Pope Gregory XIII reformed the Julian calendar by dropping ten days in 1582, and making January 1, instead of March 25, the beginning of the new year. Holland, then the leader of Europe in science and learning, instantly approved the change. Scotland adopted the reform in 1600, but England failed to do so until 1752. Even then the people could not understand the reason for the change and complained bitterly that their rulers had robbed them of a portion of their lives. It took England nearly 200 years to bring herself abreast modern science and civilization, and Russia has not done so yet. Russia is still "old style" in more sense than one.

Billiardists, give attention: the billiard table at Shardlow & McDaniel's has been completely overhauled and is now as good as when it came from the factory, for it not only has been newly covered but a splendid set of genuine ivory balls has been purchased. A game of billiards and a glass of Pabst Milwaukee beer is a pleasant way to spend an evening and these are inducements which Messrs Shardlow & McDaniel have to offer.

Professor Horsford tells of his efforts to secure tobacco for the army during the civil war. Upon visiting the camps at Fredericksburg and elsewhere and asking the soldiers what they most wished to complete their happiness, he received the reply, "tobacco." "Why tobacco?" he asked. "Because, if we sit down on a march and have a little smoke it makes us think of home, and lulls our minds and eases the homesickness." The measure encountered much opposition in congress and failed at first. But just after the war closed provision was made for a tobacco ration in the army supplies, and the soldiers still receive it.

"German Syrup"

The majority of well-read physicians now believe that Consumption is a germ disease. In other words, instead of being in the constitution itself it is caused by innumerable small creatures living in the lungs having no business there and eating them away as caterpillars do the leaves of trees.

A Germ Disease.
The phlegm that is coughed up is those parts of the lungs which have been gnawed off and destroyed. These little bacilli, as the germs are called, are too small to be seen with the naked eye, but they are very much alive just the same, and enter the body in our food, in the air we breathe, and through the pores of the skin. Thence they get into the blood and finally arrive at the lungs where they fasten and increase with frightful rapidity. Then German Syrup comes in, loosens them, kills them, expels them, heals the places they leave, so nourish and soothe that, in a short time consumptives become germ-proof and well.

HISTORICAL SKETCH BY REV. S. H. CHESIDE.
Some twenty years ago Rev. G. H. Atkinson, superintendent of Congregational work in Washington and Oregon, began to agitate the question of starting an industrial school in the Yakima region, and suggested that the Ahtanum valley was the place for it. He referred to this scheme every time he visited the Congregational churches in these valleys, and urged the brethren to plan for it. But the country was not yet ready for it, and money was not here to equip and run such an institution. Dr. Atkinson died without seeing the realization of his hopes. But in the autumn of 1889 the Yakima association of Congregational churches took up the matter and appointed a committee to receive offers of money and land for an academy to be located within the bounds of the association, at the point giving the most encouragement. Ellensburg, North Yakima and Ahtanum made offers for this institution. These offers were presented at the meeting of the association in the spring of 1890. That of Ahtanum was most encouraging. Sixty acres of good land was offered by Fenn B. Woodcock and wife, and a subscription in money and labor amounting to about $3,000 accompanied the offer of land. Also the strong moral support of the community was pledged to it. The association voted its hearty approval of the proposition to found such an institution, and approved of its location in the Ahtanum valley. The following board of trustees was secured and incorporated in July, 1890: Hon. R. K. Nichols, president; Rev. S. H. Cheside, secretary; Fenn B. Woodcock, treasurer; Rev. Samuel Green, Rev. Frank T. McConaughy, Hon. D. W. Stair, Mr. John Cowan, Capt. J. H. Thomas and Dan W. Nelson, trustees.

Various plans for starting the institution were discussed, but the stringent financial condition of the country caused all action to be postponed until the next season. In the spring of 1891 the subscription list was renewed and extended, and preparations made for beginning the building. The corner stone was laid in August of that year, and a solid stone foundation was completed. Mr. John A. Williams was engaged to superintend the construction of the building, and plans were adopted for a three story building, 36x56, with a story-and-a-half wing 24x32. This building was completed in September, 1892, and furnished ready for use at a cost of $8,000. The school was opened with appropriate exercises on the 20th of September, Prof. W. A. Heiney being principal; Rev. F. McConaughy, instructor in Greek; Mrs. Lillian Heiney, teacher of music; Miss Ethel Parker, teacher of art, and Mrs. Alice McLean, matron. There are thirty-six students in the institution, and good work is being done.

The land has been platted in acre lots, and is offered to persons desiring to have a home near a christian school. A number of lots have been sold, and Mr. J. A. Williams has built upon his lot an attractive five roomed cottage. It is the purpose of the founders to make this a first class institution in every possible way. The ambition is to make it an attractive and profitable place for young people desiring an education. The rooms are attractive and the boarding department is complete. Board and room are offered to young people for $3.50 per full week of seven days, and for $2.50 per school week of five days.

A debt of about $3,000 has been incurred in completing and furnishing the building. It is hoped that the friends of education and progress in these valleys and in this city will rally to the help of the institution and assist in paying the debt.

The prospect of the school is flattering, and its friends can do much for this part of the state by lending a hearty support, either in good words or patronage. The next term will open Monday, January 2, 1893. Besides all the common school branches there will be classes in rhetoric, English literature, beginning Latin, Greek, Greek, bookkeeping, algebra and such of the natural sciences as may be demanded. All pupils have the advantages of drawing and vocal music without extra charge. The present term will close the week before Christmas, with an entertainment given for the benefit of the library fund. This entertainment will be given on Thursday evening, December 22. It will be amusing, instructive and artistic. Further announcement will be made.

