discussion, and $15,000 of the $20,000 required has been pledged. The question of the location of the Christian college will come up for discussion in business session Saturday morning, but the final action will be taken later on by a committee consisting of F. Walden, of Watsburg; E. C. Sanderson, of Ellensburg; F. Cowden, of Tacoma; J. T. Ebelman, of North Yakima; Rev. McCallum, of Seattle; C. L. Moody, of Spokane Falls, and Rev. Neil Chestnam, of Dayton. Representatives of Tacoma and Seattle and other places are here endeavoring to secure the location of the college in their respective cities.
—Short time loans can be obtained of Crippen, Lawrence & Co. Office in Syndicate block.
—Fruit cans at S. J. Lowe's.

—October started in with genuine fall weather, and the mountains are taking on their caps of snow. Beer is rapidly going out of style, but those who are in a position to know say it will come in again next summer and be as popular as ever. Another fashion note that THE HERALD reporter encountered in his travels is that gauze underwear is no longer the proper caper, being superseded by garments of lambs wool and flannel.
—A stranger carrying a valise was crossing the alley next to the Republic office Thursday evening when some one in concealment took a shot at him. The bullet punctured the valise, letting the air out, and the poor fellow had to walk the streets all that night, as no hotel man would accept the collapsed baggage without payment in advance. The man who was so handy with the gun is in druncheon vile.
—Messrs. Chappell & Cox have thus far this year purchased between sixty-five and seventy-five tons of hops, buying for the well known house of Lillenthal Bros., of San Francisco. They have paid the top prices all along, and have bought no hops under 17 1/2 cents. But four shipments have been made by them to date, they making the first shipment of the season—the Tom Nelson hops—on the 20th of August.

—George W. Cary has sold his lot and store building on Yakima avenue, together with the stock of merchandise, to J. L. Rosenfeld. The consideration for the lot and building was $3500. The stock is now being invoiced, and as soon as this is completed Mr. Rosenfeld will take possession. Mrs. Cary retains the cloaks and millinery goods and will open up on First street.
—The North Yakima democratic club now has ninety-six members, and the list is rapidly growing. At the last meeting Joseph Baxter, E. M. Reed and W. A. Cox were appointed a committee to secure speakers from Ellensburg for the next meeting, on Thursday evening, October 9th. A big turnout is anticipated.

—On Sunday last, according to the Hebrew calendar, began the feast of Succoth, or the feast of the Tabernacles, which lasts eight days. The feast is one of the most ancient of those pertaining to the Jewish religion, and is the original of the English Harvest Home and the American Thanksgiving.
—The state board of equalization has notified Auditor Bartholet that 55 per cent. must be added to the aggregate value of real and personal property for Yakima county for the year 1896, less the sum represented by approved bank stock, and money at interest and on deposit.
—W. D. Beck has concluded to increase the height of his new brick building, and the stories will correspond with those of the adjoining Lowe building. Mr. Beck couldn't have come to a better decision and one that he will always congratulate himself upon.

—W. J. Roof states that the McKinley bill has advanced the price of imported cigars to dealers $10 on the thousand. The bill also materially advances the price of blacking, and is a direct stab at those who try to keep their persons presentable.
—The delegates to select the location for the Christian college will meet in this city on Saturday, and the field and line officers of the National Guard of Washington, for the election of a brigadier and an adjutant general, on Monday next.
—Officer Ed Kremer arrested a drunken butcher named Barrett Thursday afternoon on the charge of selling alcohol to Indians. There are several witnesses to the transaction, and Barrett is, without question, booked for a trip over the road.

THE UPPER COLUMBIA RIVER

Opening the River From Rock Island Rapids to Priest Rapids.

What the River and Harbor Will Do for Us and the Plans of the Engineers.

The passage of the river and harbor bill will give the engineers sufficient money to continue the various projects for such improvements in Washington.

The most important new improvement authorized is that of the upper Columbia river from the head of Rock Island rapids to the foot of Priest rapids, for which $79,000 will be available.

Table with 2 columns: Item, Amount. Includes Rock removed in channel, Auxiliary power, Contingencies, Total.

The auxiliary power mentioned would come from a scow wheel anchored in the cleared rapids with a line leading down to the boat to be assisted.

It is proposed to overcome Priest rapids with the same auxiliary power, only more of it, and also to clear out a channel way by blasting a portion of the submerged rocks.

The new grain crop, which is of splendid quality, is now in the market and can be had at the North Yakima Roller Mills.
