

THE YAKIMA HERALD.

VOL. IV.

NORTH YAKIMA, WASHINGTON, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1892.

NO. 41.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

H. J. SNIVELY,
Attorney at Law.
Office over Yakima National Bank, North Yakima. Will practice in all the courts of the State and U. S. land offices.

R. E. REAVIS, R. E. MILROY,
REAVIS & MILROY,
Attorneys at Law.
Will practice in all Courts of the State. Special attention given to all U. S. land office business. North Yakima, Wash.

EDWARD WHITSON, FRED PARKER,
WHITSON & PARKER,
Attorneys at Law.
Office in First National Bank Building.

S. O. MORFORD,
Attorney at Law.
Practices in all Courts in the State. Especial attention to Collections. Office on stairs, Yakima National Bank Building.

T. M. VANCE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
Office over First National Bank. Special attention given to Land Office business.

S. C. HENTON,
JUSTICE OF THE PEACE,
NOTARY PUBLIC, U. S. COMMISSIONER.
Special attention given collections and Notary work. Office over Yakima National Bank.

B. M. SAVAGE, W. W. MCCORMICK,
SAVAGE & MCCORMICK,
Physicians and Surgeons
Office on stairs in the Federal Building, Yakima Ave. Dr. Savage's residence is at Wide Hollow where he can be found at any time during the night. Dr. McCormick's residence is at his office where he can be found at any time during the night.

G. J. HILL,
Physician and Surgeon
Special attention given to diseases of women and children. Telephone No. 5.
Office over Yakima Nat'l Bank; Residence on Third street, bet. B and C.

O. M. GRAVES,
DENTIST.
All work in my line first-class. Local anesthetics used to extract teeth without pain. No charge for examination.
Office over First National Bank.

MAIL ORDERS

We make a specialty of mail order business in the northwest. We handle dry goods, clothing, cloaks, wearing apparel of all descriptions, shoes, carpets, house furnishings, etc. We keep only first quality goods, and do not carry shoddy stuffs. If you want the best at the lowest prices send us a trial order.

NEW CATALOGUE—Free on application. Also a handsome catalogue of 304 pages, showing the very latest Fall and Winter Styles. Try us FREE if you want goods matched or anything that you cannot find in your town.

The MacDougall & Southwick Co.,
117-119-121-123 FRONT STREET, SEATTLE, WASH.

Notice of Dissolution.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE partnership heretofore existing between the undersigned under the firm name of Welke & Marks, is this day dissolved by mutual consent. E. B. Marks will continue the business, collect all accounts due the firm and pay all liabilities thereof.

Dated this 12th day of October, 1892.
E. B. MARKS,
Geo. WIKEL.

Wanted.

WANTED TO BUY—FROM ONE TO THREE desert land relinquishments near Prosser. Land must be near an irrigating ditch where water can be had for next year's crop. Price must be low.
HARVEY & EDWARDS,
37 1/2 1116 Pacific Ave., Tacoma, Wash.

FOR SALE.

A HOUSE and five acres near the Ahtanum church. Land partly under cultivation and in fruit trees, berries, etc. A desirable bargain and easy terms. Enquire of J. M. Williams on the place.
38-1m

MOTHERS who have boys to cloth will find it to their interest to call and examine our line before purchasing. We have the choicest and most complete line

BOYS' AND YOUTHS' SUITS, OVERCOATS.

The largest assortment of Boys' Old Pants and Waists, Youths' Old Pants and Vests, that ever came to town. Don't take our word for it but give us a call.

I. H. DILLS.

FROM TERMINAL OR INTERIOR POINTS THE NORTHERN PACIFIC R.R.

It is the line to take
To all Points East and South.
It is the DINING CAR ROUTE. It runs through VENTURED TRAINS EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR TO

ST. PAUL AND CHICAGO

(No Change of Cars.)
Composed of Dining Cars Unsurpassed, Pullman Drawing-Room Sleepers (of Latest Equipment),

TOURISTS' SLEEPING CARS.

Best that can be constructed and in which accommodations are both first and furnished for holders of First or Second-class tickets—and

ELEGANT DAY COACHES

A CONTINUOUS LINE connecting WITH ALL LINES, affording DIRECT AND UNINTERRUPTED SERVICE.

Pullman Sleeper reservations can be secured in advance through any Agent of the road.

Through Tickets

To and from all points in America, England and Europe can be purchased at any Ticket Office of this Company.

Full information concerning rates, time of trains, routes and other details furnished on application to any agent, or

A. D. CHARLTON, Asst. General Passenger Agent, No. 121 First Street, Cor. Washington, Portland, Oregon.

H. C. HURPERY, Agent, North Yakima, East Bound. West Bound.

Atlantic Exp. 7:30 a. m. Pacific Exp. 2:30 a. m. Atlantic Mail 10:30 p. m. Pacific Mail, 2:45 p. m.

Do You Want a Good Meal?

IF SO, CALL ON

Kay & Lucy, RESTAURATEURS

(FORMERLY STEINER'S).
The excellent reputation of this Restaurant is being maintained by the present proprietors.

MEALS 25 AND 50 CENTS.

Open all Hours, Day and Night.

Puyallup-Yakima Nurseries,

J. M. OGLE, Proprietor.
North Yakima, Wash. for Fall, 1892.

200,000 Red Winter Apple Trees.
100,000 Prune Trees.
50,000 Cherry Trees.
50,000 Pear Trees.
50,000 Peach and Apricot Trees.
50,000 Grape Vines.
600,000 Gooseberry, Currant, Raspberry and Blackberry.

Investigate and Supply Your Wants at Home

Do You Read?

Of course you do, and you want the Daily Papers and the Freshest Periodicals and Novels. I am agent for all Papers and Magazines. Give me a call.

M. A. Chapman,
Stationer and Newsdealer.

Do You Write?

Yes? Well, I keep the most complete line of Stationery, blank books, Legal Blanks, Stationers' Novelties, etc., to be found in the city. Prices reasonable.

M. A. Chapman,
Stationer and Newsdealer,
Cor. Yakima Ave. & 2nd St.

Simpson Bros.

Are now prepared to furnish to the Public Superior Varieties of Fruit, Shade and Ornamental Trees.

NURSERY A MILE AND A HALF SOUTH EAST OF CITY
P. O. Box 300

All Orders by Mail or delivered in Person receive prompt and careful attention.

Hay or Grain taken in Exchange for Trees.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

of North Yakima.

DIRECTORS.
J. R. Lewis, Theo. B. Wilcox, Chas. Carpenter, A. W. Engle, H. B. Scudder.

Capital, $100,000
Surplus, $27,000

A. W. ENGLE, President. CHAS. CARPENTER, Vice President. W. L. STRISWOLD, Cashier.

DOES A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS.
Bills and Sells Exchange at Reasonable Rates.

PAYS INTEREST ON TIME DEPOSITS.

M. G. WILLS' SALOON,

New Beck Block, Yakima Ave.

The new fittings and furnishings, comfortable quarters and courteous treatment are held out to the public as inducements for patronage, and the most popular and purest makes of fine

Wines, Liquors and Cigars

Are always to be had at his Bar.

The second story of the building has been fitted up and partitioned off into

Club Rooms

Where customers so disposed can retire in seclusion for a sociable time, "far from the maddening crowd's ignoble strife."

Drop in and "Smile!"

CHEAP FARM LANDS

Improved and Unimproved.

—ALSO A FULL LINE OF—

CITY AND SUBURBAN LOTS.

Choice Tracts, 1 to 10 acres

—Especially Adapted to—

Fruit Growing and Gardening

FOR SALE ON EASY TERMS.

H. Spinning & Co.

OFFICE OVER FIRST NAT'L BANK.

THE IRONCLAD WAREHOUSE

Have your goods to store that you desire to keep in safety? If so, call upon

Chappell & Cox.

Their new Warehouse, which is as nearly fire-proof as it can be made, is now ready for the storage of goods, at owner's risk.

Charges Reasonable.

NOTICE.

PARTIES owing me are requested to come forward at once and make settlement, as I must have the money. This is urgent and must be heeded.
H. KRUEHLER.

McDERMID BROS., Cabinet Makers

And Turners, Sideboards, Desks, Bookcases, Refrigerators, Window and Doorcases made to order. All work done neatly and promptly. Shop, cor. First and A Sts.

NOTICE

General Election.

Notice is hereby given that on Tuesday, the 8th day of November next, at the county of Yakima, a general election will be held for state, district, county and precinct officers as follows, to-wit:

STATE OFFICERS.
Governor
Lieutenant Governor
Secretary of State
State Treasurer
State Auditor
Attorney General
Commissioner of Public Lands
State Superintendent of Public Instruction
State Printer
Two Members of Congress
Two Judges of the Supreme Court
Four Electors of President and Vice President of the United States of America.

DISTRICT OFFICERS.
Judge of the Superior Court for the district of Yakima and Kittitas counties.

COUNTY OFFICERS.
County Sheriff
Clerk of the Superior Court
Auditor
Treasurer
Attorney
Assessor
Superintendent of Public Instruction
Coroner
Commissioner, 1st Dist., 4 years
Commissioner, 2d Dist., 2 years
Commissioner, 3d Dist., 2 years
Surveyor
Sweep Commissioner.

PRECINCT OFFICERS.
Justice of the Peace
Constable

Notice is hereby given, pursuant to the provisions of an act of the legislature of the state of Washington, entitled "An act to provide for voting on a constitutional amendment at the general election to be held in November, 1892," approved March 7, 1892, and house concurrent resolution No. 10, adopted by the legislature of the state of Washington, session of 1891, that the following amendment to the constitution of the state of Washington will be submitted to the qualified electors of said state for their approval at the next general election

Section 1. The state may, for the purpose of constructing public buildings and other works, or for the acquisition of lands, and for other expenses incident to said construction, contract debts in any amount not to exceed in the aggregate 1 per cent of the value of the taxable property within the state, as shown by the assessed value for county and state purposes last preceding the incurring of such debts; and may further contract, for any public purpose, debt not exceeding in the aggregate five hundred thousand dollars; and the moneys arising from the issue creating such debts shall be applied for the purpose for which they were obtained, or to repay the debts so contracted, and to no other purpose whatever.

At said election the electors voting to approve and ratify said amendment shall vote "For constitutional amendment raising the limit of indebtedness of the state," and the electors voting not to approve or ratify said amendment shall vote "Against constitutional amendment raising the limit of state indebtedness."

Which election will be opened at 9 o'clock in the morning and continue until 7 o'clock in the afternoon of the 8th day of November, 1892.
Dated this 28th day of September, 1892.
W. M. YOUNG, County Auditor.

YAKIMA AND THE STATE.

Interesting Items of News from Yakima and Its Suburbs.

Bits of Gossip, Facts, Fancies, Personal, and a Hedge-Podge of Paragraphs of Every Description.

Hop men estimate that the hop yield of Yakima county in 1893 will be 12,000 bales.

A dog belonging to Charles McEwen was shot by Officer McLean, at the track, on Saturday last.

L. Frank Gordon, formerly clerk of the land office, was admitted to the bar at Spokane last week.

Mrs. Frank Bartholet returned from Ellensburg, on Saturday last, where she was the guest of her sister, Mrs. J. W. Hogan.

FOUND—A folding key; evidently belonging to a store. Owner can have the same upon application at this office and paying for this notice.

Have you lost a pair of eye glasses? If so you can have them by calling at THE HERALD office and paying the usual charges for advertising.

Water from the Selah ditch is now irrigating the lands on the east side of the divide. The Selah promises to be strictly in the agricultural "swim" next season.

No one worked harder against Yakima in the state capital fight than John H. McGraw. Shall we pay our debt by taking the votes away from our friend and giving them to our enemy?

It was erroneously reported that G. W. Carey's horse Queen had mired down in a bog and died. The unfortunate animal proved to be one of less value, much to the relief of Mr. Carey and his family.

Col. Henry Cock and a party of friends returned a few days ago from a three weeks' hunting trip in the mountains. They killed plenty of birds and trout, but failed to get a shot at deer or other large game.

Messrs. Fechter & Ross and John A. Stone are now preparing the ground, under the Selah ditch, for forty acres of Concord grapes. This will be the largest acreage devoted to this crop in the state of Washington.

Leigh R. Freeman is making arrangements for building a brick block of five storeys on his property, corner of First and A streets. Three of the storeys have already been spoken for. The building will be but one story in height.

Fred R. Reed and A. C. Walker returned on a brief visit to Tacoma and neighboring points Tuesday. Mr. Walker says one hears much favorable talk about Yakima on the train and everywhere else, and no other part of Washington seems to be so frequently discussed at the present time.