HIGHER EDUCATION, BY J. O. LAWRENCE.
Our academy—we say "our academy" because we are all interested in its success. While this much needed opportunity to give our youth a higher education at a cost within the reach of those of limited means was denied us until the last year, now that it is to be had at our very doors, none who feel its need should fail to take advantage of it.

May a boy or girl has been deprived of a higher education than they otherwise would have been, because the dangers that are thrown around them when away from parental care and restraint were too great when sent to distant schools.

The Ahtanum academy is near enough to railroad and city privileges for convenience, and far enough away to secure to the students the influence of a quiet and pleasant place for study.

Professor Heiney, who is at the head of the institution, is a man of learning and wide experience. He is ably assisted by his accomplished wife. Mrs. Stair, who has long been acknowledged as one of the best teachers of central Washington, is also one of the instructors. In fact nothing has been left undone that could be done, which she means at hand would be justified, to make it a first class institution of its kind.

The attendance for the first three months has been good, and the students have made rapid advancement. There are boys and girls enough residing in the county who are not attending school anywhere to double the present attendance. It is hoped that every one interested—and that should be every resident of the county—will lend a helping hand to this young and deserving institution.

ADVERTISEMENTS A SOURCE OF EDUCATION

Gladstone Always Studied the Announcement Pages of American Magazines.

In a recent interview Mr. Gladstone stated that after looking through an American magazine he always studied the advertising pages, thereby gaining an opinion of our commercial as well as our literary ingenuity. This system of the great liberal leader may seem tedious to many people who do not possess his assiduity in acquiring information. Yet there is a certain variety of interest in advertisements that will repay the attention of even the busiest mind. The method of making these public announcements is a business by itself. Clever writers who have a special talent for catching the fancy of customers are employed in it. These anonymous authors frequently earn larger incomes than novelists whose works are well known. They devote their skill to putting much matter in a little space. Their efforts are brief and pithy as proverbs, avoiding all redundancy of rhetoric and arriving at the gist of the argument without preface or apology.

People who are wearied of politics and have no further taste for news can derive a curious and instructive enjoyment in considering the announcements of those who have something to sell to their neighbors. In this way much information may be had of topics with which we are unacquainted. Advertisements are the intercourse between the employers and employees, between the shops and society, between folks who want to earn money and those who wish to spend it. That beneficent theory of government which declares us all free and equal is excellently maintained by the advertisers.

The poor man and the rich, the famous and the obscure, are placed on a level in the republic of letters.

But the most remarkable benefit of advertisements to the general public consists in their function as a universal encyclopedia, a catalogue, a hand book, an index, a summary, a complete and unobtrusive dictionary of all the woes and blessings that flesh is heir to. If a man has stains on his clothes or his reputation, pains in his head or his heels; if he wants to learn anything or teach anything, this is the fountain head to which he must go. There is little of benefit to humanity which is not offered in the advertisement. The necessities of everybody are considered in them.

A NEGRO MURDERER'S RETURN TO EARTH.
Brooks, the Spokane Mayor, stands on the scaffold on which He Was Hung.

Spokane Chronicle: Charles Brooks, the colored man who departed this life several months ago in the jail yard, has made his second appearance on earth, if the statements of some of the clerks in the auditor's office are to be credited. The resurrection of Brooks is the talk of the courthouse officials to-day. For some days past the clerks who have been getting out the tax rolls have been engaged nights as well as days.

A. C. Hansen was at work all of last night upon these documents. During the midnight vigil Hansen had occasion to leave the office for a few moments. It was during this brief respite from labor that the Brooks manifestation became visible to him. Perched upon the apex of the scaffold, which still adorns the jail yard, was the figure of a dusky man. Hansen rubbed his eyes and looked again. Sure enough, a figure sat perched on the scaffold, coal black eyes darted fiery glances in his direction, and Hansen's scalp began to quiver and his hair stood on end. He could scarcely move, through fright.

The next instant the figure raised its thin sinewy hands to its throat, as if to relieve itself from choking. Hansen could stand it no longer and he appealed for assistance.

Another gentleman responded, and he, too, stood transfixed with awe at the strange apparition.

The spook changed its hue from black to brown, and a pale light darted from its finger tips. Its motion became irregular, and a dancin' motion supervened. Evidently it was glad at the sight of its visitors. Not so with the tax roll clerks. The perspiration oozed from every pore in their bodies as they stood speechless. Neither of the gentlemen could be induced to leave the office again until day-break, and now their fellow clerks claim that these manifestations were only the primary symptoms of gold cure patients. This they stoutly deny.

THE BEST OF LIFE.

The principal difference between man and animal is in the brain. Whether it be gray matter or white matter; whether it be urged to action from the heart or from the mind direct—Marsia like—is not a question of importance. The best part of life is what we think about it; the best part of any man or woman to those with whom he or she may come in contact, is the mind; and how many of us who are mature regret that there could not have been more cultivation—more education in our own cases. It is with most of us a question of opportunity, and generally those in the lower parts of the country have been without opportunity. Washington is, indeed, one of the first states to come into the Union with full educational advantages. The best buildings in the new state are the school buildings. Here in Yakima two fine brick structures afford graded schools, while, apart from the public schools about the county, and the parochial schools in town, there is the Athlone academy offering special courses of study and the best of opportunity for a higher education. No one can so well appreciate the advantages of a higher education as he who has worked by himself along the road, with glimpses of what might have been under proper instruction, and it is safe to assume that not one American in ten can be found who does not want to give his boy or girl a better chance in life, so far as mental cultivation goes, than he had himself. It seems, sometimes, as though the higher education were almost necessary to make the common school part of it fully available to the best minds, for the reason that the broadening matter at the top always reaches outside the text books. There is care and thought in it above and beyond the routine of the graduated class room which teaches how to make the most of all the best that may be had in these later days. Nothing is despised that contributes to the fullest knowledge. The absolute good in life never comes in separate and special packages, and now, as in the time of the Caliph of Bagdad, it is he who has the discrimination to find it in whatever guise, who takes it to himself for the uses of life.

