OUR ARMY BEHIND THE TIMES.
Tactics That Do Not Agree With Modern Methods of Warfare.

Lieut. John P. Wisser in an able, well-considered paper in the United Service, points out that "our own drill-book in use at present in the regular army and the militia assumes a battle tactic that belongs to the year 1865, that is after our war and before the war of 1861."

Since then, says the Philadelphia Press, in war everything has been changed. In our drill-book nothing is changed. If we carry everything in the work of moving men up to attack must be un-learned and learned again in the field.
The misery of our present service is that the lieutenants see this. The generals do not. The latter have more to say about the matter but know less, and so the way is made ready to begin the next war by paying tuition in crushing defeat until a new lesson is learned.

The long, thin, extended line for attack is over with. The movements which lead up to it at the crisis of a battle are not what is now most wanted. The change in range of modern weapons can not be better put and explained to men who went through the last war than by saying that the German artillery begins to use shrapnel at 3500 yards—two miles—and at a little less than a mile, 1600 yards, this fire becomes "decisive." Even infantry fire becomes a mile, 1700 yards, and no German commander to-day takes a rush at a well-protected unbroken force, across 400 yards, a quarter of a mile, of open ground.

The result of all this is that the "advance of closed masses of large bodies of troops" is no longer possible even at a distance. At any range up to four miles they can be broken up by artillery.
"The shock of assault," says Lieut. Wis-ser, "has little significance to-day. The battle will be begun by long-range firing and won when one side or the other, shaken by the losses from a hail of bullets, is enveloped in a cloud of advancing scattered men or taken in flank by superior maneuvering."

Yet, except from articles by our younger officers of ability and no rank, no one would dream that our army had heard or learned of the wars of the last 25 years.
No drill room or parade ground shows any appreciation of the real work of war to-day.

The Conductor This Time.
"Fare, gentlemen," said the conductor in a smoking car to a company of card players, who held on their knees between them a large atlas. Three of them quietly handed up tickets, but the fourth man, near the window, became suddenly embarrassed.

"Fare!" again remarked the brassmounted official, rather sternly. The passenger addressed replied with a series of spasmodic winks and touched the back of his cards.

"Come, sir; I'm in a hurry," said the conductor.
"I haven't got any ticket."
"Pay your fare, then, with the usual alight advance."
"Boys, will you allow me to take a rake-off?" inquired the delinquent passenger.

"Not much!" answered the trio.
"My money's all up," said the passenger appealingly to the conductor.
"You will have to get off, then," answered the official, reaching for the bell rope. The man laid his cards face downward and said in a low tone to one of the players:

"What do you do?"
"I raise you," was the reply.
"How much?"
"Twenty dollars."
The man by the window passed his hand up to the conductor. The latter gave it one glance. Then he released a large fat pocket-book from inside his coat, took out two $20 bills and handed them to the delinquent.
"I see your twenty, and go you twenty better," he said.

"This complicated matter, and the original raise of $20 shifted uneasily in his coat. Finally he said:
"I raise you $10."
"Call him," said the conductor, handing over an X. "I'm in a hurry."
The delinquent passenger did so, and was about to take in the money on four aces, when the other player showed a straight flush, and pocketed all the money, including the conductor's. The latter was dazed; the delinquent passenger wink and abashed.

"Now you will have to get off," snapped the conductor.
"Yes, sir; stop the train," he replied.
The whole party got off.
"Know those fellows?" inquired a fat man on the opposite side of the aisle.
"No," answered the conductor.
"Slickest quartet of card-sharpers on the road. How much did they do you for?"
But the conductor raced himself down toward the door, which he banged shut without replying to the sardonic inquiry.

MR. GOULD CALLS A HALT.
Jay Says Railroad Building Must Stop
for Five Years.

The Country Must be Developed—Stockholders Want the West
Given Time to Develop
What it Now Has.

Gould, in an interview with the New Bureau, says: "The details of my plan have not worked out. The Northern Pacific, Northwestern, Atchison, Missouri Pacific and Wabash are united in its favor, and Orr, just elected to the Union Pacific directorate, represents David Dow's estate, which has a large interest in Rock Island. I have not yet seen the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy people. Actual consultation would be a good thing, but that is not yet possible under the laws.
What we want is a new and strong association superseding the present various western railroad associations, and the making of rates and distribution of territory and traffic to be with that association. Stockholders must assert themselves. It is all right when dividends are paid, but when financial returns are not forthcoming there will be an overturn, just as in the national election, when times had to be changed. There are railroads enough in the western country for the next five years. We want now to intelligently develop the country and have it grow up to the capacity of the roads without ruining the shareholders by competitive rates, which are an advantage to nobody."