Mathew Ross, an old soldier who has been prospecting in the Olympic mountains, dropped into THE HERALD office on Sunday and said he had arrived in Yakima after walking 140 miles; that he was without money, and hungry. He was a republican and trying to get back to his home in Klickitat county to vote, but that his requests for assistance made to people on the streets who wore Grand Army badges were refused. He further said that he was not accustomed to ask for aid, but was old, crippled in service and had lost his horse in the mountains, and he thought some consideration should be shown him by his former comrades.

"It is passing strange," said a well known republican to a HERALD representative on Monday, "what a sudden change can take place in some people. It was only a short time ago when the citizens of Yakima, without regard to party alliance, were praising Mr. Snively for the efforts made by him in our behalf. He was banqueted and toasted by those who are now doing everything in their power to defeat him, and his praises were sung on all sides. Mr. Snively has not changed in the mean time. His loyalty to Yakima is as great as ever, but a new god has arisen and the sickle ones are chasing after him. This is not through a belief that he will benefit them; that he has any special kindly feelings for Yakima, nor that he is peculiarly qualified for the position to which he has been nominated, but it is a narrow party feeling that makes them men champion a cause that they can easily recognize as being against their own best interests and the interests of their home. At the last election Seattle went democratic, but now the citizens of that place are working for what they conceive to be local benefit, and as a result party lines have been dissolved and a plurality of from 3,500 to 5,000 is claimed for McGraw. Yakima has always been looked upon as a loyal county when it came to a question of her own interests, and I can see no reason why she should change at this late date."

"One touch of nature makes the whole world kin." Diseases common to the race compel the search for a common remedy. It is found in Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the reputation of which is world-wide, having largely succeeded every other blood medicine in use.

VOTING UNDER THE NEW LAW.

Explicit Instructions As to the Correct Way to Prepare Your Ballot Under the New System.

The state democratic central committee has printed a card, a copy of which follows, with a sample ballot printed upon the back, showing exactly how the ballots must be marked to be legal. The card reads:

INSTRUCTIONS TO VOTERS.

The so-called Australian ballot system has worked such a complete change in the previous methods of voting that a person who has only voted under the old system must forget the rules by which he was formerly governed in voting.

Under the old system the voter had a ticket prepared by the political party to which he belonged. If he wished to vote for every candidate on it he simply deposited the ticket in the ballot box without making a mark on it. If, on the other hand, he wished to vote for some person whose name appeared on another ticket, he was required to run a line through the name of the person on his own ticket for whom he did not wish to vote and to write the name of the person for whom he wished to vote in the place of the one scratched.

All this is done away with by the new system. The voter is now presented by the officers of the election with a ballot on which are arranged in columns the candidates of all the different parties.

The law allows him to indicate his choice in but one way. He must not scratch, tear or otherwise mutilate his ballot. He must simply put an 'X' in pencil or ink before or after the name of each person for whom he desires to vote. Use no other mark. An X is the mark prescribed by law, and it is doubtful if any other mark can be used. The courts of several states have held that the mark prescribed by law can be used.

An impression seems to exist that a voter who desires to vote for every candidate on the democratic ticket can do so by simply placing an X opposite the words "Democratic Ticket." This is a great mistake; a voter who thus marks his ballot might just as well have remained at home, since he cast but a blank ballot. An X must be placed after the name of each and every candidate for whom a voter desires to vote. The only exception to this rule is in the case of presidential electors. In that case a vote may be counted for all of the electors on the democratic ticket by marking an X in the democratic column opposite the words "For presidential electors."

Another caution—it will be better for every democratic voter to make his X in the first column to the right of the candidate's name; if you place it to the left you are liable to give it to the republican candidate. By placing the X in the first column to the right of the democratic candidate you will not make any mistake.

This promises to be a good year for democratic success in this state.

Do not, by failing to mark your ballot correctly, be the means of losing a victory. Do not listen to any one who advises you to mark your ballot in a different manner from what has just been stated.

The democratic state committee has had these instructions prepared by lawyers who have examined the law and decisions of the courts for that purpose.

Sizing Them Up.

A Tacoma republican paper, in speaking of McGraw, says: "Not that he as an individual is disliked, but they know that a vote for McGraw means a reinstatement of the dirtiest cabal of political pirates that ever held sway on the Pacific coast. This gang, headed by Hunt and his organ, has managed affairs so long without regard to right, justice or the interests of the people, that it has almost brought about a dissolution of the republican party. Honest republicans could no longer submit, and proved their allegiance to the first principles by turning them down at the last city election. Since then the Machiavellians have been using every artifice to regain control, and now the old slogans of "national election," and "save the state from the enemy," are being sounded to keep voters in the ranks.

Perfectly Formed Women Are Rare.

The French sculptor, Louis Xavier, now visiting America, had something to say about the human form that may be interesting: "It is easy to get as almost perfect model. Perfectly formed women are by no means rare, with this exception—the feet. A beautiful bare foot is almost unknown. We have to thank the fashionable boot for this. When women learn that a small foot out of proportion to the body and much smaller than the hand is a deformity of a new era of sense may begin, and a foot Greek in contour with rosy nails be as common as a beautiful arm or throat." When will that day be? Not until it is fashionable to walk barefoot, I fancy!

Mr. Edward Whitson is quoted in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer with regard to the "Fallen heir." Mr. Whitson represents John T. McGraw, of Grafton, West Virginia. Mr. McGraw, under date of October 22, telegraphed Mr. Snively: "UNFORTUNATE BUSINESS VENTURES CAN BE ALONE THE MEASURE OF ANY TRUTHFUL CHANGE."

THEY WERE PARALYZED.

Mrs. James Brown Potter Undresses Upon the Stage.

Her Return to America is Proving Exciting, and Her Latest Play "Theresa Raquin" in the Old Yankee States.

Mrs. James Brown Potter's return to America is proving unusually exciting. She is accompanied by Mr. Kylie Bell, managed by Mr. John Stetson and pioneered by Mr. Ariel Barney. Her object in playing "Theresa Raquin" was doubtless to create a sensation. She has created it. The story is summed up in one passion of a wife for her husband's friend, the grim murderer of her husband, the passion turned to abject fear when the act has been accomplished, a black and grisly bride, the discovery of the concealed crime by the mother, who drops paralyzed at the mention of it; the guilty pair left face to face, day after day, with a paralyzed specter; the old love transformed into savagery, and then the murderers covering before the one witness of their crime brought back to life again. Emile Zola, the author, has frankly expressed his purpose. "Theresa and Laurent," he writes, "are human brutes, nothing more. I have sought to follow, step by step, the career of these brutes, the secret working of their minds, the prompting of their instinct, the cerebral disorders following a nervous crisis. The adventures of my hero and heroine are the satisfying of a necessity."

Having duly shocked Boston with this monstrosity, Mrs. Potter and Mr. Bell set out to shock New England. The first objection came from Salem. Mayor Rantoul threatened to revoke the license of the Salem opera-house unless four aldermen of the town went over to Lynn, saw the play and pronounced that the virtue of Salem would survive its representation. The four wise men of Salem made the journey, and at Lynn the radiant Mrs. Potter received them. So radiant did she appear to the aldermen from Salem that they pronounced her an incomparable actress, and vowed that everybody in their native town should see the exquisitely chaste scene in which she strips off her clothing piece by piece before the audience until she appears in a simple robe de nuit. But the wrath of Mr. Stetson, that vigilant moralist, was aroused by the mere threat of interference. "What," he cried, "is there anything wrong in M. de Potter having an outside gown taken off and leaving her in a loose-fitting white robe? No limbs are shown. Everything is most delicate. I tell you Theresa Raquin teaches a stern lesson to all who see it." "I confess to surprise," said Mr. Frank Richards, who is Mr. Stetson's local manager, "that historic Salem, with its witchcraft, traditions and the grisly story of Hester Prynne, should object to the production of such a psychological study." As for Mr. Ariel Barney, his mind was made up. "We will play 'Theresa Raquin' if we play it in a barn," he said. Meanwhile Mrs. Potter continues to give her disvolving scene in the bridal chamber, in which she removes her garments piece by piece until the climax is reached. It has shocked New England, and it recalls Mrs. Potter's promise when she became a professional actress she would "elevate the stage."

GOD REWARD HIM.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreadful disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical profession. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional remedy. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by druggists, 75c.

No Flies on Hans.

"If you had your way, Hans, how would you divide the offices?"
"Gif dem to de Chermans."
"What would you do with the Irish?"
"Make dem all b'lecemen."
"And how about the Americans?"
"Py shinks, I make you pay de taxes."

For the cure of headache, constipation, stomach and liver trouble, and all derangements of the digestive and assimilative organs, Ayer's pills are invaluable. Being sugar coated they are pleasant to take, always reliable, and retain their virtues in any climate.

McGraw, Laughton and Railroad.

Sprague Advertiser: It is understood that the Northern Pacific Railroad company has instructed to the heads of the different departments that it will be to the interests of the company for them to vote for McGraw.

HERALDINGS.

Born, in Yakima county, October 23, to the wife of W. L. Lull, a son.

Mrs. O. V. Carpenter left this morning for a visit to her old home in the east.

Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Milroy returned from Portland and the Sound on Monday.

Died, Tuesday morning, November 1st, the infant child of Mrs. George Hamel, aged 9 months.

Attention is called to the advertisement of J. M. Perry, shipper and receiver of grain and hay, Spokane, Wash.

F. S. Davis, the barber, has again moved, and now has comfortable quarters adjoining the Yakima National bank.

Unger & Mulligan are making changes in their store that will admit of their showing a fine stock of goods to much better advantage.

Five hundred and sixty-five names are registered on the registration books of Ellensburg. Six hundred and twenty-four is the registration roll of North Yakima.

Two carloads of hop poles were received on Monday from the Sound. It is claimed that the new acreage in Yakima county next spring will be greater than it was in 1922.

The Western Union Telegraph business has increased to such an extent that it has been decided to establish an uptown office at an early date as a location can be secured.

The First National bank is showing the indications of prosperity by improvements and additions to bank furniture and fixtures, and new fittings to the walls and ceilings.

According to the new Northern Pacific time table, the trains will arrive as follows: West-bound—No. 1, 2:20 p. m.; No. 3, 2:40 a. m. East-bound—No. 2, 11:12 p. m.; No. 4, 7:45 a. m.

Mr. Snively's complete refutation of the charges against him resulted in the opening of the democratic purse, and a number of large even-money bets have been made and more offered on his election.

Leigh R. Freeman, one of the champions of the populist cause, left on Monday for Ogden, Utah. Freeman has never cast a ballot in his life, and he has probably left the state to escape doing so this time.

Major B. Morrison, who was injured in a runaway accident on Saturday, October 22, died at St. Elizabeth's hospital Wednesday, November 2, at 5:30 p. m. The deceased never regained consciousness after his fall. His age was 29 years.

The hop market is steady and firm. Twenty-two cents is the highest price paid this week, and a number of sales have been made at these figures. Mr. Weed ships six carloads to England this week, some of which are on consignment. The number of bales of hops grown in Yakima county is not definitely known as yet, but it is roughly estimated at 3,500.

A Seattle drummer, who is a McGraw man, was in town Wednesday, and said that although there would be fifteen hundred illegal votes counted in King county, that it would press McGraw hard to get a plurality of 3000. Democrats claim that McGraw's plurality in King county will not reach 1000. If he fails to receive $500 plurality there, Mr. Snively will have a walkover.

Charley Newell tells a good story on the people's party candidate for the legislature from Klickitat county. He was approached by a well known joker who demanded to know what he was going to do with the McKinley bill if elected. The would-be statesman looked blank, appeared buried in thought for a moment, when a bright idea seemed to strike him and he answered: "Why, we will pay it if it is a just bill."

If great political demonstrations are any indication of the way the election will go in this state, the democrats will certainly be successful, for the largest and most enthusiastic meetings have been those under democratic auspices, and the greatest of them all was the one held at Walla Walla the other night on the occasion of the visit of James Hamilton Lewis. There were 300 horsemen with torches in line, and the torch-bearers on foot were no numerous that the torches would not go around and a brigade with drums was organized. The greatest of enthusiasm prevailed.

The race meeting terminated on Saturday last, and while not a great financial success it was an indication of what Yakima can do if the association is entered and the meeting is advertised abroad. Some of the races took very peculiar turns, to say the least. In the half mile dash, which was run on Friday, Parole sold in the pools for $10 against $5 for the field, composed of Joe Cotton and Joe D. last. As the jockeying in this race was plain to be seen, the judges declared it off, but permitted it to be run the next day, when Joe D., who was last in the race, was strongly favorite in the pools and Parole sold for $2 against $15. Joe D. won easily. In the free-for-all race, on Saturday, Bishop Hero was a strong favorite in the pools. Mink won the first heat in 2:32 2-5; Harry M. the second in 2:33; Bishop Hero the third in 2:34. The judges were dissatisfied. Mink appeared to be pulled, so a change of drivers was made. This move had a good effect, for although Hero won, the time was reduced to 2:29. Still the judges were not satisfied and a new driver was placed behind Harry M. Again Hero won the heat, and the race, but he had to move around the track to get it, and the time was reduced to 2:27 1-2.