Not long ago there was a half dozen county teachers in a public room in North Yakima, gossiping over their coffee, and the talk turned upon the morning's work at the institute. A little miss, barely mature enough to hold a certificate for the lowest grade, perky remarked that "the Professor" spoke her mind exactly when he advised them all not to read the daily papers. Then they all chimed in with complimentary remarks, and proceeded to mentally turn up their noses at newspaper reading generally. One unheeded listener to that conversation, who had two sisters teaching in the eastern states, and who had missed much in his life by reason of insufficient schooling, piled their narrow views. As though information, coming to the human mind through the regular channels of the senses, should be discriminated against because it is in a newspaper instead of in a book! Give us an education high enough to prepare the mind to receive its messages from wherever they may come; and an education untrammelled enough to leave the mind pure enough and strong enough to discriminate for itself and retain the useful. The time has been, but will never come again, when the information that impinges upon every human life will not be brought in the newspaper, and an education that includes a contempt for what comes through these sources will never carry a man or a woman far toward human wisdom. Wisdom lies at the end of the path along which education leads us, however the education may be obtained, and to know this is to understand the value of the fullest and best that may be had. There is ever a generation ripening to maturity, and with the opportunities at hand, and increasing all about us, there is no reason why our new state should not be as much the seat of learning as Boston or Athens or Alexandria; and it may be that our own county will yet be the center of it all. The more academies the better, and the more they teach the better; but let the fear of information be nowhere taught. That idea belongs to the dark ages.

Are You Interested? The American Builder, established 1885, beginning with January, 1893, will publish a complete set of house plans, drawn to scale 1/4 inch to the foot, with each monthly issue. The subscription price has heretofore been $1, but, as free trade is the cry, they have decided to make a great free trade offer for December. Anybody sending 25 cents in stamps or silver during December gets the journal one year. After the 31st of December the price will be 50 cents per annum. Its established high grade will be maintained. REPRISES FROM ZILLAH. A. C. Walker is up from Zillah this week, where his duties as postmaster are not especially confining, and brings the following brief items of news:

R. K. Hatch & Son are just completing a three story addition to their hotel.

The postoffice has been removed from the headquarters building to the store of Harvey & Jaeger.

The work of excavating for the new $10,000 hotel to be erected by the company, is being diligently prosecuted.

The N. F., Y. & K. I. Co. is now selling land beyond the completed portion of the canal, notably east of Salpea mountain, in the Wristen flats.

A new bridge has been built across the slough of the Yakima, near Zillah, to replace the one washed out during the recent high water. There is now uninterrupted connection with Toppenish.

The work of clearing the land for the state experimental station, to be located one-half mile from Zillah, is being pushed. Within a radius of a mile from Zillah several large outfits are engaged in clearing land, and the aspect of the country is changing very materially.

Any one who appreciates a nice line of plain and embroidered silk handkerchiefs will do well to call at Ditters and see his line. They are cheaper than can be bought elsewhere.

IS WOMAN'S SPHERE CHANGING?

This has been a memorable year for women who aspire to the liberties and privileges accorded man. In Montana a woman has been elected attorney general; in several states, including Washington, women have been chosen for school superintendents; and sheriffs and justices of the peace have been carved from the same class of timber, which has heretofore been looked upon as more sensitive than the aspen and more pliable than the willow. It is natural for women to guide the steps of youth, and this has been in the course of their education, so that the transition from home and nursing to the school room, and even to the position of director of instructors, is not so great; but beyond this the invasion of the field, which has heretofore been looked upon as exclusively the realm of the male, will be closely watched, and no doubt with jealous eyes.

Woman is supposed to be more imaginative, more sensitive, more appreciative of moral virtues, and quicker in her intuitions and perceptions than man, but not so well adapted to the details of business, nor so logical and argumentative. It is the latter qualifications, however, and not the former that are required in the make up of the successful jurist or one who would plead the cold, hard facts of state against the malefactor, and unwind the intricate strings of legal entanglements. Against the generalizations of woman's lack of logic and that her only sphere is the hearthstone, is brought the fact that she has already, in a number of instances, shown her ability and power at the bar, and if she can be a lawyer why not an attorney or a judge?

Another novel departure, and one which indicates that woman may yet come prominently to the fore in public life, is the candidacy of Mrs. Mary E. Lease to represent the people's party of Kansas in the United States senate. A few months ago the advancement of such a thought would have been almost sufficient cause to have brought its advocate to the portals of the asylum for insane, and while still it is the occasion for jokes and jests of newspaper paragraphs, there is no question but what it is being earnestly considered by many, and is even received with favor by some of the legislators of the state that has given us an Ingalls, a Peffer and a Stockless Simpson. Mrs. Lease is not a lawyer, but an orator capable of piquant and picturesque flights of word painting, and as one of the principal missionaries of the populist cause, who has experienced the martyrdom of stale eggs in Georgia, and of death's head notices in Tennessee, she is certainly entitled to the best gifts of her party if there is anything tangible in the theory of the victors belong the spoils.