In another interview Mr. Gould, when asked what his plans were in regard to western branches of the Union Pacific, said efforts would be made to make them earn something. This could be done by a slight advance in rates, which will be sufficient to make the roads pay. He disclaimed knowledge of a deal with the Northern Pacific. He said: "There seems to be an impression that I

North Yakima and the Yakima country is attracting much attention at present and everything is favorable for a year of great prosperity.

There are many cogent reasons why THE HERALD assumes that there will be much railroad building this coming year.

THE HERALD assumes that there will be much railroad building this coming year, not the least of which is the inability of the roads to carry to market the produce at present prices.

As if this was not good news enough, the Spokane Spokesman publishes a special from its Colfax correspondent, to the effect that an old railroad engineer of high standing, who is in direct communication with the officers of the Great Northern, says that by outlined route of that road it will cross the Columbia river at Ringold bar, south Priest rapids, and then shoot direct for Yakima.

North Yakima is to be congratulated, as it will in the near future be the scene of the life and prosperity which has so long been promised it by all who know of its fruitful soil, balmy climate and favorable location.

D. W. Preece, the defeated republican candidate for the state senate, arrived in the city from Goldendale, Wednesday, for the purpose of consulting with the republican central committee of this county on the question of contesting the election of J. T. Ebelman.

Congress went into session on Monday and listened to the reading of the president's message. This document, on the whole, is a very hum-drum affair.

The Tacoma Ledger is going for Collector Bradshaw's scalp. It intimates that he has no standing at home nor honor abroad, and asks that his successor be nominated at once.

THE Kansas City Times says that whenever you see a man on Kansas avenue in Topeka now with a suit of jeans clothing on, a corset in his hand and a few straws scattered in his hair, it is pretty safe to ask him what he thinks his chances are for the United States senatorship.

THE New York Mail and Express is the authority for the statement that Cleveland and Hill have patched up their differences, and that Hill will be the next United States senator from New York, leaving the track clear for Cleveland for the presidency in 1892.

THE drift of public opinion is shown in congress by the introduction of several free coinage bills. There is but little doubt but what a free coinage measure will pass this session.

J. M. Adams, residing upon his farm just south of town, continues in a sick and enfeebled condition, after his prolonged spell of fever this summer. Mr. Adams is paying the penalty of overwork in the Spokane Falls land office some time ago. When he left his farm here in 1885 to take charge of that office he was well and vigorous; but finding the work of his new position awfully heavy, and the allowance for clerical help cut down to almost nothing, he felt the necessity of working night and day for over two years. He finally got his office in good condition, and stopped the clamor for decisions in the several hundred cases that had accumulated, but his health was injured to such an extent that he has never fully recovered it.

A MATTER OF HISTORY.

Early Days in the Yakima Country --The Killing of Indian Agent Bolan by the Savages and the Hanging of the Murderers at Fort Simcoe.

The following account of the murder of A. J. Bolan, Indian agent at Fort Simcoe, says the Hood River Glacier, was given by an old Indian, now a resident at White Salmon, Washington, who had it direct from the lips of Chief Gwilt's son just before his execution, who, with his two companions, were hung by Col. Wright at Simcoe agency for this most unprovoked and cold-blooded murder.

War and rumors of war were rife; a vague uneasiness reigned upon the isolated families of eastern Oregon. The government, with its usual stupidity and criminal negligence, had failed to provide any adequate protection against the numerous hordes of savages that roamed the plains. The few straggling companies of blue-coats that were within reach were, as a rule, poorly officered and totally unacquainted with Indian tactics, and were held in supreme contempt by their dusky opponents.

On the 15th day of September, 1855, Indian Agent Bolan left The Dalles on horseback for the agency at Simcoe. He was just returning from a hurried trip to the Willamette valley and was hurrying back on account of the restless condition of the Yakimas, some of whom had been accused of participating in some of the recent murders. At The Dalles he was urged not to undertake the trip alone, but fearing no personal violence he started alone and unarmed. On his way through the Klilkilat valley he overtook three Yakima Indians accompanied by three squaws, all on their way to the agency, and all rode toward their destination.