THE SPOOKS PLAYED MERRY MAEN.

Queer Capers Put on Halloween—Richard Strobach an Acrobat—New Party Headquarters

Halloween has come and gone, and it is probably a good thing that it comes no oftener, for it nearly disjoined the town. Some very respectable members of the "spooks" contented themselves with aerobics; but others played mad pranks that might have been serious in their results. Judge Reavis had his phetion out to go to the late train, but sickness in his family kept him at home, and fortunate for him, perhaps, it was so, for some of the mischievous spirits had removed the bars from the wheels of his phetion, and he might have had a runaway, or at least received a fall.

A big brush heap in the east part of town was fired about 1 o'clock, and the clanging of the fire bell called out the department. As Richard Strobach was tugging at the hose cart rope, opposite the syndicate building, he encountered a fire strung across the street which caught him in such a way that he made a double summersault before he landed.

The wheels and pins were taken from Lombard & Horsley's truck. It took these gentlemen half of the following day to locate the wheels, packed away in an old crate, and the pins hidden in the hay in the lot of their barn.

The people's party headquarters' banner was taken down from its usual hanging place, and made to do duty on a disreputable house in the lower part of the city. Three attempts were made to cut down the democratic banner, but the police interfered in each instance.

John Reed awoke the next morning to find his buggy operating as a cupola for the highest lumber pile on the west side of the track. There were many other capers of a similar nature, but these will do to illustrate the terrors of the uncanny night and to give an idea of what the police force had to contend with.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Kelly, who are well known in the dramatic firmament, are in the city for the purpose of placing a series of plays on the stage with the assistance of local amateurs. They will be given for the benefit of a fund which will be required for the entertainment of the fifteen hundred Knights of Pythias who will be here in attendance on the grand lodge in May next. Mr. and Mrs. Kelly recently gave four dramatic entertainments at Snohomish, where the papers speak of them in the highest terms, and claim that they drilled the local talent to such a degree that their performances were superior to most of those given by traveling troupes.

Look out for campaign lies circulated just previous to the election. It is brought to THE HERALD's ears that the republicans are even now doing this, and that a republican officeholder is now circulating a letter or statement intended to injure the chances of a democratic candidate. What this letter or statement is THE HERALD was unable to learn, for the one who was circulating it was very cautious to whom he showed it, and refused to exhibit it to anyone except those whom he supposed were gullible. Evidently the McGraw tactics are being tried by the local republicans.

Mr. Samuel Storow should be the next surveyor of Yakima county. He is a vigorous young man, with a collegiate education in engineering and the sciences, which has been tried, tested and not found wanting by a large amount of practical work in the field. Mr. Storow is a citizen of Yakima county in all that the word implies. He has invested his money here, is a property holder, and a progressive man. He is the candidate on the democratic ticket, and on account of his special qualifications for the office the democracy take pride in presenting his name to the voters of Yakima.

Dr. C. J. Taft returned Wednesday night from a two months and half trip to the east. He visited Maine and his old home in New Hampshire, and spent a couple of weeks in Chicago, where he witnessed the procession and exercises incident to the Columbian celebration. While inspecting the Washington building at the exposition grounds he met Doctor and the Misses Blalock, Dr. Conover, Dr. Calhoun and other Washingtonians.

J. W. Morrison, the democratic nominee for assessor, is a sterling democrat and an old and respected citizen of Yakima county. He has had considerable experience in the work of the office for which he has been named and is thoroughly acquainted with the values of property in this county. Give him your vote.

B. B. White, the undertaker and dealer in furniture, who recently arrived here from Sprague, has moved into the Cadwell building on Second street, adjoining THE HERALD office. His undertaking outfit is now here. Read his advertisement in this issue.

The residence of W. W. McCarty, of Parker Bottom, was destroyed by fire on Friday of last week. The fire was the result of the careless handling of a lighted candle, whereby the cloth lining of the walls caught, and the flames quickly spread over the whole house.

Local candidates of the democracy will hold a reception at the opera house Saturday evening. There will be good speakers present. Give the boys a full house. Everybody invited.

Vote for Col. A. H. Revolds for justice of the peace. He has had previous experience as a magistrate and filled the office with credit to himself and to the satisfaction of his constituency.

H. J. Putnam, of Salina, Kan., a member of the firm of Crippen, Lawrence & Co., arrived in the city Wednesday to look after the business of the local agency.

Dr. Albert Wilgus has returned from Albany, Oregon, to remain.

The United States Official Investigation of Baking Powders,

Made under authority of Congress by the Chemical Division of the Dept of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., and recently completed,

Shows the Royal Baking Powder to be a cream of tartar baking powder of the highest quality, superior to all others in strength, leavening power, and general usefulness.

The Royal Baking Powder is thus distinguished by the highest expert official authority the leading Baking Powder of the world.

DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE FOR AUDITOR.

Dudley Eshelman's Qualifications for the Office are of the Highest Order.

Those who have had business in the clerk's office during the past two years cannot help but remember with pleasure the uniform courtesy and consideration received there, and the business-like method and system with which the records of the office were kept. Mr. F. D. Eshelman, who has been the efficient clerk during this period, is now the nominee on the democratic ticket for county auditor, and his record in the past will be a strong appeal to the thoughtful voter for his support at the polls on Tuesday next. Mr. Eshelman would not conduct the office of auditor on the basis of strong partisanship, but rather in the interest of the entire community, and a republican or people's party follower would receive just as much consideration under his administration as would a democrat. There can be nothing truly said against Mr. Eshelman's character, for his life here and in Klickitat county is an open book. As for his qualifications for the office none can offer better. A thorough accountant and possessing a substantial business education, he combines with these an obliging disposition. What more can be asked? Cast your vote on Tuesday next for Dudley Eshelman.

STACY GETS THE BIG DITCH CONTRACT.

Work is to Be Commenced Next Week—Katz & Smith Are Still in It.

THE HERALD man interviewed Manager Walter N. Granger last evening, and although he didn't seem inclined to be communicative, he said that work on the big ditch would be started on the 10th of this month, and would be continued right along until the entire system, including laterals, was completed. The following interrogatories and answers were made and received: "To whom has the contract been awarded?" "Katz & Smith are to do the work, I believe." "Has not the contract been awarded to M. V. B. Stacy?" "Well, I think that is about the truth of it."

For County School Superintendent.

Professor E. P. Greene, the democratic candidate for county school superintendent, is a native of New York state. He commenced teaching in Pennsylvania in 1872. After five consecutive years at this occupation, as required by law, he was granted a "professional" certificate. In 1879 he removed to Michigan, where he taught under a 1st grade certificate, and in 1888 was granted a certificate good for the entire state. He spent two years holding normal institutes or training classes, was for three years a member of an examining board and one year its secretary and the virtual county superintendent. Professor Greene removed to Yakima in July, 1890, and has since been connected with the county schools, he having prepared the course of study upon which the schools were organized and are now being run. It will thus be seen that Professor Greene is in every way qualified to acceptably fill the office for which he has been nominated.

John L. Wilson was here on Wednesday. The republicans essayed a torch-light procession, but it was the smallest one of the campaign, and one gentleman remarked, "if they try it again they will probably have only the band." Wilson spoke to a good sized audience in the evening. He spent much of his time in trying to justify his vote against the free coinage bill and in striking peculiar attitudes. He took every imaginable style of posture except that which the audience was especially anxious to see owing to the speaker's pugilistic fame.

"Honest" Tom Carroll, Dr. Lewis and R. W. Starr entertained a large audience at the opera house Tuesday evening. Mr. Carroll's speech was the event of the occasion, and that he completely won his hearers was easy to be seen. His prediction that Mr. Snively would be the next governor of the state was received with tremendous applause, as was also his reading of the newspaper headlines over the affidavits from Grafton vindicating Mr. Snively. Mr. Carroll will be one of Washington's next congressmen. There is a soft spot in the hearts of the people for him.

DESPICABLE REPUBLICAN METHODS.

A Widow Woman's House Invaded By One of the Spotters Who is Working for McGraw.

Selfish ends and the fear of loss of power and further opportunity to plunder the state have made the republicans desperate, and they are leaving no means untried, no matter how low and contemptible, to prevent their political overthrow, which now seems inevitable. Sullivan spotters are all over the state spying, prying and attempting bribery, and now the Tacoma News asserts that the republican central committee has had one hundred of these thugs sworn in as deputy U. S. marshals for election purposes. Yakima has not escaped from these pests, and one or more of them have been here constantly, nosing around and endeavoring to dig up something to bolster up the tottering cause of McGraw. The last instance of this kind was when a fellow under the residence of Mrs. T. J. V. Clark. He had no respect for the weeps nor the sorrows of the widow, but inflicted his presence on Mrs. Clark after it was plainly shown that his stay was distasteful. He said that he had heard that Mr. Snively had beaten her and her late husband out of several thousand dollars, and in the course of conversation that followed Mrs. Clark said that in the course of the past six years Mr. Snively had handled for them between $45,000 and $50,000 worth of business, and that he had always proved a true friend and had not wronged them out of a single cent. That in her visit east, to the old home of Mr. Snively, she had not heard one word said against his character, and in commenting on his speech at Chicago the papers spoke most highly of him. The spotter informed Mrs. Clark that he was there in the interest of McGraw; that he was sent there to get what he could against Mr. Snively, and that he was well paid for his work. He acknowledged that he was on the wrong track, and repeatedly asked Mrs. Clark not to say anything to anybody about the interview or his presence there, as the newspapers would "blast" him for it. This is the kind of "work" that is now being done all over the state against Mr. Snively. An instance of it occurred in Walla Walla recently, wherein a Mr. O'Brien said that Mr. Snively, as attorney, held a claim of $250 against him. The Walla Walla Union-Journal took this up and so grossly distorted it as to make it reflect upon Mr. Snively, whereupon Mr. O'Brien published a card in which he denied the Union-Journal's statement. He said there was nothing that he knew of that could be said against Mr. Snively, but on the contrary he held him in such esteem that he would support him heartily at the polls.

TEN DOLLARS REWARD.

Lost, two horses, one a cream colored horse, with bell, branded with a horizontal E over the figure 2 on the right hip, and a half circle on the left shoulder; the other a bay, branded with a circle and cross-bar on right hip, and a heart on left hip. The above reward will be paid by leaving these animals with Sam Chappell, at North Yakima, or the undersigned. WILLIAM FORSTER, Fort Steinec.

A vote for Orlando Beck for justice of the peace is a vote for a man who is competent and in every way qualified to fill the office in a satisfactory manner.

THE CLOSE OF THE CAMPAIGN.

The Next Governor of Washington Will Speak at the Opera House Monday Evening.

The close of the state campaign will be celebrated by the democrats of Yakima in fine style, and bettling the victory that is promised on Tuesday. Monday night will be given over to a grand rally and torchlight procession. The next governor of Washington, Hon. H. J. Snively, will be home, and with Hon. W. H. White, of Seattle, will address the people at Mason's opera house. Those who desire seats, or even standing room, are cautioned to get around at an early hour. Our honest townsman is to be welcomed in a manner that will show the people of the state that we have full and complete confidence in his honor and integrity, and that the scurrilous campaign made against him by the McGraw ring is heartily condemned.

On Sunday last while Mrs. Joseph Schreiner was driving, with her children, north of the city, a dog ran out from a farm house, scaring the horses. The animals made a sudden turn, upsetting the back and throwing all of the occupants to the ground. Mrs. Schreiner was severely hurt, but the children escaped with only minor injuries.

The dwelling house next to Schorn's carriage factory is being moved to the north end of the city, to make room for a machine shop to be occupied by Mart Schlich. So rapidly has Mr. Schorn's carriage manufacturing business grown that he finds it necessary to have his entire building for his own industry.

Judge J. B. Lewis returned to Seattle Thursday. The judge does not seem to be in the best of humor. Perhaps his conscience is troubling him about McGraw. The judge is a splendid fellow, but he will get off on the wrong foot occasionally.

Citizens of Yakima, of all party affiliations, do not forget to show your commendation of W. C. Jones, Pullman's candidate for attorney general, by voting against him. Remember his course in the agricultural college outrage.

Vote for Wm. A. Cox for county treasurer and there will be no question but what the finances of the county are in honest hands.

B. B. White left for Sprague last night to superintend the removal of his stock of furniture to this city.

The infant children, twins, of Mr. Nooner died this week. Their mother died this spring.

Judge J. B. Reavis and T. M. Vance will address the people of Prosser on Monday evening.

Studying Medicine with Success.