Tux Toledo Bee gets the right note from the tuning fork when it says that Mrs. Calamity Lease and Whiskers Peffer as senators from bleeding Kansas, would be a sight calculated to show the possibilities of this great country of ours, if nothing else.

The Ruby Miner, a two-year-old newspaper of Okanogan county, has faded, flickered and finally expired; but, undismayed by the frequent failures throughout the state, newspapers are constantly being started by adventurous spirits, whose facile fancies flare up fancy profits which as rapidly disappear under the cool, hard facts of experience. Few newspapers attain a supporting basis, and still less are published at a gain; but while the proportion of failures as compared with other business ventures is transcendently large, it is greatly less than the number of those who are confident that they could float a paper into public favor and financial success without half an effort.

HAPPENINGS OF STATE AND NATION.

The Most Important News of the Day Boiled Down for the "Herald" Readers.

George Washington Childs' Philadelphia Ledger building was destroyed by fire on Monday. Loss, $200,000.

Silver has taken a decided fall, owing to the disagreement of the Brussels monetary conference. Rothschilds has withdrawn his plan for the purchase of silver, and nothing has as yet been offered in its place.

Jay Gould, the great railroad wrecker, Wall street broker, promoter of Black Friday, and financier, died at his home in New York, December 2, of pulmonary consumption, at the age of 56. He was reputed to be worth $120,000,000, but his affairs were in such a shape that his death had little effect on the markets.

Congress convened at the capitol on Tuesday, and the president's message and the department reports were read on the following day. The message was rather an unimportant affair, and little attention was paid to it by congress. It was notable mainly for advocacy of force election measures in the south, and the advice to leave the tariff for the congress elect. Mr. Wannamaker recommended one cent postage and the extension of the free delivery system.

Thomas Henderson Boyd, the editor of the Olympia Olympian, was shot and killed at Seattle, on Friday, December 22, by his putative wife, who had formerly been a woman of the town, and was known in the coast cities as Gypsy Ashton. Boyd was a well known politician, and had been a newspaper correspondent at the state capitol during several sessions of the state legislature. His marriage with the Ashton woman, if it ever occurred, was kept a secret. The murder was the result of a quarrel in which Boyd is said to have taunted his wife with her past life. The murderer is in jail.

The yield of D. E. Lesh's orchard this year was 25.0 boxes of peaches and 20.0 boxes of apples. A box of apples is supposed to be a bushel, or 48 pounds, but they must be packed closely to reach this well.

Rev. C. R. Thorburn, A. M., who was born in India, and who is a son of the celebrated Bishop Thorburn, of Calcutta, will lecture at the M. E. church Saturday evening, December 10th, taking for a subject "An Hour in Rome." An interesting and profitable evening is promised all who attend.

The demand for coal has warranted the N. P. coal company to reopen mine No. 3, and Roslyn is again anticipating a return of her days of prosperity. The payroll of the company last month footed up $54,000, and it is expected that the high water mark of $85,000 per month will be reached before the winter is over.

C. H. Leadbetter returned this week from the Sound, where he ordered 5000 feet of five-foot steel pipe, which will carry the water of his irrigating canal from the high lands below Kiona across the Yakima river to water the lands on the other side. This canal, which will be finished by March 1st, will be 4 1/2 miles long and will reclaim 40,000 acres.

Goldendale Courier: The artesian well that is being bored in this city is now down about 85 feet. It will be a great event for this valley should Messrs. Johnson & Vanhook strike water as has been done over in Yakima county. There is a well over there 334 feet deep that is said to give a flow of 250 feet of water per minute. Our citizens should get in and help our boys out in this place.

Attorney H. J. Snively returned from Ellensburg on Saturday last and reported that Zachery and Humphrey, the two men arrested on the Colville reservation for complicity in the Roslyn bank robbery, had been discharged, as the witnesses failed to identify them. The statement that Mr. Snively had been retained for the defense of the prisoners was an error and grew out of a telegraphic application from Portland asking him to take their cases; but as he had previously been retained for the prosecution by the state banker's association, he of course had to decline. Vigorous efforts are still being made to catch the other three men who were implicated in the robbery, and Cashier F. A. Abernethy was in the city Monday on a fruitless errand, having been summoned here for the purpose of identifying a suspect.

Don't forget the play Saturday evening. Secure your seats at once.

Merchants of this city have contributed prizes to the value of $150, which will be awarded for skill in dancing, carrying out of characters, and for novel and handsome costumes. Owing to the expense which a special election would entail upon the city, it is understood that Mayor Weed and Councilmen Schorn and Carpenter have reconsidered their intention of resigning, and it is now proposed to retain the city government intact and have the board elect one of their number for acting mayor during Mr. Snively's absence at Olympia. This decision appears to meet the general approbation of the taxpayers.

H. L. Tucker had a narrow escape from death on Saturday last while putting D. E. Lesh's horse in a stall with another animal. As Mr. Tucker was passing behind the horse one of them kicked up and planted both feet on Mr. Tucker's chest in the vicinity of the heart. He was knocked senseless, and it is not known how long he laid in that condition, as his men were in the loft, and the first intimation they had of the accident was through hearing a groan as Mr. Tucker was reviving. He was carried to his residence and Dr. Hill summoned, who pronounced the call a close one. Mr. Tucker is now able to sit up, but is still suffering from his injuries.

YAKIMA FAVORED BY NOTED GUESTS.