The trail ran somewhere near where the present wagon road does, on the western slope of the Simcoe mountains. The distance (80 miles) being too great to make that day, camp was struck on one of the numerous streamlets that run down the mountain side. Mr. Bolan dismounted, un saddled and staked his horse, and returning to the fire divided his scanty store of biscuits and butter with his dusky companions, little dreaming of the awful fate close before him. The conversation turned upon the recent murders, and very unwisely, Bolan reiterated Wright's ponderous threats of vengeance and extermination. Then, and not till then, was Bolan's death decided upon. Two of the three quietly stepped behind him and plained his arms, while the third seized him around the legs and threw him violently to the ground, where he was securely tied hand and foot. When this was accomplished his captors held consultation as to the disposition to be made of the captive. Bolan pleaded piteously for his life, but to hearts that knew no pity. One of the savages seized him by the hair and drawing his head across his knee cut his throat from ear to ear.

The body was then placed upon his horse and carried some distance below the trail where the horse was also killed, and both bodies covered with brush and left. The remains were not found until after the murderers were caught by members of their own tribe, and handed over to the military for punishment. Then one of the three disclosed the location of the body, which was taken to Vancouver for burial.

Rifle Practice by Company E.

Company E marched to the rifle range on Thanksgiving day and blazed away at the target, 200 yards distant. The officers shot last, and when it came to their turn, it was so dark that the score made by them is no criterion of their skill, so their record is omitted from the following list:

APPRAISED SCHOOL LANDS.

State Land Commissioners Have Ordered Certain School Lands Sold

Which the County Commissioners Appraised—Sec. 35, Twp. 12, R. 18 Divided into 10-Acre Tracts.

Under the order of the state land commissioners, the county commissioners of Yakima county have appraised certain school lands in this county, and at the next meeting of this board they will order the sale of these lands at public auction at a price not less than the appraisement.

There has been much inquiry regarding these lands, and hundreds have signified their intention of being at the sale and taking part in the bidding. The commissioners have so placed the valuations that, while the lands, if they can be obtained at the figures named, are cheap, and if properly handled, will give big returns on the money invested, but under present financial conditions they cannot be depended upon for gross profit if purchased for speculative purposes.

In order that all prospective buyers may have an opportunity of acting intelligently in this matter, THE HERALD herewith gives descriptions and appraisements of the lands to be offered:

Table with columns: Section, Acreage, Appraisal, and Sale Price. Lists various school land tracts and their corresponding values.

A BLANKET MORTGAGE.

The United Railroads of Washington File With the Auditor a Forty Document Indicating an Intention to Build from Yakima to the Ocean.

On Monday, December 1st, Mitchell, Ashton & Chapman, attorneys of the Northern Pacific R. R., filed with the auditor of Yakima county, for recording, a bulky document known as a blanket mortgage. It was issued by the United Railroads of Washington to the Farmers Loan and Trust company of New York, and by its provisions it mortgages all its lines of railroads constructed, under construction and to be constructed in Yakima, Pacific, Lewis, Pierce and Thurston counties and delivers its bonds to an amount not exceeding $30,000 per mile for the entire length of its track.

The United Railroad company is a Northern Pacific organization, which is now building from Centralia to South Bend, and from a point on the Northern to Olympia. By the instrument on file at the auditor's office it conveys, by way of mortgage and in trust, a railroad and telegraph line to be constructed and described as follows: Beginning at the city of North Yakima, Yakima county, and running thence in a generally westerly direction along and by way of the valley of the Natchees river, or its tributaries, across the Cascade mountains at or near the Cowlitz pass; thence down the Cowlitz river in a general westerly direction through Lewis county to a point at or near the city of Chehalis, in said county; thence westerly, by way of the valley of the Chehalis river, or some of its tributaries, to the headwaters of the Willapa river; thence in a general westerly direction along the Willapa river, or some of its tributaries, to some point at the head of Shoalwater bay, at or near the town of South Bend. Also a branch railroad and telegraph line from some point on said Shoalwater bay, at or near the town of South Bend; thence running in a general northwesterly direction through the counties of Pacific and Chehalis to a point on the south side of Gray's Harbor. Also a branch railroad and telegraph line beginning at a point on said bay, at or near said town of South Bend; thence running in a general southerly direction through Pacific county to a point on the Columbia river; thence from said point opposite Astoria in a westerly direction, down the north bank or shore of the Columbia river to the Pacific ocean; and thence due north through Pacific county and about the spit between Shoalwater bay and the Pacific ocean to Leadwater point. Also a railroad and telegraph line beginning at or near some point in Lewis county on the line of the Pacific division of the Northern Pacific railroad; and running thence in a northwesterly direction down the valley of the Chehalis river, through the counties of Thurston and Chehalis to some point on the south side of Gray's Harbor in the vicinity of South Bay.