The Woman's Journal tells an inspiring story of the success of one of the southern women physicians, Mrs. Dr. Cady, of Louisville. Having a taste for medicine and a little experience from treating the simple ailments of her own colored tenants, Mrs. Cady, finding herself obliged to support her family, entered and was graduated from the medical college in St. Louis. A few weeks before commencement her ninth child was born, and eleven days later she was again at her place in the lecture room. She returned home with her baby and her diploma, resumed the care of her family and began the practice of her profession, in which she has achieved remarkable success. In estimating the comparative capabilities for this kind of rare talent taken into consideration.

M. SCHORN, MANUFACTURER OF Wagons, Buggies, Surreys. I warrant to make stronger and better vehicles with the best grades of material, at the latest pattern and highest finish, at eastern prices. GIVE ME A CALL AND EXAMINE MY WORK. M. SCHORN.

B. B. WHITE. Furniture and Undertaking.

I DESIRE to announce to the citizens of North Yakima that I have located in the Cutwell building, adjoining "The Herald" office, and will conduct a general Furniture and Undertaking Business.

The Finest Hearse In The City.

The "MAZE" San Francisco California. Issues a 200 page Dry Goods and General Outfitting Catalogue. Send your name on a Postal Card to-day and get one. The Maze, San Francisco.

See These Bargains FOR SALE

House and Lot, $900 House and 2 Lots, $800

Fechter and Ross, Real Estate, Insurance and Loans

Agents for Lombard Investm't Co., N. P. Lands, Selah Valley Lands.

A Big Sensation! THIS SWELL IS CUTTING A BIT OF A DASH, BAH JOVE. Walen & Insland. New Teams and New Buggies. Give them a call when you want a Big Old Matt-on stand, west side of First street, corner of Walnut. WALEN & INSLAND.

Shardlow & McDaniel, Fine Wines, Liquors. Imported & Domestic Cigars. FINE BILLIARD AND POOL TABLES. Southeast Corner Yakima Avenue & Front Street, One Door West of Steiner's Hotel.

Sole Agents for the Celebrated Jesse Moore Kentucky Whiskies.

Soon to Arrive! AT THE Yakima Bakery, A TON OF CANDY, Nuts, Etc.

WE WILL PAY A salary of $25 to $50 per week to GOOD agents to represent us in every county, and sell our general line of household and manufacturing goods. ONLY STUBBORN WHO WANT STRAIGHT EMPLOYMENT NEED APPLY. Catalogue and particulars sent on receipt of 25 cents for shipping. A. KAMPER & CO., 128 Quincy Street, Chicago, Ill.

Call at Lombard & Horsley's and inspect a splendid line of cane-seated rockers at $2 and $2.50. 37 1/2

POLITICS AND POLITICIANS.

Keep Your Eyes Open for Campaign Lies--They are Being Incubated.

A McGraw Bluffer From the Sound Is Made to Take Water--The "Herald's" Booster in Training

The Herald has its roster in active training, and expects to have him in splendid crowing condition for next week's issue.

Look out for campaign lies sprung just on the eve of election, when it is too late to get a denial into circulation.

T. M. Vance has made a manly and splendid campaign throughout the county, and has proven that in him lies the right kind of material to make a legislator to represent Yakima county with honor and credit.

The attempt to smirch the character of Hon. H. J. Snively by McGraw and the Seattle ring has proven a boomerang, and his traducers do not know which way turn.

Van de Venter, of Kent, one of McGraw's tools, was in Yakima Friday making his boasts that he had $5,000 to bet that McGraw would be elected; that King county would give him 3,500 plurality, and that Pierce county would not give Mr. Snively 1,500 plurality.

Van de Venter, but that worthy, when penned down, refused to bet, and said "a man has a right to change his mind, hasn't he?"

The Tacoma Ledger of Sunday, in a logical statement, shows that the Seattle canal is simply a scheme that has been foisted on the republican party for the purpose of benefitting L. S. J. Hunt and a few of his associates.

The case of the Curry heirs, whose lands are being contested by G. W. Carey, of Spokane, has been published by the Press-Times, and H. J. Snively is charged with fraud.

Did any one ever hear such rot? Intimidated by fear of "personal violence" in peaceful, law-abiding North Yakima! Let us see what the truth is.

Mr. Snively required a part of the land in dispute as a fee for conducting their case to a successful issue. The Currys are minors and could make no such an agreement that would be binding, and every attorney, especially one of Mr. Snively's ability, would know this full well.

M. C. Sullivan, the Portland thug, has declared himself for McGraw. In a recent conversation with an ex-mayor of Tacoma he said: "I am for McGraw. Do you think I could support Snively? Why that fellow has tried four times to have me indicted. He is the only man who ever got away with me in this state."

John McGraw is one of those who especially interested himself against the cause of Yakima when we were expending our energies in an effort to have the state capital located here.

Take THE HERALD and keep posted.

FOR TREASURER OF YAKIMA COUNTY.

The Democratic Nominee Will Administer the Affairs of the Office Honestly and Satisfactorily.

Vote for W. A. Cox for county treasurer. THE HERALD offers this advice not through any partisan feeling, but from a belief that no better or more competent man could be selected for the position.

DEVICE FOR PROTECTION AGAINST FIRE.

A Well Known and Enterprising Man Patents a Much Needed Device.

The rapidity with which fires are likely to be communicated from floor to floor of a burning building through open elevator shafts, has suggested an improved means for readily closing the shaft at each floor during the time that the elevator is not running.

Van de Venter, of Kent, one of McGraw's tools, was in Yakima Friday making his boasts that he had $5,000 to bet that McGraw would be elected; that King county would give him 3,500 plurality, and that Pierce county would not give Mr. Snively 1,500 plurality.

Did any one ever hear such rot? Intimidated by fear of "personal violence" in peaceful, law-abiding North Yakima! Let us see what the truth is.

Mr. Snively required a part of the land in dispute as a fee for conducting their case to a successful issue. The Currys are minors and could make no such an agreement that would be binding, and every attorney, especially one of Mr. Snively's ability, would know this full well.

M. C. Sullivan, the Portland thug, has declared himself for McGraw. In a recent conversation with an ex-mayor of Tacoma he said: "I am for McGraw. Do you think I could support Snively? Why that fellow has tried four times to have me indicted. He is the only man who ever got away with me in this state."

John McGraw is one of those who especially interested himself against the cause of Yakima when we were expending our energies in an effort to have the state capital located here.

Take THE HERALD and keep posted.

Take THE HERALD and keep posted.

Take THE HERALD and keep posted.

PRESS OPINIONS OF MCGRAW AND LAUGHTON

The Decent Republicans Will Re-buke These Honors at the Polls on the 6th of November.

Saturday morning's Seattle Telegraph prints the following dispatch: ELLensburg, Wash., Oct. 22.—It was just after the close of James Hamilton Lewis' able speech on the state issues and the record of the state officers, in which, among other things, he clearly proved that rather than repudiate Laughton the late republican convention and its nominees entered into an agreement to ratify him, and did so by their appointments and nominations.

THE MOST RELIABLE

To correct the constipated habit, remove sick-headache, relieve dyspepsia, to purify the blood, cure jaundice, liver complaint, and biliousness, Ayer's Pills are unequalled.

Family medicine, for old and young. Ayer's Pills are indispensable to soldiers, sailors, campers, miners, and travelers, and are everywhere recommended by the medical fraternity.

COLUMBUS' PRIVATE LIFE.

Like Some Other Eminent Men, He Was Not Wholly Without Blame.

Zion's Herald: Columbus was married. There has been much doubt when, with whom, under what circumstances. The exact date is uncertain, as is much of his biography, although difficulties are gradually yielding to patient scholarship.

When he left Portugal for Spain he left a wife and children in indigence. No record of correspondence with his family has ever been found. Of his legitimate offspring his heir and successor, Diego, is the only one of whom any record has been preserved.

In his last will, which was duly signed and witnessed on May 10, 1506, the day before his death at Valladolid, he provided for the maintenance of Beatriz Enriquez, the mother of Fernando, and said: "Let this be done for the discharge of my conscience, for it weighs heavy on my soul--the reason for which I am not permitted to give here."

It is said that in conversation in regard to General Washington an inquiry was made of Henry Clay as to his information regarding certain votes imputed to the general tradition. "Ah," said Mr. Clay, "General Washington was so good and great a man that no tradition to his disparagement should be repeated or remembered."

Buckingham's dye for the whiskers can be applied when at home, and is uniformly successful in coloring brown or black. Hence its great popularity.

Antony is said to have been bewitched by Her Manner, Not Her Beauty.

The Spectator: What was the inner character of Cleopatra? A voluptuous woman from the east, say the Romans, eager to enchain any master of a Roman army by the foulest arts, but the Roman oligarchy not only hated but dreaded Cleopatra.

They cursed her as the greatest of Asiatic harlots, whereas she was a Greek, and used her charms chiefly as instruments to attain her ends, which were, first of all, the empire of the east, which her ancestors had striven for generations to acquire, and very nervously acquired, and to defeat the half civilized and headless Roman power, which she hated with the hatred of a monarch and despised with the contempt of a true Greek.

to help her in founding, as she hoped, the empire of the east.

Her attractive power was probably not her beauty. Her coins do not reveal a beautiful woman, but a broad browed, thoughtful queen; and Plutarch in describing her evidently speaks on the authority of men whose fathers had studied her face. He says: "Her actual beauty, it is said, was not in itself so remarkable that none could be compared with her or that no one could see her without being struck by it, but the contact of her presence, if you lived with her, was irresistible. The attraction of her person, joining with the charm of her conversation and the character that attended all she said or did, was something bewitching. It was a pleasure merely to hear her voice, with which, like an instrument of many strings, she could pass from one language to another, so that there were few of the barbarian nations she answered by an interpreter. To most of them she spoke herself, as to the Ethiopians, Trojans, Lydians, Hebrews, Arabians, Syrians, Medes, Parthians and many others whose language she had learned."

THE MOST RELIABLE

To correct the constipated habit, remove sick-headache, relieve dyspepsia, to purify the blood, cure jaundice, liver complaint, and biliousness, Ayer's Pills are unequalled.

Family medicine, for old and young. Ayer's Pills are indispensable to soldiers, sailors, campers, miners, and travelers, and are everywhere recommended by the medical fraternity.

Cathartic

And always give satisfaction. "I have used Ayer's Pills as a corrective for torpidity of the stomach, liver, and bowels, and to ward off malarial attacks, and they have always done perfect work."--E. P. Goodwin, Publisher Democrat, St. Landry, La.

Ayer's Pills

PREPARED BY DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine.

TEACHERS' EXAMINATION.

The regular quarterly examination for teachers will be held at the court house Nov. 10th, 11th and 12th.

ATTENTION, LAND OWNERS!

The undersigned are now ready to contract to do plowing, grubbing, fencing or other work of similar nature in the Sunnyside country. Satisfactory work guaranteed on favorable terms.

SPOT Notice to Consumers.

After the 15th of December Roslyn Coal will be delivered for $5.30 per ton, SPOT CASH!

Hereafter not a ton of coal nor a cord of wood will be unloaded unless the money is paid on delivery. There shall be no deviation from this rule.

$6.50 JOHN REED, TELEPHONE 17.

APPLE TREES

For Nurserymen, Dealers and Commercial Planters, in the north or west. The very best.

ROOT GRAFTS

Apple Grafts at $3.50 per thousand. Pear Grafts at $2.50 per thousand. Free of charge.

APPLE SEEDLINGS.

No. 1, graded 3-16th, and all up to $4.10 per 100. No. 2, graded 3-16th, and all up to $2.50 per 100. Free of charge.

H. C. GRAVES & SONS, Lee's Summit, Mo.

NEW SHOE STORE.

Custom work a specialty and neat repairing. Can fit your corns and bunions. Prices reasonable. Next to Mrs. May's.

One dozen cabinet photos, six different latest styles, for the same price, at James' studio.

"August Flower"

How does he feel?--He feels cranky, and is constantly expieriencing strange notions, and changing the cooking, the dishes, the hours, and manner of his eating--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He feels at times a gnawing, voracious, insatiable appetite, wholly unaccountable, unnatural and unhealthy--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He feels no desire to go to the table and a grumbling, fault-finding, over-critical about what is set before him when he is there--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He feels after a spell of this abnormal appetite an utter abhorrence, loathing, and detestation of food; as if a mouthful would kill him--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He feels after a spell of this abnormal appetite an utter abhorrence, loathing, and detestation of food; as if a mouthful would kill him--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?--He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools--August Flower the Remedy.

Lombard & Horsley,

Furniture, Carpet, Wall Paper, Picture Frames

SYNDICATE BLOCK.

JERUSALEM!

Is a good ways off, but our store is near and we are just in receipt of a large invoice

Fall and Winter Clothing

In the very Latest Styles, and at prices that can be reached by all. We guarantee every suit we sell to be as represented.

Our Boot and Shoe Department

Is stocked with a new line of goods that will bear inspection, of the very best makes and we sell them at prices satisfactory to all

Our Hat Department

Can't be beat by and dealer in the city for style and quality of goods. A new line just received.