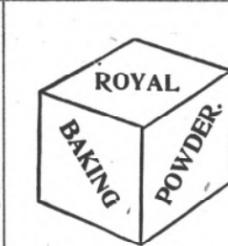

Major Powell and Hon. Gardner G. Hubbard delivered entertaining lectures to select audiences.

Major Powell, director of the U. S. geologic surveys, and Hon. Gardner G. Hubbard, president of the National Geographic Society, who have been spending the past week on the Moxee, the guests of Mr. William Ker, have contributed much to the entertainment and enlightenment of our citizens during their stay here. As outlined in THE HERALD of last week, they were waited upon by a committee of leading citizens, and both kindly acceded to the requests for a lecture Monday night was the time chosen by Major Powell, and Mason's opera house was filled with an audience who closely followed every utterance of the speaker as he told of his memorable exploration and trip through the canyon of the Colorado river. While Major Powell can hardly be classed as an orator, he has a genius for description and delineation which left outlined in the memories of his hearers a complete picture of the wonderful country through which he journeyed. Some of his word paintings were especially striking, notably that of one of his men, Bradley by name, who in his boat was anchored by line at the head of fearful rapids, and while his companions were thousands of feet above him on the canyon walls, endeavoring to learn of the course ahead, and not being able to hear or understand their signals, pulled his sheath knife, as the prow of his boat swung into the channel, and cutting the rope cast loose into the mad-to-rent to be sent away down the river waving his hat as a sign of his success. Again, when all was gloomy and nothing but breakers appeared ahead, the agony he endured when three of his companions deserted him to endeavor to make a Mo-moon settlement, 80 miles overland, and, as was afterwards learned, only to fall a prey to the knives of the Indians. At this time the balance of Major Powell's party were following in their boats, and he did not know but what they, too, would determine upon the same course and force him to abandon the completion of the journey to the outlet at the gulf of California, upon which he had set his whole heart and had been years in preparing to make. Throughout the entire narrative his audience complimented him, and showed their interest and appreciation by giving earnest attention, and there were none who followed him but what were well entertained.

One hundred handsome invitations were sent out for Hon. Gardner Greene Hubbard's lecture on the discovery of America, which was given in the reception room of the Yakima club Wednesday evening, and the large number of ladies and gentlemen present had every reason to congratulate themselves on the entertainment afforded. Mr. Hubbard, who was introduced by Mr. Ker in a few well chosen sentences, is both a ready talker and had a great fund of information at his command. He first treated of the claims of the Norsemen to be the discoverers of America, and how Leif Ericsson and his band of adventurous rovers had sailed over the ocean in their Viking ships and made settlement at Massachusetts bay and landed on "Vineland," with the sole object of securing wood for their northern colony, and that no important results followed these visits. The veil that hid the New World was only lifted for an instant at one corner, and it was reserved for Columbus, the Genoese, to make the existence of America known to the monarchs and scholars of Europe hundreds of years afterwards. Mr. Hubbard furnished much information on his subject, which was new to most of those present, and he closed with a statement that Washington's state building at the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago was one of the most notable and attractive structures there.

At the close of Mr. Hubbard's address, Mr. Edward Whitson arose and, after complimenting the speaker on his lecture and as one of the pioneers in the irrigation development of this county, proposed a vote of thanks, which sentiment was heartily applauded.

Mr. Hubbard then voiced the desire of those present by calling upon Major Powell to speak of the Yakima country, which, although taken entirely by surprise, he did in a manner that made all his hearers feel proud and thankful that their lot was cast within such pleasant and fruitful lines. His remarks on Yakima were mainly as to its possibilities from irrigation, and he said in effect that he had visited all of the main valleys of the arid region and that none of them offered so good opportunities for reclaiming land so easily and cheaply as this; that the countries watered artificially were calculated to sustain a much denser population than the humid regions, and that he knew of no section of the country capable of supporting a greater population than this in an equal area. He said that the storage system was one which must be largely relied upon, and that in this respect the Yakima valley was only second to the valley of the Snake river, which was first. As to the science of irrigation, he said it was not new; that while two-fifths of the United States was an arid region and three-fifths humid, that three-fifths of the agricultural crops of the world were grown by irrigation, and that irrigation was the birthplace of civilization; that when the implements of the husbandman were made of stone or were otherwise crude, that it was easier to cultivate the soil in an arid region, which was not obstructed by tree growth and rank vegetation, and that when the natural resources of forest and stream were abandoned to seek provender from the soil, then and there was the beginning of civilization; and that while the humid lands of this country were first brought under cultivation, he expected to see the densest population and the seat

LOCATION OF THE PYTHIAN HOME.

Yakima Will Endeavor to Secure This Important Beneficiary Institution.

