FRED PARKER INTERVIEWED.—"North Yakima and the Yakima county adjacent are prosperous beyond expectations this season," said Attorney Fred Parker to a Tacoma Globe reporter Wednesday. "The experiment in arid lands has demonstrated the feasibility of that mode of irrigation in central Washington. The success of the wells in the Moxee valley, twelve miles north and east of the city, is practically assured. This will reclaim not less than 30,000 acres, hitherto classed as desert land, but susceptible of the highest degree of cultivation, when a supply of water is available. The big ditch enterprise, contemplating the reclamation of other large areas, by drawing water from the Yakima and Natchez rivers, are also progressing very satisfactorily. The great system of irrigation will stimulate agriculture and horticulture throughout all the region. Already numerous extensive hop growers of the Sound county have made purchases in Yakima county and the prospect promises for establishing yards on a large scale.—E. Meeker being among the heaviest investors. Practical tests have been made in the Sound valley in arid lands, demonstrating the fact that they cannot survive there, where the vines are exposed to the sun and the freewind of the winds. The yield, also, is fully equal to that of any