Our Furnishing Goods Department

Is restocked with an elegant line of goods, and when you want anything in this department don't forget that

J. J. Carpenter

In the Lowe, Brick Block

Can Suit You

JOB PRINTING

LETTER HEADS, BILL HEADS, STATEMENTS, POSTERS, BOOK WORK, AND ALL KINDS OF PLAIN AND COLOR PRINTING DONE AT

The Herald Job Room.

We have in Stock the Latest Designs in

BALL PROGRAMS, INVITATIONS, WEDDING AND MOURNING STATIONERY, VISITING CARDS.

Eshelman Bros.,

Real Estate and Insurance Agents.

Abstracters and Loan Agents.

NORTH - YAKIMA, - WASH.

BUCKLEY LUMBER CO.,

(SUCCESSORS TO C. W. HENRY & CO.), DEALERS IN

ALL GRADES OF ROUGH AND DRESSED LUMBER.

Sash, Doors, Lath, Shingles, Etc.

Lumber Exchanged for Hay.

A. E. LARSON, Manager.

A Full Supply of Lime, Cement, Hair and Building Paper.

Crippen, Lawrence & Co.,

FARM AND CITY LOANS.

IRRIGATION PUMPS.

SYNDICATE BUILDING, -- NORTH YAKIMA

H. A. GRIFFIN,

DEALER IN THE PUREST AND FRESHEST IMPORTED AND DOMESTIC

GROCERIES!

MAIL ORDERS RECEIVE PROMPT ATTENTION.

YAKIMA AVE., NEXT TO HOTEL YAKIMA. TELEPHONE 55.

You are Pleased

With First Class Printing? Well, Patronize the "Herald."

McGraw as a Politician. How Miss Pam Managed It.

The Duty of Republicans as Honest Men Now Confronts Them.

Can They Consistently Support McGraw, Who Represents the Lowest Element of That Party?

Tacoma Ledger (Rep.): How any consistent republican can vote for McGraw is beyond comprehension.

Say nothing of him before he comes to Washington; has his coming into prominence been by an open, honorable course of promotion, or is there an underground, eluded, suspicious sloop pervading his path?

We need not refer to Mr. McGraw other than since he came into political notice for the purpose of this article.

Her gray dress was covered by a large drilling apron, and on her head she wore a blue silk handkerchief to keep the dust from her hair.

There is no attempt at honorable argument, no appeal to reason or judgment, in the methods of Mr. McGraw and the gang he represents.

Yes, more: A gang of detectives are employed to dog private citizens, watch their houses, follow them from place to place, as though they were suspected of some vile and heinous crime.

Can it be possible that the republican party is so lacking in material that it becomes necessary to ask us to support this man for the first office in the gift of the people?

Some Facts for the Workmen to Think Over—Why McGraw and Sullivan are Friends.

When in 1888 thug Sullivan, with forty-eight armed assassins at his back, went to Roanoke to terrorize, drive out, and kill workmen, Mr. Sively, as prosecuting attorney, had the chief and his leading aids dismissed and locked up in jail.

Sullivan seems to have a particular fight against our honest prosecuting attorney and the Knights of Labor.

Now Sullivan is getting even by fabricating accusations against Sively.

Workmen, remember that in that test case, when the rights, liberties and lives of workmen were at stake, Sively was your friend.

That Sullivan is to-day working with all his might for McGraw, McGraw approves of his methods.

Cle-Elum Tribune: The unwarranted attacks that are being made upon the character and reputation of Hon. H. J. Sively will only strengthen the friendship that exists between him and almost the entire people in this part of the country.

How Miss Pam Managed It.

By MARY KYLE DALLAS.

CHAPTER I.

It's a real handsome ring.

One crisp, clear autumn morning, just as the sun began to show a red rim upon the misty horizon, Miss Pamela Palmer—usually called by all her friends and neighbors "Miss Pam"—a lady of uncertain age, but with many evidences of beauty of the New England type still lingering in her well-cut features and well-set shoulders, and on the whole, very fine looking, opened the door of her house and emerged, bringing with her a little pile of rugs, lampnaps and tidies and a small wickerwork furniture basket.

Her gray dress was covered by a large drilling apron, and on her head she wore a blue silk handkerchief to keep the dust from her hair.

As her foot touched the porch a ponderous gray cat, with white feet and forehead and great, yellow eyes, sprang forward to greet her, uttering that mellow and reproachful cry common to feline pets who think themselves injured by their human protectors.

"Why, Socrates," she said, as seriously as though she were addressing a human being, "why Socrates—Aunt Pam didn't mean to shut you out. But your milk is right there on the kitchen hearth in the blue saucer—go in."

It was a pleasant old house—that of Miss Pamela—quiet as to roof and hidden with red cushions, in which Miss Pam drove out when she was inclined, handling the reins herself.

An Alderney cow belonged to the establishment, too, and a solemn horse, warranted never even to wish to run away, and a highly varnished little vagon, and old man and old woman, so quiet and snobbish and was berries.

Yes, more: A gang of detectives are employed to dog private citizens, watch their houses, follow them from place to place, as though they were suspected of some vile and heinous crime.

Can it be possible that the republican party is so lacking in material that it becomes necessary to ask us to support this man for the first office in the gift of the people?

Some Facts for the Workmen to Think Over—Why McGraw and Sullivan are Friends.

When in 1888 thug Sullivan, with forty-eight armed assassins at his back, went to Roanoke to terrorize, drive out, and kill workmen, Mr. Sively, as prosecuting attorney, had the chief and his leading aids dismissed and locked up in jail.

Sullivan seems to have a particular fight against our honest prosecuting attorney and the Knights of Labor.

Now Sullivan is getting even by fabricating accusations against Sively.

Workmen, remember that in that test case, when the rights, liberties and lives of workmen were at stake, Sively was your friend.

That Sullivan is to-day working with all his might for McGraw, McGraw approves of his methods.

Cle-Elum Tribune: The unwarranted attacks that are being made upon the character and reputation of Hon. H. J. Sively will only strengthen the friendship that exists between him and almost the entire people in this part of the country.

own room, was rocking violently to and fro, talking to herself.

"Why did I let Cousin Jane send her daughter here to see me?" she asked herself. "I might have known she'd take after her ma. Jane was a sly, sly piece—a flirt that stopped at nothing. My lands! Why didn't I say I didn't want visitors. What a critter I am for making mistakes. I'd have been a happy wife years ago if I hadn't made a mistake. Don't help it none to know it was all my fault."

She arose and opened her bureau and took forth a little teakwood box, and pulled back the sliding lid. Within lay a small book, on the cover of which was written, "My statement," and a small parcel wrapped in tissue paper and tied with ribbon.

The explanation of the mistake that had parted her from Jefferson Fosdick lay there.

"I hoped agin hope that I should be able to let him know the truth some day," she said. "I wouldn't, hey no one else know. I'd be a larking stock. But he had order: I owe it to him."

She replaced the box and began to rock again.

"I hadn't felt so bad since that old time," she said. "Oh, dear! if I could only do something—something or another. Don't I find it out before they were engaged, I'd have sent her packing. It's merral work; there's human mermaids worse than that that watches on the rocks for sailors. Jacintha was one of them: so was her ma before her. I ought to have known, I ought to have known anybody else would."

She was quite tragic in her grief, and for many days both Miss Pam and her niece were very unhappy, but they had resolved not to give Jacintha the satisfaction of knowing it.

They allowed her the customary Yankee privilege of having the parlor to herself, and she recognized the glistering silk, the floating endows, the bright jewels.

"It is Jacintha," she whispered to Edwina, "and she looks like death."

A little after a man covered with dust and blood limped into the room and knelt down beside the sofa where the doctor was lying.

"No," said the surgeon curtly. "Some one must go for her husband."

Norman Driscoll, who for and he came in a few hours his wife knew that she could live. In her death-like pallor she was unutterably beautiful, and Norman's heart departed.

She would keep nothing sacred to Norman's memory, and she went to church with a clean conscience, and said to herself that if Norman had been her idol and she had been punished for love and afterward made the girl a neighbor's child.

She was glad when it was all over. The young couple, having been feted and feasted in the bride's home, had returned to the tour of Europe and spent six months in Paris, came back to Hingham and settled down at the Driscoll house, where an old housekeeper had resigned since Norman's mother died.

Miss Pam sent out cards for a reception, and Miss Pam and her niece sat at the table, and they saw no more of each other. There was a fashionable set in Hingham, and at Cohasset and at Nantasket in summer time many well to do strangers. The Driscolls had all the company they wanted, and Edwina was glad not to be forced to meet company with a person she despised.

Then Miss Palmer and her niece began to live the calm, old life again. Young men called, for Edwina was a favorite. One or two showed symptoms of the tender passion, but Edwina severely declared that she preferred spinster life in new costumes. Then the Driscolls before long. The fashionable people might make a sort of pet of Jacintha, but the plain folk spoke decidedly about "carrying on." She flirted openly. To a married woman this was not permitted in Hingham. People said that Norman Driscoll was looking unhappy.

Miss Pam blamed herself for feeling pleased when she heard this, but she could not help it. He never would have looked unhappy if he had married Edwina. She would not have gone galloping about the country with a person she despised—a foreigner with mustaches, or have roved out alone in the moonlight with "an actor from the hotel" after she was married. However, a time came when Jacintha remained at home and Norman looked happy again, and one morning the local paper reported the fact that our esteemed cousin, Mr. Norman Driscoll, was the proud parent of a lovely daughter. Compliments were also paid to "the beautiful Mrs. Driscoll."

"Handsome is that handsome does," said Miss Pam.

By the next summer the baby was consigned to the care of a housemaid, and in Hingham it was said that Mrs. Driscoll was "carrying on worse than ever."

own room, was rocking violently to and fro, talking to herself.

"Why did I let Cousin Jane send her daughter here to see me?" she asked herself. "I might have known she'd take after her ma. Jane was a sly, sly piece—a flirt that stopped at nothing. My lands! Why didn't I say I didn't want visitors. What a critter I am for making mistakes. I'd have been a happy wife years ago if I hadn't made a mistake. Don't help it none to know it was all my fault."

She arose and opened her bureau and took forth a little teakwood box, and pulled back the sliding lid. Within lay a small book, on the cover of which was written, "My statement," and a small parcel wrapped in tissue paper and tied with ribbon.

The explanation of the mistake that had parted her from Jefferson Fosdick lay there.

"I hoped agin hope that I should be able to let him know the truth some day," she said. "I wouldn't, hey no one else know. I'd be a larking stock. But he had order: I owe it to him."

She replaced the box and began to rock again.

"I hadn't felt so bad since that old time," she said. "Oh, dear! if I could only do something—something or another. Don't I find it out before they were engaged, I'd have sent her packing. It's merral work; there's human mermaids worse than that that watches on the rocks for sailors. Jacintha was one of them: so was her ma before her. I ought to have known, I ought to have known anybody else would."

She was quite tragic in her grief, and for many days both Miss Pam and her niece were very unhappy, but they had resolved not to give Jacintha the satisfaction of knowing it.

They allowed her the customary Yankee privilege of having the parlor to herself, and she recognized the glistering silk, the floating endows, the bright jewels.

"It is Jacintha," she whispered to Edwina, "and she looks like death."

A little after a man covered with dust and blood limped into the room and knelt down beside the sofa where the doctor was lying.

"No," said the surgeon curtly. "Some one must go for her husband."

Norman Driscoll, who for and he came in a few hours his wife knew that she could live. In her death-like pallor she was unutterably beautiful, and Norman's heart departed.

She would keep nothing sacred to Norman's memory, and she went to church with a clean conscience, and said to herself that if Norman had been her idol and she had been punished for love and afterward made the girl a neighbor's child.

She was glad when it was all over. The young couple, having been feted and feasted in the bride's home, had returned to the tour of Europe and spent six months in Paris, came back to Hingham and settled down at the Driscoll house, where an old housekeeper had resigned since Norman's mother died.

Miss Pam sent out cards for a reception, and Miss Pam and her niece sat at the table, and they saw no more of each other. There was a fashionable set in Hingham, and at Cohasset and at Nantasket in summer time many well to do strangers. The Driscolls had all the company they wanted, and Edwina was glad not to be forced to meet company with a person she despised.

Then Miss Palmer and her niece began to live the calm, old life again. Young men called, for Edwina was a favorite. One or two showed symptoms of the tender passion, but Edwina severely declared that she preferred spinster life in new costumes. Then the Driscolls before long. The fashionable people might make a sort of pet of Jacintha, but the plain folk spoke decidedly about "carrying on." She flirted openly. To a married woman this was not permitted in Hingham. People said that Norman Driscoll was looking unhappy.