The importance of the session of the Grand Lodge, Knights of Pythias, which will be held in this city in May of the coming year, does not seem to be fully appreciated, and too much interest and energy cannot be displayed in arranging for the care and entertainment of the great throng who will be the guests of North Yakima for several days. Past Grand Chancellor Harry W. Smith, of Spokane, was in the city on Friday last week, and at an informal meeting of a few leading citizens he explained that at the coming session of the Grand Lodge the location of the Pythian home would be determined upon. Several cities, including Tacoma, Seattle, Spokane, Ellensburg, Colfax and Pullman, will endeavor to secure this institution, upon the construction of which from six to ten thousand dollars will be expended the first year. The home will be a credit architecturally to the section in which it is located, and its maintenance will furnish a market to the producers and a continual source of revenue to the merchants. The importance of securing this institution for Yakima was impressed upon the citizens who listened to Mr. Smith, and an effort will be made to provide a land bonus of twenty acres, near this city, to induce the lodge to locate the home here. The coming session of the Grand Lodge will be the largest in the history of the state. There will be not less than fifteen hundred delegates here, including two hundred delegates, both regiments of the Uniform Rank of Knights of Pythias, numbering four hundred Sir Knights, and the First Regiment band of Seattle. These, with the detached Knights who will be present, and family members of the visiting delegations, will tax North Yakima's hospitality to the utmost, and preparations for the reception and entertainment cannot be initiated any too soon.

of the highest civilization in the arid regions west of the Rockies. With Yakima he was greatly impressed, for in climate it was like some parts of England and France, and owing to the break in the Cascade range at the Columbia river, which permitted the diffusion of the warm winds of the Pacific over this country, the result was a semi-tropic valley in a sub-arctic region.

A marriage license was issued December 31 to Edward Campbell and Miss Eva L. Cleveland.

County Clerk-elect J. M. Brown arrived from Prosser Tuesday. He walks with some difficulty, owing to a cut in the knee, which he inflicted upon himself while butchering. 'Tis to be hoped that he will be mightier with the pen than he is with the meat knife, at least more proficient.

Clarence B. Ide, who spent a couple of years in Yakima during the days of the Northern Pacific construction and the building of this city, is here to-day. Mr. Ide is a member of the coming legislature from Spokane, and has a warm spot in his heart for Yakima; in fact he, with a number of other citizens of Spokane, propose to purchase and improve a large body of fruit and hop land in this county.

John Stone reports that while he was on the Sound recently a management was made for two important rocking machines, one to be fought at Puyallup on the 10th and the other at Yakima on the 15th of January. The principals in making the match are not desirous of having their names mentioned, but one of them is a prominent attorney of Seattle, and the mains will be for $1,000 a side each. Thirty bids will be used in each main.

From present indications the attendance at the production of "The Exile" at Mason's opera house Saturday evening will be even larger than at the last successful entertainment of the amateurs. Mr. Kelly informs THE HERALD that "The Exile" is a much stronger play and that the cast is unusually strong. Judging from the production of the "Tramp's Daughter," and Mr. Kelly's confidence in the present cast, the performance promises to be superior to those given by most traveling companies.

Mr. William Ker has resigned the presidency and management of the extensive interests of the Moxee company, to take effect on January 1st, and will be succeeded by D. E. Lesh. Mr. Ker's resignation has long been before the board of directors, but he was persuaded to remain in charge until the beginning of the coming year, and Mr. Hubbard's recent visit to Yakima was for the purpose of selecting his successor. The selection of Mr. Lesh is a glowing tribute to his worth and executive ability. So high is his appreciation of the worth of Mr. Ker, and the great benefit which he has been to Yakima as a progressive and public-spirited citizen, that his acceptance of this important trust was only made on the assurance that Mr. Ker's resignation was fully determined upon and was final.

Col. W. F. Prosser entertained the Hon. Gardner G. Hubbard, Major Powell, H. J. Snively, F. R. Reed, J. T. Eshelman and A. E. Weed at dinner Monday evening. On this occasion Major Powell permitted himself to be drawn out regarding Yakima, and said that he believed it would become the richest, most beautiful and prosperous section of the northwest; that the Yakima river was a great stream, and that for practical irrigation, cheaply applied, it was the best river he knew of. When asked which should own the arid lands—state or nation? he replied that he believed they should be given to irrigation districts. For instance, that there should be a district of Yakima organized, and that all the lands, both wooded and desert, within the area of that district should be granted to it by the government; that with regard to timber land, the district could best look to its protection, whereas if it was sold to milling companies and other corporations the lands would soon be denuded of timber, the snow fall could not be retained any length of time, and the water supply lessened.

The importance of the session of the Grand Lodge, Knights of Pythias, which will be held in this city in May of the coming year, does not seem to be fully appreciated, and too much interest and energy cannot be displayed in arranging for the care and entertainment of the great throng who will be the guests of North Yakima for several days. Past Grand Chancellor Harry W. Smith, of Spokane, was in the city on Friday last week, and at an informal meeting of a few leading citizens he explained that at the coming session of the Grand Lodge the location of the Pythian home would be determined upon. Several cities, including Tacoma, Seattle, Spokane, Ellensburg, Colfax and Pullman, will endeavor to secure this institution, upon the construction of which from six to ten thousand dollars will be expended the first year. The home will be a credit architecturally to the section in which it is located, and its maintenance will furnish a market to the producers and a continual source of revenue to the merchants. The importance of securing this institution for Yakima was impressed upon the citizens who listened to Mr. Smith, and an effort will be made to provide a land bonus of twenty acres, near this city, to induce the lodge to locate the home here. The coming session of the Grand Lodge will be the largest in the history of the state. There will be not less than fifteen hundred delegates here, including two hundred delegates, both regiments of the Uniform Rank of Knights of Pythias, numbering four hundred Sir Knights, and the First Regiment band of Seattle. These, with the detached Knights who will be present, and family members of the visiting delegations, will tax North Yakima's hospitality to the utmost, and preparations for the reception and entertainment cannot be initiated any too soon.

State Inspector Jesse has been condemning several thousand young apple trees which have lately been shipped from Missouri and Nebraska to eastern Washington. THE HERALD has received the seventh biennial report of the superintendent of public instruction for this state, which is very complete with statistical information regarding educational matters of Washington. There are illustrations of eighteen of the finest schoolhouses, including the Columbia and Central schools of North Yakima.