Miss Pam blamed herself for feeling pleased when she heard this, but she could not help it. He never would have looked unhappy if he had married Edwina. She would not have gone galloping about the country with a person she despised—a foreigner with mustaches, or have roved out alone in the moonlight with "an actor from the hotel" after she was married. However, a time came when Jacintha remained at home and Norman looked happy again, and one morning the local paper reported the fact that our esteemed cousin, Mr. Norman Driscoll, was the proud parent of a lovely daughter. Compliments were also paid to "the beautiful Mrs. Driscoll."

"Handsome is that handsome does," said Miss Pam.

By the next summer the baby was consigned to the care of a housemaid, and in Hingham it was said that Mrs. Driscoll was "carrying on worse than ever."

Driscoll. I do, indeed."

"You must have known what Jacintha really was," Norman went on, "and you never warned me. You pretended to be my friend and let me take for my wife a girl like that."

"My graces!" cried Miss Pam, writing under the injustice of the accusation, "I never, never, never did!"

"How could you look on and let it happen? It was like letting a madman jump into the fire," said Norman, looking so wild and haggard that Miss Pam shuddered.

"I knew nothing serious against Jacintha," she said. "I wouldn't have asked her to visit with Edwina if I hadn't thought her nice. I didn't know you were courting her until you were engaged. I was afraid you were after Edwina. I don't suppose you'd have had any chance with her, but I thought you wanted her, and she was too good for you."

"God knows she was," Norman said. "Who wins her for a wife must be a happy man, and but for Jacintha—"

"I don't know," said Miss Pam, moving away with dignity, "you are beginning to talk immoral."

There was a modicum of triumph in her heart, for she felt that Edwina was avenged, since Norman regretted her parting. I was afraid you were after Edwina. I don't suppose you'd have had any chance with her, but I thought you wanted her, and she was too good for you."

"God knows she was," Norman said. "Who wins her for a wife must be a happy man, and but for Jacintha—"

"I don't know," said Miss Pam, moving away with dignity, "you are beginning to talk immoral."

There was a modicum of triumph in her heart, for she felt that Edwina was avenged, since Norman regretted her parting. I was afraid you were after Edwina. I don't suppose you'd have had any chance with her, but I thought you wanted her, and she was too good for you."

"God knows she was," Norman said. "Who wins her for a wife must be a happy man, and but for Jacintha—"

"I don't know," said Miss Pam, moving away with dignity, "you are beginning to talk immoral."

There was a modicum of triumph in her heart, for she felt that Edwina was avenged, since Norman regretted her parting. I was afraid you were after Edwina. I don't suppose you'd have had any chance with her, but I thought you wanted her, and she was too good for you."

"God knows she was," Norman said. "Who wins her for a wife must be a happy man, and but for Jacintha—"

"I don't know," said Miss Pam, moving away with dignity, "you are beginning to talk immoral."

There was a modicum of triumph in her heart, for she felt that Edwina was avenged, since Norman regretted her parting. I was afraid you were after Edwina. I don't suppose you'd have had any chance with her, but I thought you wanted her, and she was too good for you."

"God knows she was," Norman said. "Who wins her for a wife must be a happy man, and but for Jacintha—"

"I don't know," said Miss Pam, moving away with dignity, "you are beginning to talk immoral."

There was a modicum of triumph in her heart, for she felt that Edwina was avenged, since Norman regretted her parting. I was afraid you were after Edwina. I don't suppose you'd have had any chance with her, but I thought you wanted her, and she was too good for you."

Who would use her child."

Miss Pam knew better what Jacintha's thoughts had been, but she held her peace.

"Folks kin be friends," she said. "Kind of brother and sister."

"I cannot," said Norman. "Since I may not marry Edwina I must leave her. I must put the ocean between us. I cannot suffer as I suffer now."

CHAPTER III.

"You ain't seen me since you sent me away with that," he said.

A few days later Miss Pam walked near the water. Not far from the Driscoll mansion the nursemaid, in cap and apron, was chasing a young boatman among the rocks, with the declared purpose of boxing his ears. The child's perambulator was empty; close to the water stood Flossy herself. She had sent her little hat out upon the waves, with her doll in it as ship's master, and she was just launching her little red shoe to follow it.

"My ship, Aunt Pam," she cried, "see my ship!"

"Why, you might get drowned, Flossy," cried Aunt Pam.

"No; see!" cried the child, running down to the water, and standing there as a great wave swept up and broke, wetting her feet. "See, Flossy, isn't it afraid!"

Half an hour after this, the nursemaid, having boxed the boatman's ears and been punished by a kiss, for which she had to box them again and so on, brought her of little Miss Flossy Driscoll, and went in search of her.

The perambulator was safe, the doll was still sailing about the broad brimmed hat. The little red shoe had been washed up on a black rock, a spade and a pail were discovered, but no Flossy. Alarm turned to terror, terror to certainty that the child was drowned.

Hysterics supervened. All Hingham came down to the shore, but nothing else was found, not even the poor child's body. The local paper had an article in next day's issue commiserating our esteemed citizen, Mr. Norman Driscoll, on the new affliction with which Providence had seen fit to afflict him, and he was reported as being prostrated with grief, as indeed he was. For a week he wanted to die. Before the next was over he went to the cottage for consolation. He had given up his trip to Europe. Not knowing that some women must be subtle, even to their latest breath, he believed that since he had no child and could not give her a stepmother, that oath of his was now a dead letter, that his wife's spirit would absolve him from it if she knew anything of earthly matters.

Poor Mrs. Driscoll had outwitted herself. Had she been frank and bade her husband never to marry she would have gained her point, for at that moment he would have taken any oath she desired. Now he felt himself free and he began to woo Edwina, who held out bravely for a long while.

"It is not what Jacintha meant, Aunt Pam," she said. "I don't want to marry again under any circumstances."

"She should have said what she meant then," Miss Pam cried, "oh, dear, dear!"

At last one day the spinster burst into a violent flood of tears at the breakfast table.

"If you don't marry Norman Driscoll, I shall go crazy!" she said. That evening Edwina gave up her battle.

Driscoll had now been a widower four years, and he and Aunt Pam hurried on the wedding, and Edwina was off and away on her honeymoon journey in no time.

No sooner were they away and the house clear of friends and neighbors who had been bidden to the feast than Aunt Pam, locking her doors and drawing her blind, rushed up the garret stairs and descended, with a child in her arms. The child was Flossy. The little thing was fat, rosy and smiling, and clung to Aunt Pam's neck with both arms and kissed her cheek fondly. Since the day of her disappearance, when, as my reader no doubt understands, Miss Pam had stolen her away, her nursery had been the big garret, and Miss Pam had been her nurse. What the after consequences to herself might be she had not thought, but she had determined to remove the obstacle that lay between Norman and Edwina.

Believing his child dead, that oath to refrain from giving her a stepmother became null and void. Edwina's happiness was assured, and Flossy might come to life as soon as she chose. It would be to Norman as a joyful miracle, and add to Edwina's bliss.

Now, however, poor Aunt Pam began to ask herself what might be said to her thought of her? Norman and Edwina would forgive her no doubt, but the neighbors, the people who had known her all her life, would they say? It might get into the papers, and the worst of all was that people would believe that Edwina knew all about it. That thought had never struck her before. "Guess it was something some boys were playing with and she'd got into it. Said her name was Flossy and talked about papa."

sea." He laughed a little nervously. "I'm about twice the size I was when I saw you last," he said. "This beard has grown since then—to make up for this," and he rubbed his shiny crown.

"Oh," cried Aunt Pam, "it can't be!" The man put his hand into his pocket and pulled out a tiny mitten, knitted of blue wool, and held it up by the bit of ribbon at the wrist.

"You ain't seen me since you sent me away with that," he said.

"Jefferson Fosdick!" cried Aunt Pam. "It's me. Cap'n Fosdick; they call me now, 'and the man. Master and owner of as fine a schooner as ever sailed. I ran away to sea because my heart was broke. Calculated to expire shortly. But you see I didn't."

Aunt Pam stared at him.

"You come back—now I look at you," she said; "though of course we are both older."

"It's all outside with me," said the captain. "I'd knowed you anywhere, though." And he offered his great hand and shook Miss Pam's for a long, long while.

"Anyhow," said the spinster, "I'm glad to see you and to hear you speak of that mitten, if only for me to make a statement. I've wrote it out, so's you could hear it sent to you if I did without meeting you—not that you'd care now, but for my own satisfaction."

"Well, well," said the captain solemnly. "Well, I want to know."

"Excuse me a minute," said Miss Pam, and went away and returned with the teakwood box in her hand. From it she extracted the blue paper parcel and the small manuscript.

"You can keep it to read if you like, but I can say it shorter."

"I didn't mean to give you that mitten, captain. In them old days I was beautiful and so was you."

"You said the captain."

"I'd expected for awhile for to hear you ask what you did ask, and I felt so though I couldn't say nothing, so I took a romantic idea into my head and provided myself with this—she held up the blue parcel—when comin' from from the party you inspired into my feelings. I says, says I, 'My answer is contained in this; don't look at it till you get home, and I gave you a little parcel.'"

"With this in it," sighed the captain, holding up the mitten.

"I'd expected for awhile for to hear you ask what you did ask, and I felt so though I couldn't say nothing, so I took a romantic idea into my head and provided myself with this—she held up the blue parcel—when comin' from from the party you inspired into my feelings. I says, says I, 'My answer is contained in this; don't look at it till you get home, and I gave you a little parcel.'"

"With this in it," sighed the captain, holding up the mitten.

"I'd expected for awhile for to hear you ask what you did ask, and I felt so though I couldn't say nothing, so I took a romantic idea into my head and provided myself with this—she held up the blue parcel—when comin' from from the party you inspired into my feelings. I says, says I, 'My answer is contained in this; don't look at it till you get home, and I gave you a little parcel.'"

"With this in it," sighed the captain, holding up the mitten.

"I'd expected for awhile for to hear you ask what you did ask, and I felt so though I couldn't say nothing, so I took a romantic idea into my head and provided myself with this—she held up the blue parcel—when comin' from from the party you inspired into my feelings. I says, says I, 'My answer is contained in this; don't look at it till you get home, and I gave you a little parcel.'"

"With this in it," sighed the captain, holding up the mitten.

"I'd expected for awhile for to hear you ask what you did ask, and I felt so though I couldn't say nothing, so I took a romantic idea into my head and provided myself with this—she held up the blue parcel—when comin' from from the party you inspired into my feelings. I says, says I, 'My answer is contained in this; don't look at it till you get home, and I gave you a little parcel.'"

HIS VICTORY COMPLETE.

Affidavits Which Fully Exonerate Hon. H. J. Snively From all Charges.

MRS. FALLON SATISFIED WITH THE ARRANGEMENTS.

The Affidavits of the McGraw Organs Were Based on Misrepresentation and Forgery—Mr. Snively's Seattle Ovation the Greatest Demonstration in the History of the State—Greeted by Rounds of Applause and Bouquets.

SEATTLE, Nov. 2.—(Special to the Herald.)—The reception given to H. J. Snively was without parallel in the history of the state. All of the people who could crowd into the armory, the largest hall in the city, were at this meeting. He was introduced by W. H. White, who aided him when he first came to Washington and knew of his penniless condition. When Snively was introduced round after round of applause greeted him, and it was some minutes before the applause subsided. Snively's manner at once gained the confidence of the audience, and his manly statements soon captured the hearts of his hearers.

He told how he had worked at the trade of plasterer to earn money enough to educate himself. How he failed in business, and how he came west to try and rebuild his fortune. He read affidavits from West Virginia showing the falsity of all the charges against him, and showing that some of the affidavits were absolute forgeries. Among these affidavits was one from Mrs. Fallon, showing that the Fallon heirs had been satisfactorily arranged with. His answer to the charges was complete.

At the close of his speech the stage was covered with bouquets, and hundreds came forward to congratulate the speaker. The charges against Snively have been shown to have been manufactured as a desperate means of saving McGraw. Letters from Snively's friends in Graton, telling him of the attempt to trump up charges against him were held back in the postoffice at Graton, so he could have no opportunity to defend himself.

The meeting continued this morning to be the topic of conversation, and the consensus of opinion is that the charges made against Snively will insure to his benefit, and numbers of men, including republicans, who have been against him now have their eyes opened and are working for Snively. One man went to Senator Druan and voluntarily gave $50 towards the campaign fund, and another gave Snively a check for $200 to be used in his campaign.

POG, editor and proprietor of the Graton Leader, do solemnly swear that I am personally acquainted with H. J. Snively, democratic candidate for governor of the state of Washington, who for many years resided in this county. I know him as student, teacher, lawyer and business man, and never heard aught against his character until the failure of the firm of Martin & Snively, and nothing criminal was imputed him even then. On the contrary, all seemed to realize that it was a business failure, brought about by an unfortunate timber purchase, and that the only course left open was the honorable one pursued by Snively; that of turning over his all to his creditors and seeking in a new country to retrieve and build up his shattered fortune and make a living for his family, and which he did after acquainting his friends of his intentions.

(Signed) S. W. FOX.
Taken, sworn to and subscribed before me, this 31st day of October, 1902, as witness my hand and official seal.

(SEAL) W. L. R. D. DENT,
Notary Public.

BENJAMIN F. MARTIN'S AFFIDAVIT.
GRATON, W. Va., Oct. 31.—
West Virginia, Taylor county, to-wit: I, Benjamin F. Martin, upon oath say that I have known Henry J. Snively, now the democratic candidate for governor in the state of Washington, for many years; that when he failed in business here I was made the trustee in a deed of trust in which he conveyed to me his individual property, real and personal, and all of his said property so far as I know; that said Snively conveyed said property to secure and pay his creditors, as shown by said deed of trust; that said property was not sufficient to pay all his debts.

I further say that prior to his failure I was somewhat acquainted with his financial condition and believed that he could not help failing. I further say that I attribute his failure to engaging in the (shook) lumber business with his partner, Martin, in the firm name of Martin & Snively, neither of whom had much capital to begin with, and owing to reverses and large outlays on tramroad and other things their failure was the result.

Martin & Snively made also an assignment of their co-partnership property to my partner, Frank Woods, as trustee, to secure and pay their co-partnership debts, and they assigned the whole of their co-partnership property; real and personal property, when assigned were not sufficient to pay the firm's debts.

The said firm, I believe, surrendered all the firm's property that they owned, with the view of providing for their creditors, as the trust deed shows.

There was a lien for purchase money on the large tract of land conveyed and when sold at a public sale was purchased by those holding the purchase money lien for, I think, less than the amount of their lien, and consequently other creditors could not be paid. Out of the sale of number and other personal property there was paid $200 on the two notes due the bank in Graton.

One note was signed by Martin & Snively and by John H. Gerkins and myself. The other note was signed by Martin & Snively and John Gerkins and T. Armstrong. One hundred dollars were paid on each note out of the trust effects.

I can say further that said Henry J. Snively wrote me from where he now lives to apply the money secured to his wife in the deed of trust, in consideration of her relinquishing her contingent right of dower to reimburse me the amount I had paid on said note in said bank, and in his letters assured me that he was anxious to pay John H. Gerkins, T. Armstrong and others and would do so as fast as he could.

He, Snively, told me and my partner, Woods, that he was going from here before he left. I do not know of Mr. Snively swindling any one at any time. I know of no such things and must pronounce the charges false, and I believe all the charges are false.

I am asked to add that I have lived in this county since 1856 and have been a practicing lawyer during the time. I was elected to congress three times from this district, and was a member of the constitutional convention.

I make the foregoing statement as a matter of justice to a former townman, Henry J. Snively. My age is 64 and my residence Graton, W. Va.

(Signed) B. F. MARTIN.
Notary public in and for Taylor county, W. Va.

AFFIDAVIT OF JOHN T. MCGRAW.
State of West Virginia, Taylor county, to-wit: This day came before me, a notary public in and for said county and state, John T. McGraw who, being first duly sworn, said upon oath:

My name is John T. McGraw. I am a resident of Graton, W. Va., and have resided here all my life, and am by profession a lawyer. I know Hon. H. J. Snively, democratic candidate for governor of the state of Washington, and have known him since we were boys together. I am now counsel for the heirs of P. J. Fallon, deceased, and in this connection I am asked to submit a statement, which I cheerfully do. These claims against Mr. Snively, guardian for the Fallon heirs, were prosecuted to judgment by Judge M. H. Dent, with a view at the time, as I understand it, to enforce payment against Mr. George W. Brown, who was one of the sureties to Mr. Snively, and in whose hands it was supposed a part of these funds had been placed in the shape of a loan by the guardians. After these judgments had been received and executions thereon had been returned unsatisfied, I was employed as the resident attorney for the collection agency of R. G. Dun & Co. to send the judgments to Washington territory for collection. By reference to my letter book I find that on November 20, 1891, copies of these judgments against Mr. Snively were transmitted by me to Dun & Co., at Wheeling, W. Va., with instructions to forward them to their attorney in Washington territory for collection. At some time thereafter I received through the transmitting channels a letter from the attorneys for the company at North Yakima, by which a proposition from Mr. Snively was submitted, he proposing to pay the interest accrued on the claims and to pay each heir the amount due as they severally attained their majority. This proposition was submitted through my office to Mrs. Mary B. Fallon, the mother and natural guardian for the children, and after consultation, was accepted by them. I notified Messrs. Dun & Co. of this acceptance and subsequently received a note through the transmitting channels a letter of their attorneys at North Yakima dated December 15th, 1891, in which they said that Mr. Snively and his whole family had been sick during the preceding fall, and consequently with his falling off of business, and his sickness had entailed large expenses, but they believed he would be able subsequently to pay in conformity to the proposition submitted by them. These gentlemen are reputable, respectable citizens of Washington, and in their negotiations and transactions of the business full confidence has been reposed in them. At the time that Mr. Phillips came here for the purpose of obtaining affidavits in this matter, I decided to have anything to do with the evidence which he then sought to obtain, and through my office sent word to Mrs. Fallon to be cautious in her dealings with him, for the reason I thought his only object was to obtain some statements for political purposes, to be used by him in a far distant state, where means of communication as to its truthfulness might not be readily obtained. I did not know until I saw yesterday morning a copy of the Post-Intelligencer that she had made an affidavit upon the subject.

(Signed) JOHN T. MCGRAW.
This day also came before me, Mary B. Fallon, who being first duly sworn did also say upon oath: I have read the affidavit of the Hon. John T. McGraw, above written and signed by him, and know it to be true, and I further state that I have read the affidavits purporting to come from me and published in the Post-Intelligencer of Seattle, Washington, and I say that I signed, after much importunity, a paper for a man by the name of Phillips, he stating that he was from the state of Washington, and that if I would sign the paper he would have a lawyer, Mr. Wiley, collect my claim against H. J. Snively without expense to me. He made certain promises under which I signed the affidavit which he has not complied with. I am not now nor have been an engine wiper for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad company or any other railroad company. I am engaged in the hotel business and have been continuously for a number of years.

(Signed) MARY B. FALLON.
Witness: R. D. JENNINGS.

VOTE FOR VANCE FOR REPRESENTATIVE.
He is an Able and Honorable Man,
Who Will Do His Duty Without Fear or Favor.

When the demo-crats of this county were looking around for legislative timber, all eyes seemed to be turned with one accord to Thomas M. Vance, for in him were recognized the qualifications which are necessary in the make-up of a legislator who will command a respectful hearing and be an important factor in the directing of the deliberations of our state law makers. Mr. Vance was strongly averse to accepting the nomination, but his friends were so insistent that he reluctantly consented to make the race, and was nominated by acclamation and with great enthusiasm. Mr. Vance is a young man who came to the northwest to carve out a home and a name for himself. He does not rely on the fame of his father, but on his own ability, which all who know him recognize as of a high order. He stands on a platform that merits the support of the farmer and mechanic, as well as other classes, and with an honor that is unquestioned he will, if elected, labor faithfully and truly to carry out the principles as outlined in that excellent document. Should Mr. Vance be successful at the polls, and THE HERALD believes he will be, his constituency may rely upon the dry bones of the last corrupt legislature being well shaken up, and the infamous agricultural deal of Loughton, Conover and Black thoroughly ventilated. Among the measures which Mr. Vance most heartily favors are the mechanics' lien law, the regulation of freights and fares, a railroad fence law, and the abolition of Pinkertonism in this state. Vote for Thomas M. Vance on November 24th and you will be voting for an honorable and conscientious man who will labor for your best interests.

Remember, Ditter carries Dr. Schilling's corns; every pair warranted. 3c

STOOD BY THE GUNS.

DESPERATE FIGHT OF THE ELEVENTH OHIO BATTERY AT IUKA.

Stationed in a Front Pass It Repelled Several Charges and Secured Only When the Confederates Were Nearly All Killed or Wounded and the Chests Empty.

Copyright, 1902, by American Press Association. Book rights reserved.

ARTILLERY fighting looks easy when you reason from a theoretical point of view. With a battery in position, plenty of shot in the chest and ammunition to do the work, what greater odds could be asked over an enemy coming on a charge? The muzzles of the cannons may be pointed so as to sweep the entire front and leave no path way unscathed by missiles. Behind their guns the artillerists may stand and hurl sarcasms upon the ranks of the assailants almost at will. The opposing artillery is unable to fire upon a battery while a party is charging it for fear of hurting friends, and at the supreme moment it comes to a truce between cannon and rifles or bayonets. The slashing shells one would suppose could outdo bullets, the showers of canister overmatch the bayonets. Sometimes it turns out so, but not always.

The first time that I saw an array of our cannon on the battlefield, I said to a comrade, "How can we help winning?" With more experience than he, he exclaimed, "It's all right if they'll stand," meaning the artillerists. We were infantry, and I said cheerfully, "Of course they'll stand if we stand by them." I soon found out that I would prefer the other horn of the dilemma, to charge the enemy's guns rather than to stand by our own guns while repelling a charge. If the charge was worthy the name. The bloodiest experience of this kind during the civil war fell to the lot of the Eleventh Ohio battery, in the little fight at Iuka, Miss., Sept. 19, 1862. It was an accidental affair, and that partly accounts for the extraordinary exposure of the artillery.

Toward the close of the day Sanborn's brigade of Rosecrans' army was marching along a high road leading to the town, feeling the way in anticipation of striking a Confederate outpost. The route lay through a strip of woods that separated two wide clearings held by the enemy, and upon entering the pass Sanborn's column drew a heavy fire from Confederate riflemen and artillery. The place would have proved an ambush had Sanborn pushed ahead, but he halted his line and the enemy quickly attempted to crush it before it could prepare for battle. There was no time to fire and the nearest battery, which happened to be the Eleventh Ohio, was placed on a slight elevation at the edge of the wood, where it could sweep the roadway and also the nearest edges of the clearings on both sides of it. The position of the guns was an ideal one, a wide range to the right and left oblique and a slope along the whole front. Regiments of infantry were placed on each flank of the battery and to rear, and as far as it went the line of battle was perfect.

Looking at the plan on paper, most men of experience would choose a place behind those six cannons if they had to be in it all. The troops took their stations under a heavy fire of shell and bullets, and were soon settled down to business than the confederates changed three columns deep upon the crest where the battery stood. The Ohioans opened their guns with canister and the infantry on each side gave the assailants volley after volley of bullets. The charge was repulsed, and no doubt the men who had a hand in the work thought they could easily repel a second and even a third. The battery was still intact, its position was unaltered, and it was unharmed, and enough ammunition on hand to double load the guns for the next encounter.

There were other Union guns in position on the field, but the Confederates were bent upon silencing those of the Eleventh Ohio first. They reformed and dashed in again with vigorous volleys. A dense thicket screened them from the rear, and they fell below the bank of a ravine, finally emerging into full view at the distance of 100 yards from Sanborn's line. The Ohioans gave their double charge, and no doubt the infantry keeping company for a time with well aimed bullets. But while the

STOOD BY THE GUNS.

DESPERATE FIGHT OF THE ELEVENTH OHIO BATTERY AT IUKA.

Stationed in a Front Pass It Repelled Several Charges and Secured Only When the Confederates Were Nearly All Killed or Wounded and the Chests Empty.

Copyright, 1902, by American Press Association. Book rights reserved.

ARTILLERY fighting looks easy when you reason from a theoretical point of view. With a battery in position, plenty of shot in the chest and ammunition to do the work, what greater odds could be asked over an enemy coming on a charge? The muzzles of the cannons may be pointed so as to sweep the entire front and leave no path way unscathed by missiles. Behind their guns the artillerists may stand and hurl sarcasms upon the ranks of the assailants almost at will. The opposing artillery is unable to fire upon a battery while a party is charging it for fear of hurting friends, and at the supreme moment it comes to a truce between cannon and rifles or bayonets. The slashing shells one would suppose could outdo bullets, the showers of canister overmatch the bayonets. Sometimes it turns out so, but not always.

The first time that I saw an array of our cannon on the battlefield, I said to a comrade, "How can we help winning?" With more experience than he, he exclaimed, "It's all right if they'll stand," meaning the artillerists. We were infantry, and I said cheerfully, "Of course they'll stand if we stand by them." I soon found out that I would prefer the other horn of the dilemma, to charge the enemy's guns rather than to stand by our own guns while repelling a charge. If the charge was worthy the name. The bloodiest experience of this kind during the civil war fell to the lot of the Eleventh Ohio battery, in the little fight at Iuka, Miss., Sept. 19, 1862. It was an accidental affair, and that partly accounts for the extraordinary exposure of the artillery.