A newspaper called The Lumberman, has been gathering statistics of the standing timber of this state, and finds that there are two hundred and fourteen billion feet, with Snohomish, Whatcom, Mason and Asotin counties yet to hear from. As a comparative statement Michigan has only twenty-four billion feet of standing timber, and nine southern states two hundred billion.

There is more joy in a printing office, truly says an exchange, over one sinner who pays in advance and abuses the editor on every occasion, than over ninety and nine who borrow the paper and sing its praises without contributing a cent to keep it out of the poorhouse. Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth and obtain material for fencing it on time and without security.

According to the official returns McGraw carried 13 and Snively 6 counties in western Washington. Each carried 7 counties in eastern Washington. McGraw had 1,460 more votes in eastern Washington and 2,013 more in western Washington than Snively. The total vote of eastern Washington was 22,547; western Washington 66,787, a total in the state of 89,334, which shows a population of nearly 450,000. Outside of King county Snively received a plurality of 227. Young's vote was 23,639 and Roger A. Greene's 3,823.

Anson Henderson, brother of "Bogus" Henderson, is now under sentence of death at Oregon City. The Golden-dale Sentinel says "no earthly power" can intervene to save the unfortunate young man. A fair and impartial trial resulted in a verdict of murder in the first degree, and the penalty thereof is death. In his sad case is another example of the evils that result from the use of strong drink. The number of young men who are yearly going to wreck through the evils of intemperance are too many, and it is evident that something must be done to call a halt. It is quite likely that had Mr. Henderson never been tainted in any way with strong drink he would have been a useful man. It is hoped that his fate will turn some erring young man into the path of honor.

The correctness of the maxim "nothing succeeds like success," is well exemplified in Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The most successful combination of alteratives and tonics, it always succeeds in curing diseases of the blood, and hence its wonderful notoriety.

No better preparation for the hair has ever been invented than Ayer's Hair Vigor. It restores the original color to faded and gray hair, and imparts that natural gloss and freshness every one so much admires. Its reputation is world-wide.

A HERO FROM ERIN.

THE BATTLE RECORD OF GEN. THOMAS W. SWEENEY.

How an Irish Peasant Boy Became an American General—Daring Deeds in Mexico, on the Plains and in the War for the Union.

(Copyright, 1892, by American Press Association. Book rights reserved.)

BOY in his teens putting on soldier's harness and learning to keep step in a city training company; a one armed general leading a Union division into the breach before Atlanta to buffet the fierce Confederate foe; and one day—the one the dawn, the other the climax of an Irish exile's career. The pathway between was not all untried there would be no romance to follow, and of course was not all veiled in clouds.

General Sweeney landed in New York in the spring of 1864. In a family of exiles from the famine stricken island, and after a few years of study in the public schools took up the printer's trade. Those were the days of general training, when the national militia made some show of keeping the law, and every large city boasted numerous companies of organized soldiery. Sweeney enrolled himself in a band known as the "Baxter Blues," and proved so good a soldier that at the beginning of the Mexican war he was elected a lieutenant in the Second New York volunteers. That regiment marched and fought with Scott from Vera Cruz to the City of Mexico, and Sweeney was in every battle up to Chapultepec. He was wounded there in the fierce attack led by Gen. Shields against the flank of Santa Anna's army while the regulars stormed the position in front. The Mexicans fled in confusion with unusual desperation in order to save their main line from a foe in the rear.

The New Yorkers made a brilliant charge, lost heavily and came out covered with glory. Sweeney's right arm was shattered above the elbow and was amputated at the shoulder. On his arrival in New York he was given a public reception at Castle Garden theater, then the arena for great ceremonies in the city, and was loaded with honors. Of course the hand buried at Chapultepec could no longer stick type, and Uncle Sam kindly recognized the hero still behind that empty sleeve with a commission in the regular army.

There was work in those days for the regulars in making the far, far west habitable for the venturesome white man, and Sweeney's regiment—the Second Infantry—was in the California gold fields almost as soon as a pick was struck in the yellow earth in 1849. The regiment was on the Colorado a couple of years and built Fort Yuma, a government against the Coyote and Yuma Indians, who kept the warpath constantly, capturing and distressing the settlers, if they did not do worse. In the summer of 1851 the Indians got between the fort and the military post at San Diego, and the garrison was cut off from supplies. The commander saw no way out but to fall back to San Diego, but didn't intend to give up the fort to the redskins. Sweeney was a sergeant in one of the companies, and with a detachment of ten men was left to hold the fort until the main body could march to San Diego and bring back help and material.

The retreat was followed up by Indians, and shortly the country between Fort Yuma and San Diego swarmed with hostiles. Sweeney's band was under siege from June 2 to Dec. 6, and would have been out until promised help came or starvation or massacre overtook them but for the timely arrival of a force of soldiers from a quarter unsuspected by the besiegers. A government exploring expedition under military escort happened at the time to be at work on Colorado river remote from the scene of trouble, and on giving up their searches for the winter retreated to the military post at San Diego, and the two parties united made their way to the military posts in spite of the red skins.

The exploit put Sweeney's name a peg higher at the war office, and in 1861 he was captain of his company. In April he was assigned to duty at the St. Louis arsenal under a quartermaster general, who was in charge of the arsenal and provisions. During the excitement following Sumter the seceders of the state tried to get possession of the arsenal, and the two parties united made their way to the military posts in spite of the red skins.

After the battle Gen. Sweeney made a fiery protest against the army and went out beyond the new left flank to find a brigade that he had hastily ordered there in support of Sweeney. He unwittingly rode into the enemy's lines and was shot through a noble sacrifice for the army and the nation and a personal loss to Gen. Sweeney at the time. In the excitement of the hour the general commanding the Sixteenth corps sent up to Sweeney's line and peremptorily directed the several regiments and detachments, but always successfully, capturing cannon, flags and prisoners.

The wife of General Hancock declared that the latter went to bed at 7 o'clock on the evening of election day, 1880, being too tired to await news. Next morning he awoke at dawn and asked if there was any definite tidings. Upon her reply, "Yes, you are beaten," he turned over and went to sleep again.

Here is one of the several statements made on the origin of the very common custom of "drinking healths." In the days when the Danes lorded it in England they had a very common habit of stabbing Englishmen in the throat when drinking. To avoid this villainy, a man when drinking would ask some of the set to take by his pledge or surety while talking his draft. Hence the custom.

A watchmaker in Newcastle, England, recently completed a set of three gold shirt studs, the second of which contains a hair having a dial, which is only a few-sixteenths of an inch in diameter. The three studs, placed in a shirt front, are connected from behind by a delicate silver tube containing winding and setting mechanism. To wind the watch it is necessary to turn the upper stud, and to adjust the hands the lower stud is turned.

The Jewish population of America now numbers more than a million. At no time in their history, not even immediately after they had taken possession of the "promised land," were the Jews more prosperous than they are to-day in America. All efforts, therefore, to attract them to Palestine seem to be futile. The Jewish Tidings, in speaking of this matter, says: "The conditions in this country will have to change mightily before the Jews will forsake it for the land of the prophets."

The little daughter who was just born to the emperor and empress of Germany—the first female child born in the Imperial palace of Berlin since Queen Louise, during the past century, gave birth to a daughter, the great aunt of Emperor William I. All the daughters of the house of Hohenzollern born since that day were not privileged to see the light of day within the historical walls of the Berlin palace until in the present case the record was broken for the first time within a century.

A Bread Superstition. There is a usage, general in France, that bread before being cut must be marked with the sign of the cross. The neglect of so marking the bread is supposed to invite misfortune. In fact, to keep on bread is a blame-worthy act. It is a common superstition that the falling of a piece of bread on the buttered side is fatal to luck.—Philadelphia Ledger.

To Whiten the Hands. Melt a pound of white castile soap over the fire with a little water. When melted perfume slightly with any one of the extracts, and stir in half a cupful of common oatmeal. Use this preparation when washing your hands and you will be surprised at the improvement in their appearance.—New York Journal.

Workingmen Will Vote Against It. Memory cannot be destroyed by protection monopolists. The right to use the ballot cannot be taken away. The men who are now in the position of the under dog will not forget, they will vote intelligently. In the days when the Danes lorded it in England they had a very common habit of stabbing Englishmen in the throat when drinking. To avoid this villainy, a man when drinking would ask some of the set to take by his pledge or surety while talking his draft. Hence the custom.

A watchmaker in Newcastle, England, recently completed a set of three gold shirt studs, the second of which contains a hair having a dial, which is only a few-sixteenths of an inch in diameter. The three studs, placed in a shirt front, are connected from behind by a delicate silver tube containing winding and setting mechanism. To wind the watch it is necessary to turn the upper stud, and to adjust the hands the lower stud is turned.

The Jewish population of America now numbers more than a million. At no time in their history, not even immediately after they had taken possession of the "promised land," were the Jews more prosperous than they are to-day in America. All efforts, therefore, to attract them to Palestine seem to be futile. The Jewish Tidings, in speaking of this matter, says: "The conditions in this country will have to change mightily before the Jews will forsake it for the land of the prophets."

The little daughter who was just born to the emperor and empress of Germany—the first female child born in the Imperial palace of Berlin since Queen Louise, during the past century, gave birth to a daughter, the great aunt of Emperor William I. All the daughters of the house of Hohenzollern born since that day were not privileged to see the light of day within the historical walls of the Berlin palace until in the present case the record was broken for the first time within a century.

A Bread Superstition. There is a usage, general in France, that bread before being cut must be marked with the sign of the cross. The neglect of so marking the bread is supposed to invite misfortune. In fact, to keep on bread is a blame-worthy act. It is a common superstition that the falling of a piece of bread on the buttered side is fatal to luck.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The task, which has passed into proverb as the best material for shipbuilding, is superior to all other woods from the fact that it contains an essential oil which prevents spikes and nails driven into it from rusting.

To Clean Chamol's Skin. Chamol's may be cleaned in a weak solution of soda in warm water. Rub plenty of soft soap into the leather and allow it to soak for two hours. Then rub it well till it is quite clean and rinse it well in a weak solution composed of soda, yellow soap and warm water. If rinsed in water only it becomes hard when dry.

To Whiten the Hands. Melt a pound of white castile soap over the fire with a little water. When melted perfume slightly with any one of the extracts, and stir in half a cupful of common oatmeal. Use this preparation when washing your hands and you will be surprised at the improvement in their appearance.—New York Journal.

Workingmen Will Vote Against It. Memory cannot be destroyed by protection monopolists. The right to use the ballot cannot be taken away. The men who are now in the position of the under dog will not forget, they will vote intelligently. Who can doubt that they will vote against a system which favors capitalistic combinations and upholds their efforts to crush the organizations formed by laboring men for the protection of themselves and their families.—Buffalo Reformer.