Toward the close of the day Sanborn's brigade of Rosecrans' army was marching along a high road leading to the town, feeling the way in anticipation of striking a Confederate outpost. The route lay through a strip of woods that separated two wide clearings held by the enemy, and upon entering the pass Sanborn's column drew a heavy fire from Confederate riflemen and artillery. The place would have proved an ambush had Sanborn pushed ahead, but he halted his line and the enemy quickly attempted to crush it before it could prepare for battle. There was no time to fire and the nearest battery, which happened to be the Eleventh Ohio, was placed on a slight elevation at the edge of the wood, where it could sweep the roadway and also the nearest edges of the clearings on both sides of it. The position of the guns was an ideal one, a wide range to the right and left oblique and a slope along the whole front. Regiments of infantry were placed on each flank of the battery and to rear, and as far as it went the line of battle was perfect.

Looking at the plan on paper, most men of experience would choose a place behind those six cannons if they had to be in it all. The troops took their stations under a heavy fire of shell and bullets, and were soon settled down to business than the confederates changed three columns deep upon the crest where the battery stood. The Ohioans opened their guns with canister and the infantry on each side gave the assailants volley after volley of bullets. The charge was repulsed, and no doubt the men who had a hand in the work thought they could easily repel a second and even a third. The battery was still intact, its position was unaltered, and it was unharmed, and enough ammunition on hand to double load the guns for the next encounter.

There were other Union guns in position on the field, but the Confederates were bent upon silencing those of the Eleventh Ohio first. They reformed and dashed in again with vigorous volleys. A dense thicket screened them from the rear, and they fell below the bank of a ravine, finally emerging into full view at the distance of 100 yards from Sanborn's line. The Ohioans gave their double charge, and no doubt the infantry keeping company for a time with well aimed bullets. But while the

He shot held out, and gave the order to charge the guns at all hazards. His men had already tasted the canister from the well handled pieces, but they moved forward in an oblique course, joined by parts of two regiments that were directly in front. They used the cold steel, and there was not much to oppose them except a few doses of canister. They pressed on up to the muzzles of the guns and past them, the Ohioans besting them off with revolvers and saber bayonets. Some of the infantry captains near by wanted to go to the rescue, but excited runaway artillery teams dashed into their ranks, striking men down and breaking up the formation. Nearly all of the battery horses were disabled, and the guns couldn't be removed. So the cannoneers stood by to defend them literally with the last breath and the last drop of blood. It didn't often come to that for all the historical gush and old soldier talk about such things, but with the Eleventh Ohio in Iuka Pass it did.

When the canister gave out and the Confederates had overrun the battery, bayoneting every man who refused to surrender and all who could handle a weapon refused—a few of the more desperately stubborn, or perhaps those the least hurt, dragged themselves to the trails of three of the pieces and spiked them. Some were killed in the attempt to serve other guns the same way. The enemy did not enjoy their triumph long, for a fresh Union brigade with some of Sanborn's men retook the ground instantly, and there found the dead and dying cannoneers to the num-cannon, belching canister, were good for all the enemy could bring against them, their infantry supports only counted as man against man, and the enemy outnumbered them. Some in the rear and some on the left gave way.

AT THE MUZZLES OF THE GUNS.

The Confederates of course followed up and passed the flank of the battery. Quick-ly some companies of infantry from other points were hurled to the scene, and they fell and the assailants were driven back with cheers of victory on their lips. However, they had carried confusion into Sanborn's ranks and upset the idea that the fight was to be all one way. Three Union columns had been shot down while leading up detachments to save the threatened battery. Other troops that were called upon to rally around it found their hands full in holding their own. So the truth dawned upon Sanborn that the Ohioans and some scattered infantry companies next to the cannon must fight it out alone if the Confederates tried it again. They did try again in the most desperate rush of the day. One Confederate brigade had used powder in the first two charges, and a fresh brigade then entered the lists.

The Ohio boys were no longer in the ideal situation for artillerists. Their guns were in place, it is true, the enemy a good distance off, and there were sound men enough to load and fire. But the ammunition was running low on account of these rapid double loads, and besides the infantry supports were busy covering their own lines, and of course the battery hadn't escaped hard blows. Guns had been killed and wounded; horses had been shot, and in their agony and fright were plunging about, dragging lines and cables sither and thither, tugging at their harness, rearing and kicking as a jam of terrified horses will. Yet there were cool heads in the little band of cannoneers, and when the third charging column showed its flanks in the clearing on each side of the pass a shower of canister tore through the ranks, and the line halted and wavered.

The colonel of a regiment that advanced across the cleared ground, the First Texas legion, saw with a quick eye that the battery had the best of the situation no longer

STOOD BY THE GUNS.

DESPERATE FIGHT OF THE ELEVENTH OHIO BATTERY AT IUKA.

Stationed in a Front Pass It Repelled Several Charges and Secured Only When the Confederates Were Nearly All Killed or Wounded and the Chests Empty.

Copyright, 1902, by American Press Association. Book rights reserved.

ARTILLERY fighting looks easy when you reason from a theoretical point of view. With a battery in position, plenty of shot in the chest and ammunition to do the work, what greater odds could be asked over an enemy coming on a charge? The muzzles of the cannons may be pointed so as to sweep the entire front and leave no path way unscathed by missiles. Behind their guns the artillerists may stand and hurl sarcasms upon the ranks of the assailants almost at will. The opposing artillery is unable to fire upon a battery while a party is charging it for fear of hurting friends, and at the supreme moment it comes to a truce between cannon and rifles or bayonets. The slashing shells one would suppose could outdo bullets, the showers of canister overmatch the bayonets. Sometimes it turns out so, but not always.

The first time that I saw an array of our cannon on the battlefield, I said to a comrade, "How can we help winning?" With more experience than he, he exclaimed, "It's all right if they'll stand," meaning the artillerists. We were infantry, and I said cheerfully, "Of course they'll stand if we stand by them." I soon found out that I would prefer the other horn of the dilemma, to charge the enemy's guns rather than to stand by our own guns while repelling a charge. If the charge was worthy the name. The bloodiest experience of this kind during the civil war fell to the lot of the Eleventh Ohio battery, in the little fight at Iuka, Miss., Sept. 19, 1862. It was an accidental affair, and that partly accounts for the extraordinary exposure of the artillery.

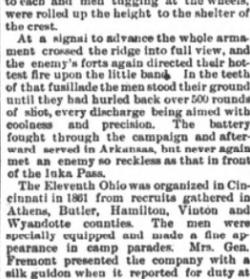

Toward the close of the day Sanborn's brigade of Rosecrans' army was marching along a high road leading to the town, feeling the way in anticipation of striking a Confederate outpost. The route lay through a strip of woods that separated two wide clearings held by the enemy, and upon entering the pass Sanborn's column drew a heavy fire from Confederate riflemen and artillery. The place would have proved an ambush had Sanborn pushed ahead, but he halted his line and the enemy quickly attempted to crush it before it could prepare for battle. There was no time to fire and the nearest battery, which happened to be the Eleventh Ohio, was placed on a slight elevation at the edge of the wood, where it could sweep the roadway and also the nearest edges of the clearings on both sides of it. The position of the guns was an ideal one, a wide range to the right and left oblique and a slope along the whole front. Regiments of infantry were placed on each flank of the battery and to rear, and as far as it went the line of battle was perfect.

Looking at the plan on paper, most men of experience would choose a place behind those six cannons if they had to be in it all. The troops took their stations under a heavy fire of shell and bullets, and were soon settled down to business than the confederates changed three columns deep upon the crest where the battery stood. The Ohioans opened their guns with canister and the infantry on each side gave the assailants volley after volley of bullets. The charge was repulsed, and no doubt the men who had a hand in the work thought they could easily repel a second and even a third. The battery was still intact, its position was unaltered, and it was unharmed, and enough ammunition on hand to double load the guns for the next encounter.

There were other Union guns in position on the field, but the Confederates were bent upon silencing those of the Eleventh Ohio first. They reformed and dashed in again with vigorous volleys. A dense thicket screened them from the rear, and they fell below the bank of a ravine, finally emerging into full view at the distance of 100 yards from Sanborn's line. The Ohioans gave their double charge, and no doubt the infantry keeping company for a time with well aimed bullets. But while the

He shot held out, and gave the order to charge the guns at all hazards. His men had already tasted the canister from the well handled pieces, but they moved forward in an oblique course, joined by parts of two regiments that were directly in front. They used the cold steel, and there was not much to oppose them except a few doses of canister. They pressed on up to the muzzles of the guns and past them, the Ohioans besting them off with revolvers and saber bayonets. Some of the infantry captains near by wanted to go to the rescue, but excited runaway artillery teams dashed into their ranks, striking men down and breaking up the formation. Nearly all of the battery horses were disabled, and the guns couldn't be removed. So the cannoneers stood by to defend them literally with the last breath and the last drop of blood. It didn't often come to that for all the historical gush and old soldier talk about such things, but with the Eleventh Ohio in Iuka Pass it did.

When the canister gave out and the Confederates had overrun the battery, bayoneting every man who refused to surrender and all who could handle a weapon refused—a few of the more desperately stubborn, or perhaps those the least hurt, dragged themselves to the trails of three of the pieces and spiked them. Some were killed in the attempt to serve other guns the same way. The enemy did not enjoy their triumph long, for a fresh Union brigade with some of Sanborn's men retook the ground instantly, and there found the dead and dying cannoneers to the num-cannon, belching canister, were good for all the enemy could bring against them, their infantry supports only counted as man against man, and the enemy outnumbered them. Some in the rear and some on the left gave way.

AT THE MUZZLES OF THE GUNS.

The Confederates of course followed up and passed the flank of the battery. Quick-ly some companies of infantry from other points were hurled to the scene, and they fell and the assailants were driven back with cheers of victory on their lips. However, they had carried confusion into Sanborn's ranks and upset the idea that the fight was to be all one way. Three Union columns had been shot down while leading up detachments to save the threatened battery. Other troops that were called upon to rally around it found their hands full in holding their own. So the truth dawned upon Sanborn that the Ohioans and some scattered infantry companies next to the cannon must fight it out alone if the Confederates tried it again. They did try again in the most desperate rush of the day. One Confederate brigade had used powder in the first two charges, and a fresh brigade then entered the lists.

The Ohio boys were no longer in the ideal situation for artillerists. Their guns were in place, it is true, the enemy a good distance off, and there were sound men enough to load and fire. But the ammunition was running low on account of these rapid double loads, and besides the infantry supports were busy covering their own lines, and of course the battery hadn't escaped hard blows. Guns had been killed and wounded; horses had been shot, and in their agony and fright were plunging about, dragging lines and cables sither and thither, tugging at their harness, rearing and kicking as a jam of terrified horses will. Yet there were cool heads in the little band of cannoneers, and when the third charging column showed its flanks in the clearing on each side of the pass a shower of canister tore through the ranks, and the line halted and wavered.

The colonel of a regiment that advanced across the cleared ground, the First Texas legion, saw with a quick eye that the battery had the best of the situation no longer

This Fellow

is Clearing His Throat Getting Ready to Sing

The Chorus

for the Victors in the Coming Campaign

FILL YOUR LARDERS FOR WINTER and cloth yourselves to brace against the winter winds. Remember, please, that we carry everything usually kept in a well regulated store. We are chuck full of goods from pillar to dome.

FARMERS & TRADERS GO-OP STORE, UNGER & MULLIGAN. We may add that your buying cheap goods from us will not interfere with you voting for your coming man.

DIAMONDS JEWELRY WATCHES

My stock comprises the finest line of goods ever shown in this city. Especial attention is called to our Diamonds and Silverware, just received. No such goods were ever before on this market. H. KEUCLER.

CLOCKS SILVERWARE SILVERWARE

LOOK To Your Clothes.

I have received the most complete list of imported suitings for fall wear ever brought to Yakima and a request is made that patrons call and inspect the goods.

PRICES REASONABLE. SATISFACTION GUARANTEED. J. D. F. WHITE Yakima Avenue North Yakima.

We Are In It - - - The Fight is On - - -

Not in the Soup, But in the Swim. Our stock is complete and it costs nothing to see for yourself.

SNELLING & BAKER. SNELLING & BAKER.

OUR SPECIALTIES: OUR SPECIALTIES:

FANCY GROCERIES, Canned Goods, Dried Fruits. Walker & Redmon. We also carry a full line of Staple Groceries, and our prices are as low as the lowest. OPERA HOUSE BLOCK. TELEPHONE NO. 21.

COLUMBIA MEAT MARKET, E. B. MARKS, Prop. I beg leave to inform the public that I have opened a Meat Market at the stand formerly occupied by A. H. Reynolds and will at all times keep on hand a first class supply of fresh and salt meats.

Polite Attention to Our Patrons and Prompt Delivery of Meats.

You are Pleased

With First Class Printing? Well, Patronize the "Herald."